Bulletin of BRYANT COLLEGE

FROM THE CAMPUS

Alumni Election Will Choose Members-at-Large For New Assn.

As reported to you earlier, a new constitution has been adopted by the present Alumni Council that offers each of you a ballot for the election of Members-at-Large to represent you on an Executive Board in the Bryant College Alumni Association.

The present Alumni Council has served as a representative of the alumni body since 1956, when it was formed under Robert Drew-Bear, then alumni secretary. There had been Alumni Councils before this, back in the 30's, but like so many other groups, its responsibilities were broadened and required reassessment.

The new Constitution extends to the general alumni body of Bryant College the opportunity to ballot for certain nominees for the office of Member-at-Large. A nominating committee chaired by Donald Pfister '57 has nominated 24 alumni for these offices. Twelve (12) will be elected for terms of one, two, three, or four years this year. Next year three alumni will be elected from six nominees for four-year terms.

You will receive a ballot with a biography of each nominee and an envelope to return your ballot. The election results will be announced on June 15, at Homecoming.

Once elected, the twelve Members-at-Large will elect a President. Together with representatives of any active alumni clubs, the alumni trustees, two alumni on our faculty, the president of the Student Senate and the president of the senior class, the President of the College, and the Director of Alumni Affairs, they will comprise the Alumni Council. The latter two will serve as ex-officio members.

Here's your chance to have a vote in the alumni program of Bryant College. We sincerely hope you will take advantage of it.

Administrative Appointments

President E. Gardner Jacobs has announced the appointment of John Peter Hannon as Director of Library Services and William Smith as Dean for Student Affairs.

Mr. Hannon has been evening librarian and instructor in library science at Bristol Community College, Fall River, Mass., and librarian at the Chariho Regional High School in Rhode Island. He has a A.B. in English from Providence College and a masters degree in Library Science from the University of Rhode Island, where he is also a candidate for a masters degree in English.

Mr. Smith has been Dean of Men, a position he will continue to handle. He will head a newly created division of student affairs that will include the offices of Dean of Men, Dean of Women, Director of Student Activities, Director Placement, Director of Financial Aid, and Director of Health Services.

Donald S. Jones '30 Elected Commercial Credit Co. Executive

A graduate with the Class of 1930, Donald S. Jones has been elected president, chief executive officer, and a member of the board of directors of Commercial Credit Company in Baltimore, Maryland. The Company is one of the largest financial organizations in the world.

He joined their Providence office following graduation as an accounting clerk and was transferred to the Boston branch of Commercial Credit Corporation, a subsidiary of Commercial Credit Company.

In 1943, he was granted a leave of absence to work with the United States Treasury Department. He returned to the Corporation after World War II to serve in a succession of managerial positions.

He was called to Commercial Credit Corporation's administrative headquarters in Baltimore in 1954 to become area director for the Northeastern States, and was promoted to executive vice president in 1961.

In April of 1963, he was elected president of Commercial Credit Corporation, one of the largest independent finance and loan institutions in the United States.

At Commencement in 1964, Donald was honored by Bryant College with a Doctor of Science in Business Administration degree, honoris causa.

Donald was treasurer of his class and is a member of Beta Sigma Chi fraternity. He and his wife, the former Helen Hopkins, reside in suburban Baltimore and are the parents of two daughters.

"What Is The Future Of The Private College?"

By THOM P. BROWN

Administrative officers of the College and faculty frequently meet with their counterparts in professional meetings throughout the country.

Reports brought back to the campus are shared, but not usually of general interest to alumni. In early January our Director of Financial Aid, Thom Brown, attended a conference at Goddard College in Plainfield, Vermont, on "What Is The Future Of The Private College?"

Mr. Brown's condensed report of that meeting is reproduced herewith.

A Conference Report

On January 3, 4, and 5, I had the privilege of attending a conference on the future of the private college at Goddard College, Plainfield, Vermont. The conference was primarily "designed" for admissions and financial aid people, though a variety of positions were represented by those in attendance. We invited Dean John McCabe, because of his membership on the Financial Aid Committee, and Wallace Camper from the faculty to attend also.

