Bryant XP: Upgrades to the School

By Eb Mills-Robertson
Editor-In-Chief

Over the past few years, Bryant has upgraded its infrastructure to meet with students' expectations as well as with the mission of the school. It is progressively aiming to provide a student-centered learning environment, which focuses on excellence. The college also had to upgrade its infrastructure and faculty in order to catch up with the changes, which other competing schools have already made. Since Bryant was built in the 1970s, the school had not invested continuously in its infrastructure until recently.

Over the past few years, the Bello Center has been built and many more changes have been instituted. The Rotunda and Salmanson Dining Hall are currently under renovation and with the start of the semester will probably be in operation. It is evident that despite the ongoing construction on several parts of the campus such as the bridge and the pond, Bryant's aesthetic tastes have progressed by leaps and bounds. There seems to be the recurring theme of change and improvement being emphasized by the administration. According to Dr. Tom Eakin, the Vice President for Student Affairs, "students need an atmosphere for the right learning experience." It was with this in mind that the Wellness Center was built, to cater to the fitness of students. The campus has been given a "modern" homogenous look. According to President Ron Machtley, "modern" should not necessarily equate to ugliness, rather functionality and quality. The Bello Center defies expectations and the new library far surpasses the original in both functionality and quality. In terms of technology, the campus now boasts a new trading room and 6ft Plasma screens will be present in the refurbished Rotunda to provide information to students. The changes in the Rotunda were instituted to agree with the new fire marshal codes, which banned students from hanging posters and banners around the Rotunda. Every entering freshman is also given a new laptop, which is a vast improvement and releases pressure on the computer rooms in Koffler.

There has also been a boost in faculty numbers over the past few years. The science department, which used to boast a handful of professors, has gained in numbers including professors from top-notch universities from around the country. Other departments have also grown in ranks and over the past 4 years, there has been approximately a 40% increase in new full time professors. According to Machtley this will likely level off soon. The number of freshmen for the incoming class was also larger than last year's class. This started off rumors among students about the school trying to expand. According to Dr. Eakin, the goal for freshmen was 775 and it just went over by a little bit.

This is not due to the administration actively seeking a boost in the school population but rather because Bryant is receiving more recognition from applicants for its quality as well as great infrastructure.

Food services have also been another area, which has been revamped over the past few years. Aramark used to be the food service on campus. However, due partly to some dissatisfaction with their services probably on the part of students, Aramark no longer caters for the school says Dr. Eakin. Sodexho currently feeds the bulk of

The Bello Center and the Wellness Center are the two newest facilities on campus as Bryant continues to improve its infrastructure.

A Welcome Note from the Student Senate President

Welcome to the 2003-2004 school year! I hope your summer was filled with close friends from home, relaxation, and jobs that will now allow you to live the life of a wealthy college student - lol. I know that I am ready to have a great senior year filled with both challenges and great times with good friends.

I relate the start of a school year to New Year's Eve. And I know what all of you are thinking... I'm not talking about all the fun filled parties with Kool-Aid and potato chips. Rather, I'm talking about what each of us goes through at the start of a new year: the resolutions and the self-promises to turn over a new leaf. Most people get excited at the new chance to start over. Every September, college students arrive on campus to start a brand new school year with high hopes for good grades, lasting relationships, and a year that will go down in our life's history. We get excited about all of the things that await us, all of challenges we will overcome, and all of the goals that we are going to attain. For without hope and expectations, things have no meaning.

Let's take me for instance, I have started every school year since I can remember saying that I was going to spend more time hitting the books. I was going to get a 4.0, I was going to eat better and make the gym my new home, but most of all never again would I procrastinate. No longer would I sit up joking with friends until 11 pm and then start studying for that huge test. These goals or "resolutions" were going to be the basis for the next year of my life. But of course the only hitting of the books I ever did was when my head fell from the palm of my hand into the book when I fell asleep in the comfortable chairs in the library. In fact, as I write this I am drinking a coke and eating microwave popcorn and I know the only time I am going to see the gym this week is when I give a tour for Admission.

