

At the Harbor

MARTHA CHRISTINA

Some days,
light passing
its benevolent hands
over the water
and upended boats
is enough to break
your heart. Break it open, I mean. And what spills out
might surprise you,
like that sudden
laughing gull
rising into the air
and dropping
its shelled lunch
at your feet,
a gift.