Bryant Students to Direct Special Olympics

Jennifer Speicher
Games Director,
Special Olympics '93

Jennifer Mills
Assistant Games Director
Special Olympics '93

Two senior marketing majors, Jennifer Speicher, and Jennifer Mills, have been selected to direct the Northern Rhode Island Special Olympics that will take place on Saturday, May 8.

Special Olympics is a sports training program and an athletic competition for mentally handicapped children and adults. This year, the event is expected to draw in an excess of 1,500 competitors and fans to Bryant. The entire campus is welcome to become involved, either by joining the planning committees, or just by coming to watch.

For twelve years now, the games have been organized and hosted by students. The organization and directing of Special Olympics is a big responsibility. Speicher, of Killingworth, CT has been named Games Director, and Mills will be the Assistant Games Director.

As Director, Speicher will help plan and facilitate with the administration. In addition, she is in charge of making sure that all volunteers, perform their jobs effectively. Traditionally, the fraternities and sororities on campus have volunteered, but they try to get everyone on campus involved.

Speicher says that she and Mills will need financial assistance from local businesses, and anyone else who can contribute, due to the fact the Special Olympics event was eliminated from the Student Activities budget. Fortunately, the Fundraising Committee has been successful in raising the money. $1,500 is needed to start the activities off right.

This is the third year that Speicher has been involved with the Special Olympics. Since high school, Speicher has been interested and involved in the program. She feels an immense sense of accomplishment working with Special Olympics. She remarked, "It is really satisfying to be helping others."

Meetings for the event will be held on Wednesdays, 9pm, in Room 2B. All are welcome to attend.

Oxford Debate Returns to Bryant

Julia Arouchon
Archway Staff Writer

Bryant will host its sixth annual Oxford Debate sponsored by the Student Programming Board and the Debate Society on Wednesday, March 31 at 7:30pm in the Papitto Dining Room.

Four Oxford Debaters will debate the topic "This house despises Political Correctness" with the following Bryant Debaters: Jefferey Kelly, Carolyn Lamothe, Bettianne Flanders and Rob Pures.

The Oxford Debaters offered five possible topics to Bryant and decided on the issue of political correctness. "We are really excited about the topic," said Flanders.

"It is going to be tough to debate," Flanders added, "because there are so many sides to the issue."

Flanders cited the political, academic and literary issues which have involved political correctness.

"The issue of racism comes up as well," said Flanders.

Since the Oxford Debaters gave Bryant topics to choose from, they are expected to be better prepared for the debate than they have been in recent years.

The Bryant debaters are currently working on gathering information. Gary Casagrande from the Debate Society is assisting the team.

"This years debate should be as funny as last years, but it should be more rational," says Casagrande.

Patrick Fitzgerald who organized the event for SPB believes the debate will be interesting because of the topic. "It is an issue most everyone has an opinion on," added Fitzgerald.

The Oxford Union Society founded in 1823 is the oldest and arguably the most famous student debating society in the world.

Many world leaders have addressed the Union Society on both serious and comical topics. However, overall the Society is dedicated to student debating. This past January the World Debating Championships were held in Oxford for the first time ever in England.

Fitzgerald says SPB looks forward to the debate each year. "It is an honor for Bryant to be one of the colleges to host the debate."

On March 29, the Third Annual Marjorie Burgoyne French Visiting Executives Program will be held at Bryant featuring local CEO's and executives. These executives will be here to interact with graduate and undergraduate classes. They will provide students with an insight on their positions, as well as an objective depiction of the business world.

There will be a free buffet breakfast open to all students at 7:30 am on March 30. Any students who are interested in attending the breakfast, please contact Sandy in the Center for Management Development Office at 232-6209.

Equality of the Sexes

The history of women is the history of prejudice. During Women's History Month, the achievements of women are emphasized which gives people a different perspective of history.

Women are not the only subjects of prejudice. Many other people are targets of prejudice; whether it be because of their different physical features, such as the color of their skin or because they have different political, religious or social beliefs.

Women are often discriminated against because some men still have the old fashioned idea that a woman's place is in the home. However, since the time of the Women's Suffrage Movement, women have been given more educational, occupational and social opportunities and advantages. They have taken advantage of these opportunities and have not only made great strides, but they have become an integral part of history.

One Bryant student commented, "Women have not only made great achievements, but we have set ourselves aside from men; therefore gaining our own identity."

Many women are now less apprehensive about competing with men for the same jobs, because they are more confident in their strengths and abilities. However, women's achievements are not rewarded equally with men's achievements. According to a recent survey, although there are women in almost every field, they are still earning less than men.

Women have definitely come a long way by creating their own niches socially and historically. Maybe one day, they will have equal status and will be compensated equally. All men and women are created equally, therefore they should be treated equally.

We Are People Too!

To the Editor:

From the viewpoint of an African-American, I can truly say that it hurts to see that a person can be so ignorant and naive. I'm West Indian (Virgin Islands), and was able to learn about the many prominent black leaders in history. However, here on the "mainland," blacks learn little about their past. Why is it that in history text books, blacks get one or two pages, usually covered in one day? People as a society need to "Wake Up!"

I personally do not agree with the setting aside of a month to celebrate black history. Thos month also happens to be the shortest month of the year. There should be a Mulicultural Year; that way, no one is left out.

I would just like to end with this quote from Spot-It Education:

"Ignorance breeds fear, fear fuels hatred, hatred feeds ignorance..."

And don't be afraid; we are people too.

DeJongh K. Wells

We Are in Reality

To the Editor:

This letter is in reply to last week's "Back to Reality" editorial.