And to top it off, it is 11:30 p.m. and I am writing this article a day before it's due and, of course, I have known about it since I was elected President. But once Tuesday rolls around and the semester starts, I will know that the summer is over and I will definitely put my resolutions in effect. But I realize as I begin my senior year, my resolutions will be a little different and not as stringent as I have made them in the past. That is part of maturing and realizing that we need to make our plans somewhat flexible.

I think the following quote can be applied to each of us, regardless of the class you are in. "Though no one can go back and make a brand new start, anyone can start from now and make a brand new ending." This quote applies to our lives here at Bryant as a student body and everywhere else we go. Over the past three years, I have seen so many students sit in their rooms and talk about all of the ways in which Bryant can improve, but those thoughts and ideas never really leave the four walls of that residence hall room. This is the year to join a club or simply participate in a senate election to get your views out. I know that for years the Senate has tried to improve Bryant to our full ability but one realization that I have come to, is that we can't do this without the rest of the student body. We are counting on each of you to come to our aid and constructively help the administration to bring Bryant to a new level.

I have full confidence that you will not only be satisfied with what you see from the Senate this next year but I hope that each of you take an active role in making Bryant the best it can be. Each of us has a true opportunity to make a difference and I fully intend to using this opportunity. I hope you do too. For returning students, the start of the semester is an exciting time for two reasons. We have the opportunity to see faces we have missed seeing over the past three months. The other exciting aspect of returning, is welcoming the 780 students who will be joining us this year as the Class of 2007.

Returning students can remember their freshman year as if it was just yesterday.

Welcome Guide

Editor's Comments: Welcome Freshmen

By Eb Mills-Robertson

As we begin another semester, I am caught up in the excitement of moving back onto campus. I am as nervous as a freshman in the Bryant bookstore searching for class books. I do not think it is because I will have a hard time finding my books.

Rather, I think all the butterflies in my stomach are due to the thoughts of how much of a dent these textbooks will make on my bank account. This coupled with the fact that I have to avoid the path to the Bryant Center (which looks like it experienced a bomb strike by several geese) are some of the constants that remind Bryant students that they are back at school.

Looking around campus, I have to admit that over the past three years, Bryant's aesthetic tastes have progressed. The Bryant campus looks great and seems to have benefited from the recent changes.

With the ban on posters and banners, students are being forced to develop more creative methods of advertising and the school will have to go high-tech to meet these changing needs. It says a lot for the administration when it caters to students' needs. The new auditorium will be a welcome addition and I am sure that it will cater to the needs of SPB on movie nights and more importantly, the needs of the Bryant Players. I also have to say 'kudos' to the administration for getting rid of the asbestos in the ceilings.

This year, I wondered how a paper such as The Archway could serve as a voice for the student body and the administration. I believe that with all the changes on campus, The Archway might also have to change to meet with this new demand for advertising as well as keep pace with events happening on campus.

Therefore, I wondered how to go about my first opinion piece. Should I make it poignant and sappy or should I start the semester off with a bang and point out various things that could have been done on campus over the summer break. I decided that there would be time enough during the semester to affect change. Thus, this issue is especially dedicated to the freshmen.

To the freshmen, I say welcome to Bryant College. Congratulations to you for your new won freedom (I know you love your parents but could not wait to get out of the house) and for the beginning of semi self-independence (God only knows that we still rely on the extra cash from parents and family).

Moving in can be difficult, especially if you live on the 4th floor of Hall 15. Between the humidity and the effort of lugging most of your belongings to the 4th floor, all I feel is sympathy for you. However, it is all part of the college experience and getting involved quickly on campus is the fastest way to make Bryant your new home.

There are numerous organizations on campus, which would welcome freshmen on board. The Archway falls into this category and, of course, if you are reading this article that means you need to come up to the 3rd floor of the Bryant Center to join.

