

PUTTING YOUR OWN SPECIAL TALENTS TO THE MOST PROFITABLE USE

BRYANT-STRATTON training is founded on the firm belief that young men and young women succeed best at work which they like and for which their special talents suit them. In choosing a career, it helps to find the answers to questions like this:—

Am I apt at figures?

If your talents lie in this direction, if you are rapid and accurate by nature, your chances for success are presumably better in one of these positions:

TREASURER	BANKER	COST ACCOUNTANT
COMPTROLLER	CREDIT MANAGER	BOOKKEEPER
ACCOUNTANT	STATISTICIAN	AUDITOR

Do I meet and influence people easily?

Am I a natural leader?

If you can conscientiously answer "Yes" to this question (and many young people can) then your opportunity may be found in one of these vocations:

SELLING	COMMERCIAL TEACHING
SALES MANAGEMENT	INVESTMENT BANKING
BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION	MARKETING
ADMINISTRATIVE SECRETARY	EXECUTIVE MANAGEMENT

Am I creative, original, artistic and full of ideas that I feel I must express?

Business today has increasing opportunities for people of this type, and if you recognize such qualities in yourself, you will do well to consider the possibilities of work in such fields as:

ADVERTISING	SALES CORRESPONDENCE
PUBLISHING	COLLECTION WORK
EDITING	SALES PROMOTION
MERCHANDISING	CONFIDENTIAL SECRETARY

Bryant-Stratton College graduates are trained not only to do well as secretaries and junior executives but to meet the difficulties and exercise the authority which come with success in more responsible positions.

THE VALUE OF A COLLEGE DEGREE

Measuring the value of a college degree in business

A typical college commencement. The college graduate has a head start in life.

IN PLANNING your business career, it is important to prepare not only for your first job, but for the higher positions in business. One of the best ways to do this is to graduate from a college which not only provides higher business training, but which gives to its students the atmosphere, ideals and background that are associated with any good New England Liberal Arts college. Situated amid the cultural opportunities of Providence, Bryant-Stratton College is empowered by the State to grant degrees in business courses, and also degrees in commercial education. This training is further enhanced by reciprocal relations with Rhode Island College of Education.

Classrooms at Bryant-Stratton are pleasant, well-lighted and airy.

In school or on the field Bryant-Stratton students work hard and play hard.

Above—Civic center of Providence, city of homes and seat of many colleges.

At left—Athletics for both women and men students develop health in body and mind.

Would you like to enter business with a college education? Would you like to save half the time and much of the expense associated with the four-year course at a liberal arts college? Would you like a two-year head start in entering business? Would you like to graduate with complete secretarial or accountancy training instead of having to add that on top of your four years of study in a liberal arts college? Then by all means investigate the possibilities of Bryant-Stratton College at Providence. Its economical plan of two-year college degree courses saves time and expense.

Unique among New England Institutions Bryant-Stratton College at Providence Offers you a Cultural Background Combined with Training for Advancement in Business

ONE of the chief reasons why so many young people prefer Bryant-Stratton College at Providence seems to be the combination of successful and serious academic life with a congenial collegiate society that stimulates earnest work and warm friendship. This combination is not the result of a happy accident. The college is seventy years old. During that time it has developed an atmosphere and a tradition which have been carefully fostered by alumni, faculty and student leaders.

LEARNING TO MEET AND CULTIVATE PEOPLE

The college has found two factors essential for success in the higher fields of business: First, a certain skill in some specialized business vocation such as accounting, finance or secretarial work, and Second, ability to co-ordinate with other people. Bryant-Stratton College seeks out in every student the best aptitudes which nature has given him or her for success in both. The college is co-educational and fosters a clean social atmosphere and athletic program under proper supervision to inculcate the ideal of "Work hard and play hard."

TRAINING IN SELF-RELIANCE

The college is a miniature cross-section of actual community life. Here every student is encouraged to win a high place in college by taking active part in athletics and student affairs, but these activities are never permitted to rob anyone of the time required to do thorough work in the college courses. By learning to apportion the time and to concentrate on the matter in hand, whether work or play, the student acquires the self-reliance needed to reach a place of leadership in the outside world.

FINDING YOURSELF

Standing on the threshold of high school graduation, many young people see the future through a cloud of uncertainty. If you are puzzled and doubtful which way to turn next, Bryant-Stratton College would advise you: By all means finish high school. In the meantime mail the inclosed card promptly to the college and obtain a free consultation in your own home with a faculty adviser who will be glad to talk with you and your parent or guardian about planning your future and selecting the field in which you are most likely to succeed.

DEVELOPING YOUR SPECIAL TALENTS

Such a conference does not obligate you in any way, and our faculty adviser must decline to enroll any young man or woman who is not a high school graduate or who appears unequal to completing the courses required here. On the other hand, those properly qualified, and who have the time and means, are offered distinct advantages not available elsewhere. In any event the college suggests the desirability of a free discussion of your problem with a faculty adviser. He will be glad to supply information regarding courses, activities, dormitory accommodations, entrance requirements, and expenses. By all means mail the card and take advantage of this opportunity to talk with an experienced counselor who has your interests in mind.