First, it should be pointed out that "All Men Are not Created Equal." At the time that that statement was written, blacks were not considered to be human beings. Why is it that blacks (and other minorities) had to cry oppression and demand their rights given to them by the Constitution?

"Caucasian History Month" is celebrated every month. Special holidays include Lincoln's Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Fourth of July...the list goes on. American history has been a white history for years.

In 1926, Carter Goodwin Woodson started the campaign that enabled the contributions of black Americans to be recognized in U.S. and world history. Black History Month is not meant to alienate other races; it's not meant as a month to rally or conspire against whites. The original intent, at least from our understanding, was to educate not only whites, but blacks and other minorities as well about a culture that was so much a part of American life, but was ignored for so many years. Black History Month is meant to encourage Americans to recognize that what black Americans have gone through must not be repeated ever again; it's a way to learn. In addition, the month is a short-term attempt to accomplish a long-term goal, which is to change prejudiced ways of thinking that are incorporated, however subtle or blatant, in our economic, political, and educational systems.

The case of Rodney King, who was beaten by four white police officers two years ago, is a perfect example of how racial discrimination exists today. It is very hard to believe that one could deny that any racial "oppression" or discrimination does not exist.

If you attended one of the programs for Black History Month, then, we urge you to think again about its real meaning. If not, then, we believe that attending at least one of the programs would have erased some of the beliefs that you have. You must want to know more about issues like these, and the only way is to ask questions and be exposed to more cultural activities.

Equal Opportunities for All

To the Editor:

In response to one student's "Back to Reality" editorial, I do agree that there should be more than a Black History Month. A "Puerto-Rican History Month," or a "Japanese History Month" would be great. The best situation, though, would be for different races and ethnicities to be celebrated on days scattered throughout the year.

All of our academic lives, American students have learned U.S. history from the white males' point of view. Women and black Americans are such a part of our history, but I don't recall spending too much time learning about those subjects.

Ironically, March is Women's History Month; should that be banned as well? American women have been subjected to discrimination, and still are. That is currently illustrated by the wide disparity of wages between men and women of all races and ethnicities. Should the progress and continuous fight for inequality of women be ignored, too?

As a black female, I cannot sympathize with you. I am a senior, and in the process of searching for a job. I will be hired on the basis of my qualifications and abilities; not my skin color. What affirmative action do for me is get me in the door. It provides opportunities for minorities and women who have to fight misconceptions and prejudices in workplaces that are still predominately headed by white males. This is not to imply that white males do not work hard for their achievements, but the point is that many minorities and women don't even get a chance to prove that they are capable and work just as hard. My chances of obtaining even an interview would most likely be greatly reduced if those standards (which attempt to guard against personal biases held by the interviewer or the company) weren't established. Businesses exist ultimately to make money, and if an employee, black or white, male or female, doesn't add in producing profits, then that person will be fired, regardless.

Please Be Responsible

To the entire Bryant community:

BRYCOL Student Services Foundation, Inc. owns the rights to vending services on the Bryant campus. This means that we operate Coca-Cola machines in all residence halls and the candy machines in halls 14, 15, and 16. All of these machines provide a distinct service to residents in the halls as well as to Public Safety and the cleaning staff. Furthermore, BRYCOL holds vending as a sacred operation.

Recently, we have experienced an influx of vandalism on our machines. Evidence shows that people have tried to remove the money from the machines, thus removing the capacity for the machine to function. This practice is illegal and furthermore irresponsible. Money is removed from the machines on a daily basis and therefore any attempt to retrieve it is a waste of time.

Due to this continuous vandalism many of our machines do not accept change or dollar bills. We apologize for any inconveniences this may cause however, we ask for the entire community's cooperation in dealing with the vending machines. We do this because vandalism can be stopped-but not without a community effort to curb it. BRYCOL is trying to provide a service to the college community and if vandalism continues to take place this service can not be provided adequately. We urge all students, faculty and administration to act

Innocent and Unappreciated

To The Editor:

I decided to write this opinion down for all to read because I am amazed at the hostility that has arisen in the past as well as the present regarding it. When the topic comes up, people seem to have a decision in their head and don't want to hear any facts that differ from what seems obvious, but it's not as obvious as you may believe, or want to believe.

The Defendants: Los Angeles Police Officers.

- 1.) Sgt. Stacey Koon
- 2.) Lawrence Powell

3.) Theodore Briseno

4.) Timothy Wind

The Plaintiff: Ex-Con Rodney King.

The night was March of 1991, California Highway Patrol (CHiP's), is following a motor vehicle driving in excess of 115 MPH. The driver was Rodney King, an ex-con on parole. After leading the California Highway Patrol car as well as pursuing Los Angeles Metropolitan Police cruisers on a chase, attempting to run over Police Officers, and threatening the well-being of innocent citizens and Police Officers, Rodney King pulls over. Thus the controversy begins.

Woken from the sound of sirens, an amateur photographer named George Holliday videos what appears to be a ruthless beating of Rodney King dealt out by racist, white Los Angeles Police Officers. Yet, if anyone would care to even consider evidence that mounted against Rodney King and for the Officers, if anyone dared to place themselves in the shoes of those officers, you would realize that it was far from that.

According to Police training, an individual under the influence of the illegal narcotic PCP is classified as a "Policeman Nightmare." He/She will exhibit nearly superhuman strength and will be able to resist most tactical efforts to be subdued. Some noticeable symptoms are, glassy eyes, a blank stare, a tensing of muscles, and an inability to maintain balance.

The car door opens and Rodney King steps out of the car. One of the California Highway Patrol Officers stated in her testimony, "He seemed to look right through me. I was scared. He smiled at me and chuckled. He pointed aimlessly at a circling Los Angeles Police Helicopter, then turned 180 degrees and grabbed his right buttocks cheek and wiggled it at me."