As I am sure all of you are aware, a great deal of public discussion is in progress concerning the future (primarily financial) of the private sector of higher education. This conference was engendered by an awareness of a growing political, if not in fact public, commitment to post-secondary education for all. In other words, the federal, state, and local governments are going to provide the facilities and faculties to meet this commitment.

Whom Do You Teach?

Where does the private institution fit into this picture? Well, one of the resource people for the conference asked three questions:

Whom do you teach?

What do you teach and how do you teach it?

How do you finance it?

The answers he gave were rather glib and, in the instance of the first one, directed at the more selective institutions.

You teach everyone.

You teach everything the best you can.

You finance it through federal grants.

Dr. Royce S. Pitkin, the president of Goddard, approached the problem somewhat differently, and I thought, more realistically. He said the private colleges have to teach something different and special; that they have to apply what the behavioral scientists have learned about the learning situation to the learning situation; and that they have to charge what it costs.

These comments are perhaps too glib, also. Goddard College is doing all three of these things and obviously influences his approach to the problem.

But let us look at Bryant College in this regard. What is our future? Where are we going?

A basic question to be answered is: Why should a prospective student choose Bryant College over the Business Administration School of U.R.I., U. Mass., or any other public institution?

My thought is that if we and hundreds of other private institutions were very honest, we would have to admit that though our programs are good, they are not very much different or better than our public counterparts.

We are not alone.

The question is where do we go from here.

The Future

I think that Bryant College is on the threshold of a very good future. While there are hundreds of small private liberal arts colleges, there are not very many good collegiate schools of business. And, if we move now to offer one of the best business curricula, we shall succeed. The possibility of a new campus couldn't be more timely because a new plant can be planned to house a modern approach to education. With the proper amount of vision and expertise in planning, the future of this private college looks good. All of us must be prepared to "think big", to be receptive to new ideas, and above all, not to be tied to the past or even the present.

We should beware of becoming too selective. The pool of "brilliant" students isn't big enough for the competition, and the pool of prospective students who can "afford" our costs and are in our selection zone is considerably larger. We can, therefore, design and price a product for a large group of consumers and at the same time serve a large group of the college bound population.

It is important that we take time from the everyday problems of our own particular worlds and address ourselves to some of the way-out problems such as "What are the goals of this institution?" and "How are we going to achieve them?"

Director of Development Resigns To Become United Fund Associate

Roy D. Welch resigned his position as Director of Development at Bryant April 1 to become associate executive director of the United Fund in Providence.

He came to Bryant in 1965 and was responsible for the Alumni Annual Giving Fund from 1965-66. The Fund was subsequently returned to the Alumni Office and Mr. Welch became active in the encouragement of corporate and foundation support for Bryant College.

Durant Tool Co. President Participates in Trade Mission

Edward W. Bouclin '37, president of Durant Tool Supply Company in Providence, was one of five prominent businessmen chosen by the American Trade and Investment Mission to Pakistan, an official U. S. Government Mission, for a visit to Pakistan from February 3 to March 2, 1968.

The Mission was composed of five businessmen, two officials of the United States Department of Commerce, and the Commercial Attache of the American Embassy Office.

The business members were selected for their competence in fields pertinent to the Pakistan economy. They serve without salary. They give their time and long years of business experience in an earnest effort to encourage investment, two-way trade, the formation of joint venture and licensing arrangements and the appointment of agents.

The Mission has now returned and its members are meeting with other American businessmen to convey and explain the business proposals developed during their stay in Pakistan.

