

October, 1945

The invention of the typewriter three generations ago opened up new business opportunities for women. Everybody knows that modern business could not run efficiently without women. Those who have studied business carefully are very sure that the secretarial door is the opening that brings thousands of women into executive positions. Native ability, ambition, hard work, plus good secretarial training, help to take a woman toward the top of the business ladder. That the training at Bryant is of high standard is proved by the positions held by graduates, and by the tremendous demand on the part of employers for more and more men and women who have a Bryant degree.

(hot my jacket!)

Only graduates of high schools, college preparatory schools or those of equivalent training are accepted as students at Bryant College. The group of students enrolled are earnest, full of life, excellent companions and friends.

The student body is large, but is broken into small groups so that the most reticent student will feel at home. Pupils from out of town are always well cared for.
