You and I

GREGORY SHERL

This morning we decide to build a baby in your belly.

I call in sick to work and the toast tastes better than it did yesterday.

I say I want to make a baby that drops from you like the 508 Parachute Infantry Regiment during the D-Day landings.

You say You're some kind of sweet.

I imagine bowling in a new pair of socks.

At Babies "R" Us, we look at strollers, diaper bags, organic cotton burp cloths, convertible cribs.

I check my checking account. I can't afford the finished product so we put the baby on layaway.

You finger the fast forward button on the remote control.

I touch your eye with my eye and I can't see anything.

After, we drink water from the faucet. It tastes better than the bottled water we drank from the refrigerator yesterday.