At this point in the incident, Sgt. Stacey Koon, (a 14-year veteran of the Los Angeles Police Department states that he said to the Officer, "We'll take over from here."

King testified recently in the second trial that, "I did not want to go back to prison. I wanted to get away. 11

The video filmed by Mr. Holliday is a 4 minute long video, of which 93 seconds are of the beating, of which only 83 seconds are shown by the press. The 10 seconds left out are the beginning ones that show Rodney King standing up after being ordered to stay on his knees, and attempts to tackle officer Powell. The officers, believing Rodney King was under the influence of PCP, withdrew their "batons" and began to strike King to subdue him as taught by the Los Angeles Police Academy.

A point I wish to make here is that whether or not King was on PCP remains to be seen. However, if we try and imagine being in their shoes, with a wife/husband and children at home, all of which love you, you want to be able to go home at the end of the night, after doing a job many people would not want to do. It is ridiculous to be afraid to use Police-taught techniques because you fear that someone may think it was too violent. These officers believed, beyond a shadow of a doubt the King was on PCP and was a severe threat to them. Several days later King was tested for drugs and tested positive for heroin and cocaine.

As the so-called beating begins, Sgt. Stacey Koon orders Powell to attempt to handcuff the individual, (King). As Powell grabbed one wrist and Officer Briseno grabbed another, King sat up and flung the officers off of him, knocking them down to the ground. As Powell stands, King stands and leaps toward him as if to tackle. Powell withdraws his "Baton" and begins to strike King.

Officer Wind, a rookie officer assigned to patrol with Officer Powell, (still on his 16 month probationary officer period,) joined in the subduing. Powell and Wind order King to lie face down over and over. However, he continued to exert aggressive behavior (as was explained by an officer at the Los Angeles Police Academy who trains the "Use-Of-Force Technique").

Many of the blows from the batons were used to straighten out Kings legs as he attempted to stand, as well as keep his arms out where they were non-combative. Each blow is delivered to the leg region and the shoulder region for just that reason, as taught in training.

Sgt. Koon testified that, as taught in training, and electrical stun-gun was used on King. This sends volts of electricity into the suspects body, usually paralyzing the muscles temporarily and allowing easy subduing. King was tasered twice, both times still able to resist and attempt to stand.

Sgt. Koon testified, "At that point I became frightened. I thought that the next step was to either place a choke hold on him, (King), or to use deadly force, (be shot)."

King was told time and time again to lie face down on the ground, yet he continued to rise. If he would have obeyed the orders of the arresting officers, the results would never have been required.

The passenger in the front seat stated, "King was crazy. I was afraid of him. I wanted to jump out of the car, but he was going to fast."

This man who testified in King's behalf was never struck once by any officer. Why? Because he obeyed their commands, and was arrested without incident. If these officers were so intent on dishing out a beating because these people were "Black," then why didn't they beat this man? The answer is obvious, because it wasn't racially motivated. It was done out of fear for their own lives.

King himself was the one who brought the beating upon himself.

Recently a Boston Police Officer was shot to death in the station he worked out of. He was allowing a prisoner to use the phone, when a struggle began and the officer was shot. He leaves behind him a son who was graduating high school this June, a daughter who was getting married this summer, and a wife who loved him. I knew this man well, he was a friend. Yet, I don't see a cry from the public to bring justice upon his murderer. He was killed only weeks ago, and his name is forgotten. Why don't people care for him as much as they care about an ex-con who was beaten for resisting arrest. It's simple-because he's a Police Officer, and nobody cares, except other Police Officers.

Police Officers are not the public's enemy, as many seem to believe. They are here to: "protect and to serve." They are paid to do a job that many people would not want to even consider doing. They constantly deal with the criminals of society, those people who rape, murder, rob, deal drugs on a daily basis to protect the streets that we all walk on every day. Without them, society would run loose with anarchy and chaos, yet they are the ones who are the center of all criticism. They used too much force, they didn't use enough force. They took too long to respond, they should have waited instead of hurrying. If they are quick-they are sloppy. If they are slow-they're lazy. People always find something wrong with the Police.

In closing I would like to state that I hope to someday be a Boston Police Officer, and that I have a great deal of respect for those men and women who wear their badge. They are doing something they believe in. I acknowledge the bravery and duty of the four Los Angeles Police Officers.

Sgt. Stacey Koon testified, "Sometimes Police work is brutal. This incident was brutal."

As the defense attorney for Lawrence Powell stated in his closing arguments, "These men are not paid to lose a street fight, they are paid to win."

Public Safety Beat

Archway Staff Writer

Vandalism & Disorderly Conduct

Tuesday, March 9, 1993 9:00 am. The Department of Public Safety (DPS) was contacted by a resident of townhouse "E" block to report some damage that had happened in the early morning hours. The student reported that a friend at another college had told two students at that college that they could make contact with the Bryant students in case they needed an overnight accommodation while the two suspects were in this area. The two suspects arranged to arrive on the Bryant campus and meet with the resident student. After a night at a local drinking establishment, the two suspects and several resident students returned to their townhouse slightly intoxicated. The occupants of the townhouse then made sleeping arrangements for the two suspects- one slept in the commons area while another slept in a bedroom. In the morning, one of the students went upstairs to use the bathroom where she found that someone had defecated and rubbed feces all over the bathroom walls, floor, towels, and toilet. She then went to the bedroom where one of the suspects was allowed to sleep and found that feces were smeared on the bed, sheets, comforter, and CD player. By this time, the two suspects had left the townhouse.

