Reunion @ Homecoming

Remember how running the campus looks in the midst of peak fall foliage? Come back for Reunion @ Homecoming on October 16-18 and be the envy of your friends when you peer at the striking colors of autumn at Bryant to Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter. Be one of the more than 3,000 alumni who will reconnect with old friends—and make new ones—at Bryant’s largest on-campus annual celebration.

While you will recognize some of the regular reunion activities, you’ll also notice some changes. “In the midst of Expanding the World of Opportunity: The Campaign for Bryant’s Bold Future, we are experiencing space shortages due to construction,” says Robin Torbron Ward, director of alumni engagement. “We’re also responding to feedback from alumni to improve their experiences.”

(See the full schedule in the center spread of this publication.)

Alumni Engagement is kicking off Reunion @ Homecoming weekend with alumni golf outings at Crystal Lake in Burrellsville at noon followed by a Welcome Reception and Microbrew Beer Tasting in the Rotunda from 6 to 9 p.m. Head out at 9 to join the Pep Rally at the Bonzini around the pond, and check out the spectacular fireworks display. Saturday on campus will be busy—and crowded because of construction. Take the shuttle from the hotels and relax all day. For added convenience, the shuttles will stop at Parent’s and The Last Resort (formerly Effin’s) from 8 p.m. to closing.

While the Loyalty Guard Reunion took place in June, those who graduated in 1965 or earlier are encouraged to enjoy Reunion @ Homecoming as well. All class years can register now by going to www.bryant.edu/reunion, or calling (401) 232-6040.

Bryant builds its bold future

Launched at a May 13 groundbreaking event, Bryant Builds will create what President Ronald K. Machleit calls “dynamic new facilities for the next generation of innovative leaders.”

Bryant Builds is financed by record philanthropy supporting the University’s most ambitious fundraising effort in Bryant’s 129-year history: Expanding the World of Opportunity: The Campaign for Bryant’s Bold Future.

Projects currently underway include:

- A new entrance, integrated landscape, and point of arrival designed to enhance access to facilities on Bryant’s new 450-acre contemporary campus in Smithfield;
- The Academic Innovation Center, where innovative learning will be fostered in a creative environment designed for a new generation of pedagogy in both Bryant’s College of Business and College of Arts and Sciences;
- The Indoor Practice Facility, featuring a state-of-the-art 75,000-square-foot indoor turf field with a full 100 yards of turf. Bryant will be the only private DI school in New England with a similar facility;
- The Sports Medicine and Training Center is part of a major revitalization project that will double the size of current training facilities in the Elizabeth and Malcolm Pearse Wellness and Athletic Center and modernize the equipment that student-athletes and trainers use;
- Bryant University Zhubai, a joint venture with Beijing Institute of Technology Zhubai that establishes a Bryant campus in Zhubai. The University’s Chinese partners have invested 100 percent of the capital for this project.
- The most transformative facilities initiative in Bryant history “is testament to the history of this great institution as well as to our expected great future,” President Machleit told the crowd of University trustees, alumni, faculty, staff, and guests who gathered for the groundbreaking.

Board Chairman William J. Conaty ’67 called Bryant Builds a terrific accomplishment of President Machleit who came to Bryant 20 years ago with “a vision of what this school could be.”

The tremendous success inspired by Bryant’s first fundraising campaign and subsequent investment in the campus is evident in the beautiful arc of buildings at the campus’ center, the George E. Bell Center for Information and Technology, the Elizabeth and Malcolm Pearse Wellness and Athletic Center, the Ronald K. and Kent C. Machleit Interfaith Center and the Michael E. ’67 and Karen L. Fisher Student Center.

Now, with the facilities included in the Bryant Builds initiative, said Conaty, who also serves as co-chair of the capital campaign, “the sky’s the limit.”

Bryant’s history, President Machleit noted, dates back to the Civil War and includes moves to various locations, including a campus on Providence’s East Side. In 1971, the trustees decided to come to “this magnificent spot” in Smithfield, a gift from the late Earl Tupper, the founder of Tupperware, an entrepreneur who had a passion for experimenting and inventing.

“Mr. Tupper would indeed be very proud of us for doing things innovatively,” the president said. “Bryant’s momentum has never been stronger.”
The National Alumni Council (NAC) is pleased to announce new officers for the 2015-2017 term, including incoming president Glen Martin ’81, ’87 MBA, and vice presidents Jay Weinberg ’85 and Rita Williams-Bogart ’76. Also joining the NAC for three-year terms are Shanel Anthony ’02, ’05 MBA; Aimee (Trinity) Waters ’07; and Renee Lawlor ’15. Renee was also selected to serve as the Reenter Alumni Trustee for Bryant University. Dustin Goldstein ’96 will serve one additional year as the immediate past president of the NAC. Long-serving members Eric Bertrand ’94 and Bill McQuinn ’56 have completed their tenure on the council.