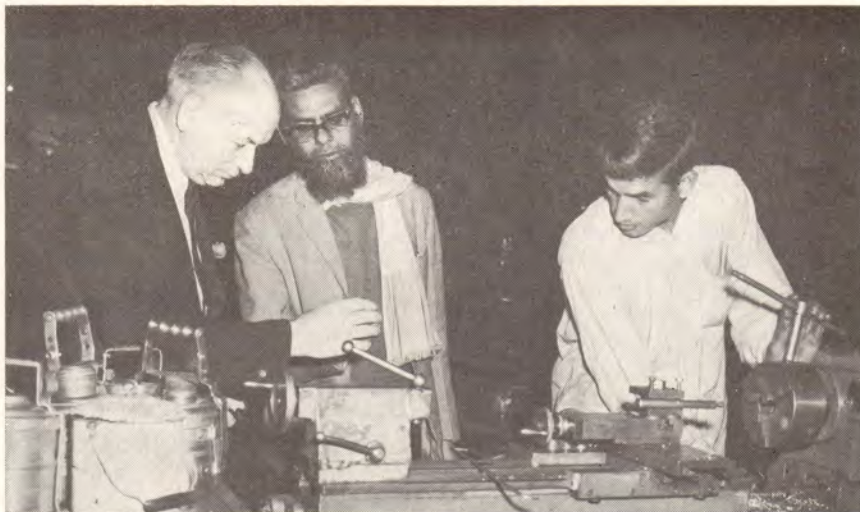

Durant Tool Supply Company has specialized in the marketing of machine tools as related to the metal stamping industry for over twenty-five years. They distribute metal stamping machinery and machine tools to over 200 dealers in the United States and Canada and to firms in Europe and South America.

Edward Bouclin, at the left in each picture, is shown during a visit the Trade Mission made to the Batala Engineering Company in Lahore, Pakistan. The company has two plants. One manufactures bicycles and the other produces milling machines, lathes, looms, and pumps.

The man at the far right in the lower photograph is blind. He is inserting spokes into the hub and rim assemblies of bicycle wheels.

A SHORT HISTORY OF EDUCATION

By RICHARD ARMOUR

Prehistoric Times

LITTLE IS KNOWN ABOUT HIGHER EDUCATION during the Stone Age, which is perhaps just as well.

Because of a weakness in the liberal arts, the B.A. was not offered, and there was only the B.S., or Bachelor of Stones. Laboratory facilities were meager, owing to a lack of government contracts and support from private industry, but the stars were readily available, on clear nights, for those interested in astronomy. (Scholars, who went around without much on, looked at the stars with the naked eye.)

Prehistoric students, being before history, failed to comprehend the fundamentals of the subject, such as its being divided into Ancient, Medieval, and Modern.

There were no College Boards. This was fortunate, because without saw or plane, boards were rough.

Nor were there any fraternities. The only clubs on the campus were those carried by the students or, in self-defense, by members of the faculty.

Alumni organizations were in their infancy, where some of them have remained. The alumni secretary occupied a small cave, left behind when the director of development moved to a larger one. While waiting for contributions to come in, he idly doodled on the wall, completely unaware that art critics would someday mistake his drawings of certain members of the board of trustees for dinosaurs and saber-toothed tigers.

The Alumni Quarterly came out every quarter of a century, and was as eagerly awaited as it is today.

The Classical Period

IN ANCIENT ATHENS EVERYONE KNEW GREEK, and in ancient Rome everyone knew Latin, even small children—which those who have taken Elementary Greek or Elementary Latin will find hard to believe. Universities wishing to teach a language which had little practical use but was good for mental discipline could have offered English if they had thought of it.

Buildings were all in the classical style, and what looked like genuine marble was genuine marble. However, philosophy classes were sometimes held on the steps, the students being so eager to learn that they couldn't wait to get inside.

The Peripatetic School was a college where the professors kept moving from town to town, closely followed by students and creditors. Sometimes lectures were held in the Groves of Academe, where students could munch apples and olives and occasionally cast an anxious eye at birds in the branches overhead.

Under the Caesars, taxation became so burdensome that Romans in the upper brackets found they might as well give money to their Alma Mater instead of letting the State have it. Thus it was that crowds often gathered along the Appian Way to applaud a spirited chariot race between the chairman of the funds drive and the tax collector each trying to get to a good prospect first.

The word "donor" comes from the Latin donare, to give, and is not to be confused with dunare, to dun, though it frequently is.

When a prominent alumnus was thrown to the lions, customary procedure in the alumni office was to observe a moment of silence, broken only by the sound of munching. Then the secretary, wrapping his toga a little more tightly around him, solemnly declared, "Well, we might as well take him off the cultivation list."

