

A Field of Pumpkins

MARTHA CHRISTINA

Glimpsed from the train they're a sudden
and short-lived gift.

A conference of cold
and golden globes,
luminaries,
hundreds aglow
against the earth's November brown.

Already miles behind us, a sweet collective memory
without a single word exchanged.