The DPS has sent letters of trespass to both individuals. A cooperative investigation between DPS and the other college's police department has been productive. The two suspects were questioned and admitted their guilt. A check in the sum of $1,673 was sent by the suspects to the residents of the townhouse for cleaning costs incurred.

Motor Vehicle Accident

Tuesday, March 9, 1993 at 12:00 A grounds department employee reported to the DPS that a minor motor vehicle accident had occurred. The employee reported that a vehicle parked behind the Bryant Center had backed into the grounds department jeep as he was driving by. Damage to both vehicles was light.

Harassment

On Thursday, March 11, a student reported to DPS that he had been receiving threatening phone calls and verbal harassment from a group of students. Apparently, the harassment had stemmed from a confrontation between the reporting student and the group while the student was working for Brycol. The student has been informed of the DPS harassing telephone call policy.

Fire Alarm

Thursday, March 11, at 12:55

A fire alarm was received from townhouse "D" block. Smithfield Fire Department (SFD) and DPS checked all of the units for a cause. The alarm was deemed accidental as no immediate cause for activation could be determined.

Shortly after the alarm, an inspection was conducted on a unit in "D" block. The condition of the unit was considered a health and fire hazard by SFD and DPS. There were large holes in the walls, garbage, and dirty cooking utensils strewn about the kitchen and living areas. The occupants were told to clean the area immediately. As this is an ongoing problem, this unit will be subjected to frequent unannounced inspections.

Missing Person

Monday, March 15, at 7:30 pm

DPS received a call from the Rhode Island State Police (RISP) requesting the help of DPS to locate a student. Apparently, the student's sister had not received a call from her brother in the past several days. The sister was concerned because the student was scheduled to fly to Florida, but the airport was closed because of the recent blizzard. She thought that this was highly irregular of him not to call. Shortly thereafter, the sister called DPS to report that she had just been called by the student and that all was OK. RISP was contacted and advised of the situation.

Items Confiscated

While conducting fire alarm testing March 16 in townhouse "L" block, a DPS officer found an empty quarter keg in an upstairs bathroom in plain view. The keg was confiscated and destroyed in the Unistructure compactor.

On the same date, another keg and tap was confiscated from a unit in "G" block during fire alarm testing. The items were in plain view by the kitchen area. The keg and tap were destroyed in the Unistructure compactor.

On March 16, SFD contacted DPS to complete a follow up inspection of a unit in "G" block. Last month, violations were noted by SFD during a fire alarm. The purpose of this visit was to make a determination to see if compliance was made. During the inspection, a large, green road sign with the words "Bryant College" was confiscated from the unit.

In all cases, the occupants of the units have had their names forwarded to College officials for disciplinary action.

Burglary

On Sunday, March 21, DPS was contacted to take a report of a burglary that occurred in townhouse "A" block. The DPS officer found that three bedroom doors had been kicked open. The students reported that several compact discs were stolen along with a pound of hamburger meat. Apparently, entry had been gained through either the back door or sliding glass door. Before leaving, the occupants locked all of the doors, however the slider and back door were unlocked when the students came back from break. Anyone with information on who may have done this is invited to contact DPS. Your anonymity will be guaranteed.

responsibly and act to maintain proper behavior in regards to the vending machines. Furthermore, these vending machines are property of the students, they are here for all of us, and unless we all realize this, we may not any longer have soda machines in the dorms.

To conclude, I hope you all have realized the seriousness of this matter. A service can not be properly offered due to behavior unbecoming of the Bryant community. We must act now, together, to maintain the proper standards of care for the vending machines. So please, realize that no one is gaining from the vandalism; in fact everyone is losing.

Setting Your Priorities Straight

Welcome back from Spring Break! I hope that everyone is refreshed and has an awesome tan. Have you noticed on some cold mornings how an old car starts up? It can start by kicking over one cylinder at a time—coughing and sputtering with clouds of smoke blowing out the exhaust pipes—or turn right over with no fuss at all. You have a choice! You can be a fine-tuned fighting machine ready to take on the world (or at least Bryant College), or a sputtering sparkplug that needs to be repaired. The moral of this story is that a clear vision of your future, and where you see yourself in it, is a top priority in forming goals for your life.

Now, it is the time to envision

Chaplain's Corner

by Rev. Philip Devens

where you see yourselves in two months. Are you going to be working on your tans or "doing all-nighters" to get the course done? When it is time to "kick back" and relax and when it is time to be motivated are different concepts of being. The periods of work and leisure ensure an efficient time management scheme. Some of you may have left the area but the problems you left behind are still here—maybe even worse when you got back. So, when you start your visioning process, take a moment and ask the question, "Where does God fit into my vision?" You could ask God to help you clarify your goals. It is your choice!

Be safe! Take care and God Bless!

Planning a Future in Marketing?

Reception to address marketing careers

by Keith Murray
Marketing Department

An informal "reception" will be held for all Bryant Students who would like to talk about marketing as a major as well as careers in marketing with alums and Bryant faculty next Tuesday, March 30 at 3:30 p.m. in the Gulski Dining Room. The meeting is open to all Bryant students who would like to explore how a successful career in marketing might be achieved. This information and get-acquainted meeting is sponsored by the Department of Marketing and is open to all students who would like to consider marketing as a major. Pizza and soda refreshments will be served. Appropriate attire is casual.

"For some time, now, marketing faculty have felt the need to plan an event that lets students who are undecided or who are thinking of changing majors to find out more about how a major in marketing can help them build a gratifying career and rewarding life-style," says Charles Quigley, professor and chairperson of the department. "In talking with my colleagues, I get the sense that we encounter students all the time in and out of our classes who have a strong interest in learning more about marketing as a business professional. Unfortunately, however frequently neither students nor faculty take the time to discuss the opportunities that are available."