The Middle Ages

IN THE PERIOD KNOWN AS THE DARK AGES, or nighthood, everyone was in the dark. Higher education survived only because of illuminated manuscripts, which were discovered during a routine burning of a library. It is interesting to reconstruct a typical classroom scene: a group of dedicated students clustered around a glowing piece of parchment, listening to a lecture in Advanced Monasticism, a ten-year course. If some found it hard to concentrate, it was because they were dreaming about quitting before exams and going off on a crusade.

Some left even sooner, before the end of the lecture, having spied a beautiful damsel being pursued by a dragon who had designs on her. Damsels, who were invariably in distress, wrought havoc on a young man's grade-point average.

Members of the faculty were better off than previously, because they wore coats of armor. Fully accoutered, and with their visors down, they could summon up enough courage to go into the president's office and ask for a promotion even though they had not published a thing.

At this time the alumni council became more aggressive in its fund drives, using such persuasive devices as the thumbscrew, the knout, the rack, and the wheel. A wealthy alumnus would usually donate generously if a sufficient number of alumni, armed with pikestaffs and halberds, could cross his moat and storm his castle walls. A few could be counted on to survive the rain of stones, arrows, and molten lead. Such a group of alumni, known as "the committee", was customarily conducted to the castle by a troubador, who led in the singing of the Alma Mater Song the while.

The Renaissance

DURING THE RENAISSANCE, UNIVERSITIES SPANG UP ALL OVER EUROPE. You could go to bed at night, with not a university around, and the next morning there would be two universities right down the street, each with a faculty, student body, campanile, and need for additional endowment.

The first universities were in Italy, where Dante was required reading. Some students said his "Paradise" and "Purgatory" were as hard as "Hell." Boccaccio was not required but was read anyhow, and in the original Italian, so much being lost in translation. Other institutions soon followed, such as Heidelberg, where a popular elective was Duelling 103a,b, usually taken concurrently with First Aid, and the Sorbonne, which never seemed to catch on with tourists as much as the Eiffel Tower, the Folies Bergere, and Napoleon's Tomb. In England there was Oxford, where, by curious coincidence, all of the young instructors were named Don. There was also Cambridge.

The important thing about the Renaissance, which was a time of awakening (even in the classroom), was education of the Whole Man. Previously such vital parts as the elbows and ear lobes had been neglected. The graduate of a university was supposed, above all, to be a Gentleman. This meant that he should know such things as archery, falconry, and fencing (subjects now largely relegated to Physical Education and given only one-half credit per semester), as well as, in the senior year, how to use a knife and fork.

During the Renaissance, the works of Homer, Virgil, and other classical writers were rediscovered, much to the disappointment of students.

Alumni officials concentrated their efforts on securing a patron, someone rich like Lorenzo de' Medici, someone clever like Machiavelli, or (if they wished to get rid of a troublesome member of the administration) someone really useful like Lucrezia Borgia.

Colonial America

THE FIRST UNIVERSITIES IN AMERICA WERE FOUNDED BY THE PURITANS. This explains the strict regulations about Late Hours, Compulsory Chapel, No Liquor on the Campus, and Off-Limits to Underclassmen which still exist at many institutions.

Some crafts were taught, but witchcraft was an extracurricular activity. Witch-burning, on the other hand, was the seventeenth century equivalent of hanging a football coach in effigy at the end of a bad season. Though deplored, it was passed off by the authorities as attributable to "youthful exuberance."

Harvard set the example for naming colleges after donors. William and Mary, though making a good try, failed to start a trend for using first names. It was more successful, however, in starting Phi Beta Kappa, a fraternity which permitted no rough stuff in its initiations. At first the Phi Beta Kappa key was worn on the key ring, but the practice went out with the discovery of the watch chain and vest.

During the Colonial Period, alumni officials limited their fund-raising activities to those times when an alumnus was securely fastened, hands and legs, in the stocks. In this position he was completely helpless and gave generously, or could be frisked.

Revolutionary America

HIGHER EDUCATION CAME TO A VIRTUAL STANDSTILL during the Revolution—every able-bodied male having enlisted for the duration. Since the ROTC was not yet established, college men were forced to have other qualifications for a commission, such as money.