The Student Programming Board (SPB) and Multicultural Students Union (MSU) are two of the largest organizations on campus. They also host some of the best shows on campus such as Mr. Bryant and Extravaganza Night. There are also numerous jobs available on campus. To freshmen looking for jobs, the athletics department is always looking for new recruits. The faculty suites and the Academic Center for Excellence are also huge recruits of students who want to be peer tutors or office assistants.

Over the next few years, you will all be introduced to the joy of AIM if you already do not use it. It will become one of your lifelines in college. It will prove to be one of the only ways to get in touch with other freshmen in your class for the homework you missed (since you skipped class) or serve as the icebreaker you need, to work up the nerve to talk (oops!! I mean type) to the girl you have a crush on. With every 'Ping,' you will start to get on your roommate's nerves and probably, you will have to request a new roommate by the end of the second week.

Learn this lesson and memorize the following: "I will learn to turn the volume of my computer down while on AIM."

Also, over the next few years, some of you might try to become pros at underage drinking. However, remember that the seeming joys of underage drinking are cut really short by an administration, which is committed to doing its duty. There are consequences ranging from fines to losing housing.

To all freshmen, I think you should be aware of the fact that there is a Counseling Service available on campus. If there are things you cannot talk to your parents about, there are always several offices full of people who are ready to listen, such as the Women's Center, Campus Ministries and Counseling Services (all of which are available to both sexes).

For some of you, it's a whole new world living away from home. The next few years will help determine who you are. Take an active part in Bryant life. Have fun, but study hard. Welcome to the Bryant and try to broaden your horizons.

Bryant Health Services has the cure for you

By Betty Cotter
Director of Health Services

Health Services extends a warm welcome to all new and returning students. We are located in Residence Hall #16 and offer a variety of programs and services.

The clinical staff includes a part-time physician, certified family nurse practitioners, and a health educator. The hours are Monday through Friday, 8:30 - 4:30 P.M. EMTs from the Office of Public Safety are available at 232-6001 when Health Services is closed.

Students who are ill or have health problems are welcome to walk-in between 8:30 a.m. and 11:00 a.m. or make an appointment for the afternoon.

All health care and advice are completely confidential. Parents are only notified in the event of a life threatening illness or injury.

Services include:

1. Treatment of illnesses and injuries
2. Daily delivery of prescription medications at 3 p.m.
3. List of referrals to off-campus specialists
4. Laboratory services available at 3:15 p.m. (can be billed to your health insurance)
5. Disabled student counseling
6. Women's health care
7. Sexually transmitted disease treatment
8. Healthy Spring Break Program
9. Health education
10. Peer Education Program (call x6703 for more information)
11. AIDS Awareness Day (December 1)

Again, welcome to Bryant College, and please stop by for a visit or call 6220 for an appointment.

CONVOCATION 2003

Wednesday, September 10
3:30 p.m. in the MAC

Convocation is literally "a calling together," and our Convocation Ceremony at the start of each academic year celebrates the first annual gathering of the entire Bryant College community. This is an important time. We gather to recognize and greet each other and to welcome new members. Most significantly, the tradition behind Convocation calls for members of the community to reaffirm their commitment to the shared values and the purposes that set us apart as a college. Everyone is welcome and encouraged to attend!

Wise Words from Returning Students

David Miner, '05
Management Major

"The best advice I can give to freshmen is for them to try something new and get involved. Meeting new people with the same interests opens doors and allows you a chance to get involved in the Bryant community."

Andrea Barbosa, '04
Marketing and Communication Major

"Don't forget that these will be the best four years of your life. Enjoy them and make the most of them. If you work hard it'll pay off in the end. But don't forget to have fun."

Julie Saucier, '05
Marketing and Communication Major

"Take advantage of on-campus activities. Get Involved! It makes all the difference. Don't rush it! Enjoy it and study abroad!"