The National Alumni Council represents Bryant’s alumni throughout the world, and coordinates closely with the Office of Alumni Engagement to ensure a strong network of opportunities is available for personal and professional growth. “We benefit from the collective experiences of our NAC members as we make decisions on how to allocate resources for our Alumni Association,” notes Robin Wade P’12, Director of Alumni Engagement. There are no dues to belong to the Alumni Association. Programs are funded by Bryant University, although a small amount of revenue comes from affinity programs such as those offered through Amica Insurance and Commerce Bank Visa credit card agreement. By taking advantage of these benefits, alumni also help support alumni programs.

The National Alumni Council, in conjunction with the Office of Alumni Engagement, operates under a strategic plan with specific goals and outcomes. “We measure our success in terms of the number of alumni who help students, attend alumni gatherings, or support the Bryant Fund,” states Wade. “It’s an indicator of loyalty and pride.” These increasing numbers show that Bryant is moving in the right direction, with growing and sustained alumni involvement. And that’s the mark of a top University.

To view the current list of National Alumni Council members, go to alumniconnect.bryant.edu, click the “Get Involved” tab, and select “National Alumni Council.”

Jay Ryan ’84
Member and CFO, King Street Capital Management

Jay Ryan ’84 has always believed change equals growth and opportunity. So it was no surprise to any of his friends and family when he made the move from auditor to product controller to public accountant to chief financial officer of a private hedge fund operating on Wall Street.

His current organization, King Street Capital Management LP, L.C. (King Street), is one of the largest global hedge fund management firms with approximately $1.2 billion of assets under management. As chief financial officer, Ryan’s responsibilities include fund accounting, operations, risk, and treasury. Prior to joining King Street, Ryan worked for Cantor Fitzgerald, L.P. as its CFO.

Ryan received his Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting from Bryant summa cum laude in 1984 and a Master of Business Administration degree from New York University in 1986. He began his career as an auditor with Arthur Andersen & Company and as a product controller for Goldman Sachs, Inc. before moving on to Cantor Fitzgerald.

Recently, at the request of longtime Bryant Accountant Professor Michael Lynch, J.D., Ryan came back to Bryant to speak to accounting students. He urged them not to narrow their focus, but instead be open to trying many different paths.

“I tell my employees to try many different things,” he says. “Wear different hats. Don’t be afraid to take a job that may just be a lateral move. You must always be willing to re-invent yourself.”

“My experience at Bryant University is one of the biggest reasons for my personal success,” he says. “I hope that sharing some of my insights with the students provided some transparency about working on Wall Street.”

His visit to campus was as impactful for Ryan as it was for the students. “There’s just so much going on here now,” he says. “It’s great to see what Bryant University has become.”

Emily Panasewich ’08
Director of Asian Operations, Destination Imagination

When she first came to Bryant, Emily Panasewich ’08 had never traveled outside of the United States. Before she graduated, she had studied in three countries, and today, she lives in Singapore and works with people in approximately 30 Asian countries, conducting new volunteer training, running camps and tournaments, and writing business plans. “Bryant really gave me the confidence to work with people from various countries, and the awareness of basic cultural differences,” she says.

A member of Bryant’s first class of international Business graduates, Panasewich was teaching English as a second language in a small farming community in South Korea when she received word of a job opening at educational nonprofit Destination Imagination. The organization teaches problem-solving, creativity, and teamwork to kids by sponsoring competitions around the globe and was looking for an international coordinator.

“I knew I had to apply,” she recalls. “The job description seemed to fit her to a tee: an International Business degree, knowledge of a second language, and work or study experience in another country.

Having professors from various cultural backgrounds, she says, helped her to learn the nuances of doing business in different areas of the world. To date, she has traveled to 15 countries. Making friends overseas has been easy, especially since she joined a rugby team. “The people I met have amazing stories, a passion for living, and a curiosity to see the world around them,” she says. “Having people like that in my life has had a very positive impact.”

In January 2015, Panasewich met with Bryant students who were in Singapore as part of Sophomore International Experience (SIE) and arranged a service learning experience for them. “There are a lot of possibilities for the students here. I am happy to structure a Bryant student’s internship around what their interests are.”

David Louton, Ph.D.
Finance Professor, Bryant University

The faculty who make a difference are the ones who take an interest in the individuals in their classrooms. “Teaching is about the development of the whole person, not just a transfer of technical knowledge,” says Finance Professor David Louton, Ph.D. Although he studied science as an undergraduate, he wanted to pursue a field that would play to his technical strengths and would have a “direct link to people and society.”

Finance, says Louton, is much more than just money management. “Finance is really where all the different plot lines in the business world come together and have to be reconciled,” he explains. “As a result, finance and strategy are always closely intertwined. For example, success in inventing, which has sometimes been called the last liberal art, requires a fusion of qualitative and quantitative perspectives, strategy and operations, macro and micro. This blending of so many perspectives and skill sets is what makes finance and investing so interesting.”

A driving faculty member behind establishing the distinctive Archway Investment Fund (AIF) program, Louton is proud to have helped create “something very special at Bryant.” The AIF in which students manage real money, topped $1 million dollars earlier this year. As the program’s coordinator/advisor for the last 10 years, Louton has mixed feelings about handing the reigns over to another finance faculty professor this fall. “My time with the Archway Investment Fund has really changed the way that I think about teaching. My experience with the Fund allowed me to see the real potential that can be achieved with the right blend of academic, experiential learning, and alumni/industry involvement.”