Another Department of Marketing faculty member, Elaine Notarantonio, Associate Professor, indicated that the meeting on Tuesday will fill an informational vacuum. "A lot of individuals I meet fail to appreciate that a career in marketing is really quite attractive. This is the case because it provides the chance for students to pursue a wide range of business careers, like advertising, product management, market research, sales, and general management. In my opinion, few other majors offer the diversity of choice and opportunity to ascend the corporate ladder more quickly."

Other faculty interviewed echoed these sentiments: "Individuals with a marketing background are most frequently designated CEOs in American firms," says Larry Lowe, Associate Professor of Marketing. "I talk to students all the time who fail to appreciate the wide range of opportunities that are open to marketing professionals."

Professor of Marketing, Frank Bingham commented, "I think that marketing as a career path is likely to become even more attractive in the future. As the economy develops and the role of small business in the U.S. becomes even more pervasive, those who have developed their marketing skills and abilities will definitely have an advantage over others in achieving a rewarding and rich professional life."

Tracing the Sources of Bay Pollution

Last week EARTHwise introduced you to Save The Bay and the issues of polluting the Bay and other waterways. But just where does the pollution come from?

The sources of Bay pollution can be broken down into two categories: "point sources" and "non-point sources." Point sources are definite sources that can be easily identified. Non-point sources diffuse, however, and cannot be traced back to a specific point of origin.

Anthropogenic pollutants—those pollutants originating from humans—may originate from point or non-point sources and can be divided into three major classes: fecal wastes, excess nutrients and oxygen-demanding organic matter, and toxic pollutants.

Fecal waste pollutants are those pollutants originating from faulty human waste processing systems. Such pollutants include combined sewer overflows and septic systems.

Combined sewer overflows (CSOs) result when the combination of wastewater and stormwater proves excessive for the existing sewer pipes and treatment plants. This causes some untreated wastewater to be dumped directly into waterways. CSOs are often caused by system overloads, large amounts of precipitation, blocked regulating structures, and leaks and hardware failures.

On-site sewage disposal systems can contaminate surface- and groundwater if they are poorly sited, designed, constructed or maintained, or if they are antiquated. Such failures cause the leaching of raw sewage into the water table. Septic systems failures are often due to leachate from storage tanks and disposal of household chemicals.

Nutrients are chemicals normally essential to plant and animal growth, but in excessive amounts can have harmful effects on aquatic life. Phosphates, for example, encourage algae growth. When algae dies, it requires large amounts of oxygen to decompose. This process causes oxygen-deprivation of the water, which can kill other water plants and animals. Excessive nutrients often originate at one of these sources: wastewater treatment facilities, septic systems, lawn fertilizers, high phosphate laundry detergents, and atmospheric decomposition.

Toxics are organic chemicals or heavy metals, such as copper, lead, and mercury, that produce adverse health and ecological effects. Toxics often come from non-point sources: industrial, commercial, and household waste; agricultural and lawn chemicals; auto emissions and leaks; accidental spills and deliberate chemical disposals; surface runoff; ground water seepage; increased intensity of land use; increasing numbers of impervious surfaces; and marine sources.

Look for more in-depth explorations of these topics in future EARTHwise columns. EARTHwise is brought to you with cooperation from Save The Bay, Rhode Island's leading environmental organization.

An Angel's Arms

*Cold was the waters edge
As it ran with the morning sun
Uncertain of what lay beyond
Gave symptoms for his doubt*

*Soon another came and took his hand
So sure was she in her way
She led him to the warmer depths
And with him there she stayed*

*Fearful she would leave him lone
As a tear fell from his eye
She simply spread her wings of gold
And carried him through the skies.*

Crime Corner

by John D. Larence
Commuter Connection

Everyone has heard of this notorious "bubble" that Bryant students supposedly live in. This bubble helps people feel safe and protected. But what happens when you step outside of this bubble?

Bryant students have to face the real world every time they leave campus to go home or even when they go out for a night in Providence. Listening to the evening news, you hear the stories about car-jacking and hit-and-run robberies and you may think that could never happen to me, but it can. In fact, both crimes have been reported in the Providence area in surprising numbers. Crimes can happen to anyone, anywhere. Even on campus, students with evening classes must walk back to their cars or dorms, often crossing large areas of darkness where anything could happen.

By knowing you are susceptible to crime and assault, you are halfway to preventing it. The other half comes by trying to prevent it. There are many ways to prevent assaults. Two major ways are taking self-defense courses and buying an assault deterrent device.

Assault deterrent devices are items such as pepper and tear gas canisters that can harmlessly deter would-be attackers without causing adverse side-effects. These items also work well on attacking animals.

On March 30, the Commuter Connection is sponsoring an independent vendor, Whitey's Enterprises and Assault Deterrent, in the Bryant Center from 10am to 3pm. The vendor will be selling Assault Deterrent spray (a mixture of red pepper gas and tear gas) to Bryant students and faculty. There will be 1/2 oz. and 3 oz. cans for sale to suit your individual needs. Whitey's Enterprises and Assault Deterrence is not associated with the Commuter Connection.

Bryant Players Present Camelot

by Linda Riemer
Journalism Student

Over the weekend of April 17th, the Bryant Community can escape the grim realities of taxes, tests and term papers for a few hours and return to a time and place where "the climate is perfect all the year."

The Bryant Players are, as we speak, transforming Janikies Auditorium into a semblance of medieval England and transforming a cast of 17 students into royalty, magicians, and Knights in shining armor. They are getting ready to perform Camelot, the popular Alan Jay Lerner musical.

Camelot is the story of the legendary King Arthur, his Knights of the Round Table and the love triangle involving King Arthur, Guenevere, his wife, and Sir Lancelot, his favorite Knight.