Recipe of the Week: Broccoli and Roasted Red Pepper Pasta

The Archway will be sponsoring a new feature called "Recipe of the Week" in the Variety section. These are simple recipes especially dedicated to seniors and juniors living in the townhouses, who may need some inspiration for improved dining. All students are welcome to submit recipes from home or that they have made (Easy Macs do not necessarily fall under the category of recipes). Pictures are also welcome. Submit recipes to The Archway in the Bryant Center on the third floor. The Archway reserves the right to feature recipes as it sees fit.

Ingredients

- 2 red bell peppers
- 1 teaspoon balsamic vinegar
- 1 pinch crushed red pepper flakes
- Salt to taste
- Freshly ground black pepper to taste
- 2 cups (8 oz./240 g) broccoli florets
- 12 ounces (360 g) penne or other sturdy pasta
- Olive oil cooking spray
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh garlic
- 1 or 2 anchovy fillets (optional), chopped
- 2 vine-ripened tomatoes, seeded and diced
- 2 teaspoons dried basil
- 4 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Preparation - Estimated cooking time: Under 30 minutes -

- 1.) Preheat the broiler. Place peppers on a broiling pan. Broil, turning frequently, until skins blister and turn black. Transfer the peppers to a bowl, cover with plastic wrap and set aside for 10 minutes.
- 2.) To peel peppers, place under cool running water and peel away blistered skins. Slice open and wash out seeds. Place the peppers in a food processor or blender; add balsamic vinegar, crushed red pepper flakes, salt and pepper. Puree until smooth.
- 3.) Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Add broccoli florets and cook for 1 minute. Scoop out the broccoli with a slotted spoon and set aside. Bring the water back to a boil.
- 4.) Cook pasta until al dente, about 8 minutes.
- 5.) Meanwhile, spray a large skillet with cooking spray and place pan over medium-low heat. Add garlic and chopped anchovies, if using. Cook, stirring, for 30 seconds. Stir in tomatoes and increase the heat to medium. When the tomatoes begin to simmer, stir in pepper puree and broccoli; cook for 2 minutes. Stir in basil and remove from the heat.
- 6.) Drain the pasta and add to the skillet, stirring to coat.
- 7.) Spoon into shallow bowls and garnish each with 1 tablespoon grated Parmesan.

Senate President

It was definitely a time of uncertainties... a time when you thought you would never be able to find the friends you had at home (but of course you did), a time that each of us never thought we would be able to cope with the amount of reading thrown at us (but we managed), and, despite the uncertainties, we hoped it would never end.

But with every freshmen class that enters Bryant, there is a senior class that must prepare to leave the surroundings that we have known for the past three years.

So for the 2003 - 2004 school year, I challenge each of you to take this year and make a new ending. Each of us has the chance to start a brand new year. I dare you to take that extra step and make this year what you want it to be.

Think hard about what your resolutions are going to be this semester, create self-promises that mean something to you, and make sure your "new leaf" is one you will be proud of!

The Bryant Center Presents:

Simon Says: Do the Right Thing

By Toby Simon

Welcome new students and welcome back returning students! I'm Toby Simon and the Director of the Women's Center at Bryant. This year I will be a regular columnist for The Archway offering advice and other useful information on relationships, sexuality, and gender issues.

For new students this is an amazing time in your lives. You will always remember your first few months of college a time for exploration, experimentation, incredible learning, and the development of new friendships. There really is no other time quite like this.

And of course, there is no time quite like "la rentrée" as the French say—the return to campus. Everyone looks fabulous.

With warm weather and skimpy clothes, students are able to strut about and show off the remains of a summer tan or the results of a workout regime. There's a whole lot of checking-each-other-out going on. And there's a whole lot of wondering what the new year will bring with respect to relationships, dating, and intimacy.

So it seems fitting at the beginning of the new year for returning students and a fresh start for first year students, to offer some random thoughts about relationships. I've written about this in earlier Archway articles, but I thought it might be a good way to kick off my column this year.

It has to do with doing the right thing now that you're here. Of course we hope you've always done the right thing, but just in case...

