Hello Darling

Another drinkin' train ride.
I think it would be a lot better for me if I walked back to the field.

Tom dragged me to the movies tonight. "When Irish Eyes are Smiling" was there.
It wasn't bad. Dick Haymes really has a sharp voice.

Gee I felt so alone when I left you this afternoon.

It's sunny, darling, but I think I fell in love with you all over again this weekend for the sixth, or is it the seventh time. Last week I didn't think I could love you any more than I did then, but I do, a thousand times more. You

We're so sweet this weekend.

You looked so marvelous even better than you usually do.

Gosh I love you. This weekend went by so unbelievably fast.

Now it will be six gorgeous days before I see you again, and it will seem like six years. As mom said, it's terrible to be in love, (it says here) (in fingerprint)

And darling, take care of yourself, and don't drink any more cokes. Gee whiz, if cokes affect you like that, what will champagne (I can't spell it) do.

I'll think of you every minute of this long week darling. I love you so much, there are no words to express how I feel toward you, just — I love you.

As ever