The story is filled with action, conflict and intrigue - and magic! There are battles, trials, and dramatic rescues. Most of all, there are songs - many that have become classics. Frederick Loewe's musical score includes well-known ballads such as "If Ever I Would Leave

You," "The Simple Joys of Maidenhood," "How to Handle a Woman," and, of course, "Camelot."

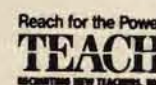

The part of King Arthur will be played by Adam Rubin, a senior marketing major from Sharon, MA. Chris Warner, a freshman from Johnstown, NY, will play the part of Lancelot, and Joanna Hinds, a freshman from Taunton, MA, will play the part of Guenevere.

First-time director Tracy Banasieski, has acted with the Bryant Players for two years, and is very enthusiastic about the production. "Every rehearsal is a surprise. Everything is coming together so nicely! The cast is a very talented one and I think the play will be great," she says. Banasieski is presently looking for a pianist to accompany the singers and a few more students for non-speaking extras.

Performances in April are scheduled for Friday the 16th at 7:30, Saturday the 17th at 2:00 and 7:30, and Sunday the 18th at 2:00. Tickets will be available at the Information Desk and from Bryant Players for $5 general admission and $3 for students.

WEEKEND COMEDY: AN INSIGHT INTO RELATIONSHIPS

Marguerite Phillips
Archway Staff Writer

What would you do if you planned a romantic weekend at a remote cabin with your lover, and found another couple already there on the couch, making out?

Surprised, disappointed, angry, and amused were all of the feelings that Frank, Peggy, Jill and Tony felt when they discovered that their travel agent had mistakenly booked them for the same weekend, at the same cabin.

Weekend Comedy, which was performed at Bryant this past Monday in the auditorium, is a light-hearted play that appeals to a college-aged and over crowd.

For two hours, the audience was able to sit back and enjoy the play, without getting bored or disappointed that it was too short.

At first, the acting was kind of unnatural, but I was able to warm up to the actors by the second scene.

The play took place on a Memorial Day weekend, modern day (I could tell the approximate time by the Batman Returns cereal that Frank liked to eat for breakfast), in a vacation cabin in upstate New York.

The only scenery provided was the main room of the cabin, which contained only a couch, a couple of chairs, and a few tables. However, the play was acted and staged well enough so that the one room wasn't dull to look at.

The first characters that we see are Peggy and Frank, a middle-aged couple, married 23 years, each 48 years old.

Frank is a very predictable, meat-and-potatoes man, who worries about his job, while Peggy seems to like change, and wants to make their relationship more exciting, but doesn't quite know how, because she's not that much different from her spouse.

Peggy is seen trying to act provocative for her husband, wearing a black negligee, which is conservative to a younger couple, but for them it was risqué. It took Frank awhile to get the hint, but eventually, they got into a very amorous position on the couch.

Just as Frank was passionately telling Peggy all of the places where he was going to make love to her, Tony and Jill walk into the cabin, much to the older couple's chagrin.

Tony and Jill are an unmarried couple who have lived together for three years.

They are in their 20s, and are free-willed and well-traveled, with money to spend. They don't seem to have a care in the world, as long as they have fun.

After some arguing, both couples agree to have dinner and champagne together, and share the cabin.

The comedy and the plot becomes really entertaining when Frank and Tony have a running race outside to prove who is the most physically fit (Frank wins by pretending he's hurt, and then taking off when Tony comes to his aide), and when the two men disagree over who's relationship is the most healthy and romantic, and Frank moons them out of spite.

By the second act, it's more apparent that Peggy is frustrated with how Frank spends time with her (he doesn't). It's especially apparent that she doesn't feel appreciated or loved when she pours a beer over Frank's head, and leaves the cabin for several hours.

During that time, it's obvious that Jill is angry with Tony as well because he won't make a commitment to her. So, while Frank is out looking for Peggy, Jill proposes to Tony, because she feels that, if they do not get married, it would be easier for them to walk away from the relationship, and not work out any problems that they might have.

This, of course, brings Tony into a panic (oh no, not... COMMITMENT!).

In the last scene of the second act (there are only two acts), the audience finds out that Tony said yes to Jill's proposal (she knew he would say yes when she heard him crying in the bathroom; that's when she made out the guest list).

We also find out that Frank and Peggy went for a walk by the lake, and threw rocks into the water, a romantic ritual that Tony and Jill did often.

Weekend Comedy is a play that showed contrasts between a young and unseasoned relationship, versus one that was not as obviously passionate, but eternal and real.

All of the actors were well-suited for their roles. Richard Sautter, who played Frank, was great at the physical comedy parts. Peggy's sarcasm was enacted well by Rebecca Byars, and David Taavon, who portrayed Tony, well... he looked good. The best all-around actress, compared to the three others, was Gayle Fennell, who was Jill. Her timing with the jokes was played well, and her character was believable from the start. None of the performances would have won the actors a Tony, but it was pleasantly enjoyable; great for families (there was no swearing) and couples, both young and old.

Weekend Comedy first opened in April of 1985, at a dinner playhouse in Kansas City. It was written by Jeanne and Sam Bobrick, a couple who has, by evidence of the play's storyline, obviously experienced the trials and tribulations of a long-term relationship.

Weekend Comedy was performed by the Alpha-Omega Players of the Repertory Theater of America, the largest acting tour group in the nation.

Women's Issues

A Different Yardstick

Marguerite Phillips
Archway Staff Writer

"Men and women are measured by a different yardstick - and that makes me angry."