College students arrive on campus having had sexual experiences ranging from abstinence to intercourse. Maybe students already know what's appropriate sexual conduct. But then again, maybe they don't.

I find that college men and women view sex differently. Male students seem to be more comfortable with recreational sex and sex without any strings attached. That is often a more difficult sell for women who have been raised in ways that value relationships and intimacy.

Sometimes these attitudes cause conflict for both men and women especially when there is no communication about how each person feels. I've also found that college women often need guidance with assertiveness skills and aren't sure how to go about getting what they want and need in a relationship.

So what do I mean by doing the right thing? For starters, let's talk about virginity. It's alive and well on the Bryant campus, and there's no race or competition about "losing it." Note to first year virgins: there's no law that says you have to lose your virginity by Thanksgiving!

Plenty of students wait until they are in committed relationships—marriage or other—to be sexually intimate. And just because you've had sex with one person at some point in your life, doesn't mean that you have to have sex with each new potential partner.

You can and should reassess each new situation deciding whether or not the person is worthy. Remember Elaine and the infamous "sponge-worthy" Seinfeld episode.

Do the right thing about respect. Too many secondary and college students across the nation end their day feeling "bothered," "scared," or "degraded" because of others' behaviors towards them.

Often these behaviors constitute acts of sexual harassment and have long been a part of the school experience, dismissed as an unfortunate part of growing up.

Sexually harassing misconduct is serious and it ranges from inappropriate comments about a student's appearance, pressure for dates or sexual activity, to criminal activities such as sexual assault. Each one of these behaviors can affect students' emotional well being and their ability to learn. So do the right thing and treat one another with respect and dignity.

And finally, do the right thing about alcohol. Want to be a better lover? Try having sex when you're not wasted. Try communicating clearly with a partner what you like to do in bed and ask your partner what he or she likes to have done.

That's actually a turn-on! Having sex if you are drunk or with someone who is drunk is risky business.

For starters, it's lousy sex according to most experts and it's always better to wait until both parties are sober and alert. Also, it may be illegal behavior. Laws about sexual assault state that being intoxicated can sometimes make it very difficult to consent to sex, although it often depends on the degree of impairment.

Sexual interactions are an important part of our sexuality—they also should be fun, caring, mutual, and interactive. Being hammered and not remembering the sexual encounter is neither interactive nor caring.

Sex is perfectly natural but not naturally perfect. There's always room for improvement and more learning.

Communication is key as is respect and safety. Enjoy the start of this new year and be safe.

Questions? Concerns about any of this? I'm at x6855 or tsimon@bryant.edu. All calls are confidential.

You can look for further columns from Toby Simon, Director of the Women's Center, on a bi-weekly basis in The Archway.

The information edge: Welcome Freshmen! Library offers several services

By Colleen Anderson
Reference Librarian

The Douglas & Judith Krupp Library located in the George E. Bello Center for Information and Technology invites all freshmen to stop by and investigate the services offered throughout the new library.

The reference desk is the second desk on the first floor. Reference librarians are available to help students navigate the many print and electronic resources available to them. These resources can also be accessed in your residence hall room or off-campus via the library web page at <http://web.bryant.edu/~library>.

Click on the e-resources link to be connected to databases containing articles (in EBSCO and Proquest), news (in Lexis/Nexis) and financial data (in Mergent Online).

The reference librarians can help you locate the appropriate database to satisfy your research needs, and also teach you how to find the information you need from the database.

To learn more about a particular database, sign up for one of the ongoing database instructional sessions offered throughout the semester at 7:00pm Monday-Thursday. (See Training Sessions under the Reference Services link).

If you are working on a paper or project and experiencing difficulty locating the information you need to complete the assignment, call the reference desk at 232-6299 and ask to make an appointment with a reference librarian.

During an individual appointment, you will discuss your research needs with a reference librarian and he/she will walk you through those print and electronic resources.

Want to learn more? Librarians Colleen Anderson (canderson@bryant.edu) and Paul Roske (proske@bryant.edu) invite you to stop by and introduce yourself!
