20 YEARS OF INSPIRING, EMPOWERING, & ADVANCING WOMEN!
Welcome!

20 Years of Inspiring, Empowering, and Advancing Women!

Over the last two decades, we have witnessed tremendous local, national, and international changes. The world is more accessible as a result of technology and the global economy. Terrorism and the resulting war on terror are now part of our world. We have had four presidents elected to office, and our country rebounded from an economic downturn with the stock market now reaching record highs.

During the past 20 years, Bryant has experienced transformational changes in its academic curriculum, its physical appearance, the number of facilities on campus, and in its athletic and cultural programs. Bryant changed from a college to a university, with a College of Business, a College of Arts and Sciences, and a School of Health Sciences. The U.S.-China Institute and Confucius Institute were established in Smithfield, while a new Bryant campus was founded in Zuhuai, China.

As a nation, we still struggle to achieve wage parity. When the Women's Summit began in 1997, women were paid 75 cents for every dollar earned by a man. Since then, the overall ratio has climbed by only four cents. There is some encouraging news, according to an article by Sheryl Sandberg in The Wall Street Journal: "Women are now negotiating for raises and promotions as often as their male peers – defying the conventional wisdom that women don’t ask." Sandberg writes that women who ask for a promotion are more likely to get one than women who don’t, but are still less likely than men to be promoted.

Today, a higher percentage of women can be found in legal, medical, and veterinary professions. In a Wall Street Journal article by Joann S. Lublin, 19 percent of C-suite executives are female – a slight increase from 17 percent in 2015, according to an analysis by LeanIn.Org and McKinsey & Co. "The more women who are in positions of power visibly, the better it is for women lower in the organization,” says Robin Ely, a Harvard Business School professor and gender researcher. And companies with higher proportions of women in upper management achieve higher profits, as noted in a recent study of 21,980 firms in 91 countries by the Peterson Institute for International Economics.

Another big change is that 71 percent of mothers now work outside of the home. A 2013 Pew Research study reveals that four out of every 10 mothers with children under the age of 18 are the breadwinners in their families. All women deserve equal pay for equal work, and mothers need to be supported with child care as they strive to achieve work-life balance that includes their own mental and physical health. When the breadwinner/caregiver isn’t healthy, the whole family feels the effects. For all of us, finding balance continues to be an ongoing process. We keep moving forward, but sometimes we need to tap the brakes to reassess our direction and reevaluate our situation.

We hope that you enjoy the 20th anniversary of the Women’s Summit at Bryant University, and that our day together inspires and empowers you – both personally and professionally. By attending the Women’s Summit, your ongoing journey to create a better life for you and your family will be enriched by the knowledge that you will gain today.

Sincerely,

Kati Machtley

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Mary Kelly is an internationally renowned economist, author, and speaker on the topics of leadership, productivity, communication, and improving profit growth. Her numerous books include the award-winning bestseller, Master Your World: 12 Dog-Inspired Leadership Lessons to Improve Productivity, Profits, and Communication.

A graduate of the United States Naval Academy, Kelly, a Mensa member, spent more than 20 years on active duty in intelligence and logistics, training more than 40,000 military and civilian personnel before retiring from the U.S. Navy as a Commander. Through her work in college teaching and in the military, for which she was recognized with top awards, she discovered the need to make the principles of leadership and communication available to all types of organizations.

Today, Kelly works with business owners, CEOs, managers, and team leaders to create happy work environments even in the most stressful situations. She believes great leadership sets expectations and boosts morale, encouraging people to perform better at their jobs.

She holds a Ph.D. in Economics from Greenwich University.

Leymah GBOWEE

Leymah, a 2011 Nobel Peace Prize recipient, Liberian peace activist, trained social worker, and women’s rights advocate, is founder and president of the Gbowee Peace Foundation Africa. She founded the Liberian Reconciliation Initiative and co-founded the Women Peace and Security Network Africa. She is a founding member of Women in Peacebuilding Network/West Africa Network for Peacebuilding. Currently a Distinguished Activist-in-Residence at Union Theological Seminary, she travels internationally to advocate for human rights, peace, and security.

Gbowee’s leadership of the Women of Liberia Mass Action for Peace – which brought together Christian and Muslim women in a nonviolent movement that played a pivotal role in ending Liberia’s civil war in 2003 – is chronicled in her memoir, Mighty Be Our Powers, and in the award-winning documentary, Pray the Devil Back to Hell. Her 2012 TED Talk, “Unlock the intelligence, passion, greatness of girls,” has been viewed by more than 1 million people.

She has been profiled in The New York Times Op-Docs series by filmmaker Errol Morris, who called Gbowee a “modern day Joan of Arc.”

Trynka SHINEMAN

2017 Women’s Summit New England Businesswoman of the Year

Trynka Shineman is Chief Executive Officer of Vistaprint, responsible for the company’s strategy, execution, and growth. Under her leadership, the Vistaprint brand has evolved from a “business card company” to a customer-centric organization that supports micro businesses with an impressive breadth of products to professionally promote their trades.

When she joined Vistaprint in 2004, revenues were less than $100 million. Today, it is a $1.2 billion business with more than 17 million customers. With Shineman at the helm, the company has expanded market share, improved customer satisfaction, and grown into a global company that truly embraces business owners.

Her career includes 20 years in market research and analysis, strategic planning, marketing, e-commerce, and innovative leadership. She was previously a director and senior manager for PreVision Marketing, an Inc. 500 and Software 500 boutique marketing company.

In 2016, Shineman was named one of the top 100 Women Business Leaders in Massachusetts. She currently holds a Non-Executive Director position with UBM, PLC.