-Barbara Streisand

In honor of Women's History Month, the following are excerpts from a speech given last summer by famous singer/actress/producer/director Barbara Streisand. She talks about society's perceptions of men and women, which is still a much debated subject. Despite the great achievements that women are making, the increased job opportunities available, and the dissemination of stereotypes, women are still expected to be passive in some ways. Ms. Streisand's oration was given for the Academy of Achievement:

"Women have come a long way. Not too long ago we were called dolls, tomatoes, chicks, babes, and broads. We've graduated to being called tough cookies, foxes, bitches, and witches. I guess that's progress. Language gives us an insight into the way women are viewed in a male-dominated society. For instance:

- A man is commanding, a woman is demanding.
- A man is forceful, a woman is pushy.
- He's assertive, she's aggressive.
- He strategizes, she manipulates.
- He's committed, she's obsessed.
- He's persevering, she's relentless.
- He sticks to his guns, she's stubborn.
- If a man wants to get it right, he's looked up to and respected.
- If a woman wants to get it right, she's difficult and impossible.

•It's been said that a man's reach should exceed his grasp. Why can't that be true for a woman?

All this to say that, clearly, men and women are measured by a different yardstick and that makes me angry. Of course, I'm not supposed to be angry. A woman should be soft-spoken, agreeable, ladylike, understated - in other words, stifled...

Women represent 52 percent of the country. The absence of women in government means that over half the population is unrepresented. Until there is a critical mass of women, whether it be as senators, CEOs, or film directors, we're not going to be able to make a difference, to effect any real change.

We are a remarkable breed. We are the "girlz in the 'hood" - sisterhood, that is. We contain the power of the feminine: intuition, a deep wisdom. Nature designed us to be creators, to give life. I think we have an obligation to reflect that in our work. Speaking for myself, I feel a deep commitment to making films about positive transformations and the unlimited potential for human growth.

And I look forward to a society that is color- and gender-blind, that judges us by the value of our work, not the length of our legs. That accepts the fact that a woman can be many, many things: strong and vulnerable, intelligent and sexy, opinionated and flexible, angry and forgiving, deep thinking as well as deep feeling. They can get Ph.D's and manicures, they can contain the masculine and the feminine. Of course, all of this applies to men as well.

We are making our voices heard.

Just look at the unprecedented number of women running for high office in the country today. And let's use our collective female energy to reflect our nurturing instinct and put that out into the world, because the world surely needs it."

The following is a recent study, taken from the journal of Women in Higher Education (March 1993), which could be compared to Ms. Streisand's speech, with how society has imposed different ideas of how men and women view aggression, a characteristic that is viewed favorably for men and undesirable for women. Researchers asked 105 community college psych students aged 18-21 to describe how they see aggression. Taking into account that the study is biased, since it does not represent all age groups, it is still interesting to review the results:

•Women see aggression as a breakdown of self-control, a personal failure to live up to standards of behavior that they and others have set.

•Men view aggression as a way to impose control and create order, which can offer material and social benefits as well, so they consider aggression a more positive factor.

•When arguments heat up, men are more likely to lash out physically; women are more likely to cry.

•After a stressful situation, women are not likely to broadcast their behavior and are more likely to try to justify it.

•Men are more likely to act aggressively after a direct challenge to their self-esteem or personal integrity, or a threat to their control of others who fail to comply with their demands.

Great Women and Literature

Kelly A. Cartwright
Archway Staff Writer

One of the greatest contributions of women has been made in the area of contemporary literature. Mastering the art of writing in all literary genres, women writers have used their writing to explore and explain the societies in which they live. Throughout the ages, but especially since the nineteenth century, women of genius have emerged as voices of the masses. More specifically, women have used contemporary literature to express the hopes and dreams, as well as the frustrations and fears of their sisters. The women who speak for their age and their sex have been recognized as great artists and great minds.

The following is a partial listing of great women authors and some of their great works. For more information about women's history and reading selections from great women writers, consult The Norton Anthology of Literature by Women

Women in the Work Force

Lisa Lucchesi
Archway Staff Writer

The onset of the Civil War created many new opportunities for women. This was primarily due to the gradual breaking down of stereotypes about women's physical and mental capabilities.

In the 1940's, America was still in the Great Depression. Patriotism became a feminine motive for war work. So, on May 11, 1942, women poured into the nations war plant in record numbers as the U.S. prepared for military production.

Historians began to talk more about these accomplishments in women's history in the 1970's because of the second wave of feminism. They realized women's history had to be incorporated into traditional history as a separate culture. The development of women's ideals and experiences would give society a better understanding of their past.

Because of sex-role stereotyping, women have been seen as subordinates to men, and have had less educational and occupational opportunities.

Many factors have contributed to the increase of women in the work force over the last several years. Now there are women working in almost every occupation.

Divorces, separations, and the rising standard of living became conducive to women's motivation of working outside of their homes. Now many women will postpone marriage and childbearing in order to pursue a wider range of employment and educational opportunities.

The whole month of March has now been dedicated to remembering women in history.

It is on this day demonstrations and rallies (such as the Pro-choice march) are regularly celebrated all across the country.

All students are welcome to attend! Sophomores and Juniors will get some ideas on internships and summer jobs. Freshmen will get some information on possible careers to enter if they are pursuing marketing as a concentration.

Nominations Are now being accepted for Awards For Teaching Excellence

To underscore Bryant's emphasis on teaching, we recognize two faculty members each year for the excellent jobs they have done in the classroom. One award will go to a member of the liberal arts faculty and one to a faculty member in the business disciplines. The award will be concerned solely with teaching performance. Research, college service, and professional recognition by the community will not be part of the selection criteria. Recent awards have gone to Kathy Simons and Ron Deluga in 1992; and Pat Keeley and Lucia Arruda in 1991.