Louton is looking forward to his next teaching challenge. “Finance is still the best place to be,” he says, despite recent market and banking crises. “The investment function will remain the engine that drives resource allocation efficiency in capitalist economies the world over. As a result, there will always be opportunities for talented people interested in careers in finance.”

Every gift counts in the Campaign

Expanding the World of Opportunity: The Campaign for Bryant’s Bold Future outlines the University’s leadership course and ensures that we continue on a trajectory of excellence. The Campaign will allow Bryant to ascend to an even higher level of prominence among the top colleges and universities in the country.

At the very heart of the Campaign is the Bryant Fund. The Bryant Fund is our annual fundraising effort that helps establish our reputation in the educational community. The percentage of alumni who donate to the Bryant Fund is a gauge against which we’ve measured by our peer institutions.

In the last fiscal year, we’ve had 5,926 total donors, and since the Campaign’s inception, $9,468,000 has been raised by the Bryant Fund. “What’s most important about the Bryant Fund is that it shows our peers that our alumni are actively engaged with their alma mater,” says Stephen Luttrell, director of the Bryant Fund. “Every gift – no matter the size – is impactful. It’s how lists and rankings such as U.S. News and World Report measure alumni satisfaction with their education.”

Alumni experts hold webinars

The Office of Alumni Engagement is using technology to help alumni around the world. Our latest endeavor is a series of webinars on timely topics led by alumni experts. You’ll find a section for webinars on the Careers section of the alumni website (alumni.bryant.edu/careers). Choose “Career Coach” in the left sidebar.

Starting in the fall of 2015 – a career and leadership webinar series The first three will be:

Wednesday, September 16 – Communicating with Confidence with Rita Williams-Bogar ’76

Wednesday, October 14 – Leading with Emotional Intelligence with Nicole Archambault ’16

Wednesday, November 18 – Personal Branding with Beth Carter ’85

Topics in planning stages are: Developing your ‘leadership identity’ during your retirement; salary negotiations, etc., all led by alumni. If you have an interest you’d like to share with alumni through a webinar, please contact Robin Tshorun Wrede, director of alumni engagement, at rtwrede@bryant.edu with the subject line “Webinar Expert.”

Bryant holds 5th New Venture Competition

Not all new ventures make it – in fact, although the numbers vary depending on a variety of factors, most start-ups will fail. Armed with this knowledge, Miguel Domínguez ’10 entered Bryant’s inaugural New Venture Competition in hopes of getting some seed money and advice from seasoned entrepreneurs.

When he didn’t take the top spot, Domínguez went back to the drawing board, tweaked and re-worked his idea, and in 2014, his start-up, Clapex, placed first in the New Venture Competition. He notes, “Rarely do you succeed with the first concepts.” This is his third try. It took aspects from my initial concept business to a brick and mortar concept, and ultimately pivoted to target the vending market.

Now in its 7th year, the New Venture Competition is an opportunity for students and alumni to showcase their start-ups. Initially just for alumni, the student track was added in 2013, to support the growing number of student businesses.

2013’s winner: Kris Hart ’06, in close contact with judges Jay Weinberg ’85 and Brian Cowley ’82. "Both judges have become good friends and mentors I rely on for advice with tough decisions." In fact, Domínguez has said thatfake news and rankings such as U.S. News and World Report measure alumni satisfaction with their education.

The 5th annual New Venture Competition will be on October 16, kicking off Reunion @ Homecoming weekend. For the first time, presentations will be made in front of an audience of potential investors. For more information on how you can get involved as a mentor or investor, contact Robin Wrede at rtwrede@bryant.edu or 401-232-6253.

Miguel Domínguez ’10, 2014 New Venture Competition winner
Lessons Learned in Entrepreneurship

Lack of market, running out of cash, and not having the right management team in place are three of the most common reasons a startup may not ultimately survive. But, as Michelangelo said, “The greater danger for most of us lies not in setting our aim too high and falling short, but in setting our aim too low and achieving our mark.” Succeed or fail, Bryant’s past New Venture Competition contestants have learned important lessons.

Stephen Flitch ’09 and his company Moondust Macarons won the top prize in 2011. Although he has closed the business, he shares this advice, “Make sure you really care about what you’re doing. You need to live and breathe it to achieve the depth of understanding and drive you’ll need to even have a chance of succeeding.”

Last year’s runner-up, Marissa Banigan ’08, designed and produced a prototype of Raina to the Rescue, a line of toys and books to teach leadership skills to young girls. Although an initial crowdfunding campaign did not reach its target, Banigan is holding fast to her dream, and is using social and mainstream media, including an article in Forbes, to communicate her company’s inspirational message.

Steven Brodeur ’16 won the student track last year with Winsulate, an energy-efficient window solution. The difficulty of balancing his academics and his commitment to Winsulate, Brodeur shared, became an obstacle to success. Of his team, he said, “Each of us has different strengths and weaknesses and we couldn’t decide how each of us would contribute.” He recommends identifying everyone’s roles before pitching to investors.
