I guess by now, darling, you've had your turn out. How do you feel about moving to Kansas City of yourself and staying in the hospital until you're completely all right. I miss you, darling. This past week has been so wonderful, I'll never forget it, darling. I'll remember every hour we've been together these past three months. They were wonderful, darling, you'll never know what things have meant to me. I love you so. I wish it was a week ago today.
now and then this joker would fall asleep. Your luck was with me that trip, angel.

From that being we caught a bus and got here about 10:30 this morning. I had to get a place to eat, and I didn't get a good meal. From the dope 3:00 got so far now, the train officers aren't so bad, but the instructors and some of the flight line officers are really chicken.

The washouts here are high, about 50%, and about half of the lucky ones that do get through are flight officers. But maybe I'm just spoiled because of Stewart Field. (I say that glorious name in deep reverence.)

I didn't drink any of the scotch on the way down, there wasn't a club or a dining car in our section of the train, and I'll take it easy now that I'm here, weekend in town.

Today I had my first meal since Friday afternoon. We only had about five hours sleep too, so I'm going to hit the sack until one, when the ground is ready in, already.

I love you my darling, and miss you so much. So outfit I see you again in ten long weeks. Keep that wonderful smile on your face, and remember, I'll be missing you always. I love you as ever.