General George Washington was given an honorary degree by Harvard, and this helped see him through the difficult winter at Valley Forge. Since he gave no commencement address, it is assumed that he made a substantial contribution to the building fund. Then again, mindful of the reputation he had gained through Parson Weems's spreading of the cherry tree story, he may have established a chair in Ethics.

Unlike the situation during World War I, when colleges and universities abandoned the teaching of German in order to humiliate the Kaiser, the Colonists waged the Revolutionary War successfully without prohibiting the teaching of English. They did, however, force students to substitute such good old American words as "suspenders" for "braces," and themes were marked down when the spelling "tyre" was used for "tire" and colour" for "color."

Contemporary America

IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY, DENOMINATIONAL COLLEGES WERE FOUNDED in all parts of the country, especially Ohio. In the smaller of these colleges, money was mostly given in small denominations. A few colleges were not named after John Wesley.

State universities came into being at about the same time, and were tax supported. Every taxpayer was therefore a donor, but without getting his name on a building or being invited to dinner by the president. The taxpayer, in short, was in the same class as the Anonymous Giver, but not because he asked that his name be withheld.

The alumni publication, variously called the Alumni Bulletin, the Alumni Quarterly, and the Alumni Newsletter, was probably invented at this time by Benjamin Franklin, who invented almost everything else, including bifocals and kites. The first such publication was probably Poor Alumnus Almanac, full of such homely sayings as "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise enough to write his Alma Mater into his will."

About the middle of the nineteenth century, women were admitted to college. This was done (1) to relieve men of having to take women's parts in dramatic productions, (2) to provide cheer leaders with shapelier legs, and (3) to recruit members for the Women's Glee Club, which was not prospering. Women students came to be known as co-eds, meaning that they went along with a man's education, and he could study and date simultaneously. It was not realized, when they were admitted, that women would get most of the high marks, especially from professors who graded on curves.

In the twentieth century, important strides were made, such as the distinction which developed between education and Education. Teachers came to be trained in what were at first called Normal Schools. With the detection of certain abnormalities, the name was changed to Teachers Colleges.

John Dewey introduced Progressive Education, whereby students quickly knew more than their teachers and told them so. Robert Hutchins turned the University of Chicago upside down, thereby necessitating a new building program. At St. John's College everyone studied the Great Books, which were more economical because they did not come out each year in a revised edition. Educational television gave college professors an excuse for owning a television set, which they had previously maintained would destroy the reading habit. This made it possible for them to watch Westerns and old movies without losing status.

Of recent years, an increasing number of students spend their junior year abroad. This enables them to get a glimpse of professors who have been away for several years on Fulbrights and Guggenheims.

Student government has grown apace, students now not only governing themselves but giving valuable suggestions, in the form of ultimatums, to the presidents and deans. In wide use is the Honor System, which makes the professor leave the room during an examination because he is not to be trusted.

Along with these improvements in education has come a subtle change in the American alumnus. No longer interested only in the record of his college's football team, he is likely to appear at his class reunion full of such penetrating questions as "Why is the tuition higher than it was in 1934?" "Is it true that 85% of the members of the faculty are Communists?" and "How can I get my son (or daughter) in?"

Alumni magazines have kept pace with such advancements. The writing has improved, thanks to schools of journalism, until there is excitement and suspense even in the obituary column. Expression has reached such a high point of originality that a request for funds may appear, at first reading, to be a gift offer.

However, if pictorial content continues to increase, it will not be necessary for alumni to know how to read.

This cannot come too soon.

Bryant Student Delegation At U.N. Model Assembly

A United Nations Model Assembly was held in New York City from February 15 to 18. Bryant College sent a student delegation led by Dr. Sol Lebovitz, professor of political science and chairman of the Social Sciences Department, as their advisor to represent the nation of Afghanistan.

There were 117 schools attending this meeting. Five received awards for "Best Delegation" and ten, including Bryant, received "Honorable Mention" for their assigned roles as delegates from a nation represented at the United Nations.

"Moe" Clare Talks About Varsity Sports At Bryant

Spring Sports

The spring sports are becoming very important to Bryant's varsity program. A lot of people don't know too much about our spring program, the type of sports we play and the competition we meet in these sports.

Golf

This year's team is coached by Arthur Boulet. We have 15 matches, including meets with Clark University, Bates College, Fairfield University, Monmouth College, and Rhode Island College. This schedule puts the team on the road quite a bit; however, with many of their matches away from home it will give the boys a chance to see some other colleges, talk to people from other colleges, and it will also be great for the public to see the type of boy that Bryant turns out.

Baseball

We should have a strong baseball team. Five pitchers are returning from last year's squad, including the number one man, Gordy Balme, Chris Bedgio, Bobbie Allen, Manny Alvarez, and a couple of other boys who can really help out. We will have a strong infield headed by Kevin Lahey, our third baseman, coming back from last year; Mickey Kistner, and a couple of other boys. Coach Wally Camper and Freshman Coach Vincent Smedes have already met with the boys. They are optimistic, but they know it will be a tough season. They will play most of their games at home.

I hope that the alumni will get a chance to see some of the games on our 13-game schedule. We'll be playing them at the Bryant Athletic Field off Gano Street.

Tennis

Our tennis team has 14 matches this season, with several boys coming back from last year's team. Coach Harry Robinson has scheduled matches with Quinnipiac, Providence College, Portland Branch of University of Maine, and others indicated on the schedule printed in this newsletter. The team will enter the Southern New England Conference Tournament to be played in South Dartmouth, Mass., on April 12 and 13. They will finish the season May 17 by playing in the N.A.I.A. spring tournament.

Basketball

We ended our basketball season with a 15-7 record, which is a good season. A lot of things have to be taken into consideration. First of all, we did not start any seniors on this year's ball club, but the entire starting five will be back with us next year. Secondly, we had some very tough games. Many of our opponents were really keyed up for our games. They knew we had run up a streak of 10-0, so every team was fired up to knock off Bryant.

Our second half of the schedule was a tough one. The couple of games we lost, we might have won. But, that's basketball! We did come back and defeat S.M.T.I. 90-81. That was the team that had stopped our 35-game winning streak. I know that Tom Duffy was happy with the way the boys played the balance of the season.

We did make it to an N.A.I.A. play-off game against New Haven College, but lost it 77-70, giving New Haven the best game of the local teams who played them.

Next year? We have the same five starters coming back, as well as our sixth, seventh, and eighth key reserve men on the team. We'll lose Jim Squadrito and John McVeigh, our senior co-captains, and Peter Sullivan. Our five starters this year all averaged in double figures for the season, led by sophomore Don Gray with 17.2 points per game, junior Ben Billie with 15.1, sophomore George Yates 14.0, junior Dave Greenblatt 12.0, and junior Joe Goddard with 10.

Ben Billie, who pulled down 386 rebounds this year for an average of 17.5 per game, pulled down 25 rebounds against Sacred Heart University. This is one rebound short of the school record for a single game.

We have a couple of boys up from the Freshman team—Paul Viveiros, a fine outside shooter who can really hit from the corners, and Joe Caromile, who played with Paul at Bristol (R. I.) High School. Both will help us out quite a bit.

It should be a great season next year!

The final statistics published by National Collegiate Sports Service will be out shortly, and although we've had a good season, I don't think we will be ranked nationally.

Maurice "Moe" W. Clare, III, is assistant to the Director of Athletics and Student Activities. He graduated from Bryant in 1966.

Please Note This Correction . . .

In the January alumni newsletter we reported the selection of Lynn Jenney Case '61 as one of the "Outstanding Young Women of America", along with five other alumnae.

The biographical information printed along with Lynn's name was not correct and we wish to correct the announcement.

Lynn is an accounting major now associated with Aetna Life and Casualty in Hartford, Connecticut, as an investment securities analyst in the Common Stock Department.

Her duties require the analysis of financial statements of public utility companies to ascertain their investment potential by Aetna.

Lynn and her husband, William, reside in New Hartford, Connecticut.

CLASS RINGS

If you did not purchase a Class Ring when you were here at Bryant or want to replace your Class Ring, the College Book Store has some good news for you.

A newly designed Bryant College ring is available to alumni. There are several choices of settings and styles. Women have a choice of a dinner ring-style or regular class ring.

This is the same ring now being delivered to graduating seniors.

A note from you to the College Book Store will bring a folder with more information.