Faculty members and students are invited to nominate candidates. Nominations forms have been distributed to mail boxes this week. Please send me your nomination by April 3rd and briefly describe why he/she should receive the award for teaching excellence. We plan to present the awards in May.

I hope everyone had a nice time over break. How about that snow? Isn't it supposed to be spring? Those sisters that went to the tropics, it is great to see you got back safely. All the sisters are psyched for our Silver & Bordeaux this evening. It's sure to be a great time.

Amnesty International

Hello Amnesty members! Last Wednesday was a very productive meeting, and we are on our way to becoming visible in the Bryant community!

Our fund-raisers are well under way with a happy hour at Kirby's

Pub on March 26. It should be a great time with the Woodsmen playing, speakers, and videos. Other fund-raisers include a night at the Country Comfort on April 6. This night will be a great success considering our wonderful new Amnesty t-shirts will be raffled off and the money goes to an excellent cause. Thanks go to Chris and Mike for getting these nights together.

The boxes for the February and March fund-raiser have been placed in various spots around campus, so make sure to give, give, give!

Dee, our campus education chairperson, had wonderful ideas to get the attention Amnesty needs. From displays in the Bryant Center to posters in the Roto, we are on our way to being visible in the Bryant community!

Toby, our publicity chairperson, is working hard on flyers. Watch for them soon and pick one up!

Our meetings are on Wednesday in meeting room 2A. New members are always welcome to our bi-monthly meetings. Remember, Hope Is Power!

alcoholic beverages that you can drink per day and maintain a healthy relationship with alcohol. Beyond this amount, not only is your judgment impaired, but you also take on certain health risks. Two examples would be the inflammation of your liver and the consequences associated with risky sexual situations.

Play it safe. Please keep these guidelines in mind as you party this spring.

Welcome back to everyone who went away for Spring Break. Watch out because I want to kill you all! 'A' basketball is still undefeated and are anxiously awaiting the game against TEP. We would like to thank Bull for showing us his swimming prowess that earned him a bronze medal at the Olympic Games. Radar and Burgis looked like Holyfield and Bowe with their actions on Saturday.

Congratulations to our new E-Board: President-Fudd, Executive V.P.-Toad, Social V.P.-Clam, Secretary-Burgis, Treasurer-Rosko, Pledgemaster-Syd. Quotes of the Week: "Come on Burgis, hit me!" "Lester, I hardly even know you!"

Welcome back everyone! We hope everyone had a safe Spring Break. Well, it's officially spring now. As the weather gets warmer and the campus becomes alive again, keep in mind this set of guidelines for responsible drinking: 0, 1, 3.

Zero means that it is always okay to abstain from using alcohol.

One is the number of drinks per hour that your body can consume and not become sick from alcohol. In other words, you probably won't get a hangover.

Welcome back from Spring Break. We hope everyone is ready for a great Spring at Tupper's, The Townhouse Exchange and The Comfort. As usual The Comfort will host a variety of great bands and specials. As the days get longer and hotter don't forget that The Townhouse Exchange has all your frozen good needs including Ben and Jerry's. See you at The Comfort.

College Republicans

by Kevin Pishkin

We hope everyone had a great Spring Break. Prior to March 11, 1993, several of the Bryant College Republicans, attended the Rush Limbaugh Show in New York City as personal invites. As usual Mr. Limbaugh was phenomenal in explaining the pathetic truths of the Democratic/Liberal Party.

All applications for next year's executive board positions are due in by April 1. Those who wish to run should call 232-4773 or place a self-nomination in P.O. Box 2912. Elections will be held in April.

Unfortunately, there hasn't been too much to do as of recent, but the College Republicans are always ready should some Liberal Untruth surface. There's only one problem...There's so many!

Commuter Connection

by John D. Larence

The Commuter Connection (CC) held its general meeting on March 10th. During the meeting, Tricia Michen was named Co-Chairhead of Social Planning Committee.

Plans for the up-coming Spring Weekend were discussed. The CC is trying to get Robin back to do more Air-brushed T's. Robin was here last Spring Weekend and she was a huge success, we hope to have her back. We are also trying to arrange a date auction to benefit Special Olympics that would coincide with a couple of other events that weekend.

The CC is sponsoring an independent vendor on Tuesday, March 30th from 10am to 3pm. Whitey's Enterprises and Assault Deterrence will be in the Bryant Center selling Assault Deterrence devices (containing red pepper gas and military tear gas). These devices will be available in 1/2 oz. and 3 oz. container sizes for all students and faculty who want to feel that extra sense of protection. Whitey's Enterprises is not affiliated with the Commuter Connection.

The next CC meeting will be on March 31st. On the agenda will be both nominations and elections for next year's officers. So become active in the Commuter Connection, come to our next meeting and vote your choice.

Remember, the Commuter Connection was formed to look out for the concerns of fellow commuters. If you have any questions, call us at 232-6176 or write to Box #4509.

Welcome back everyone from Spring Break. Our senior Brothers had a great time in Florida despite the bad weather. The rest of the Fraternity braved the blizzard of the Century? The Brothers that went to Florida were bumped, and they received free tickets for a round trip anywhere in the U.S., where were you Adam?

We would like to congratulate Barry and Tara on their engagement. We would like to thank our Leadership Consultant, Pat Alderdice for his help and advice this past week. I would like to thank someone special for the invitation to her formal, sorry you can't go to ours. Who did pick Easter weekend anyway? I think we have about 12 Brothers going. Hope everyone had a good Spring Break, and to those that didn't, we have the summer coming up soon. Several brothers made it down to the islands and managed to gamble their life's savings away. House was the only casualty and Pancho made friends with the natives.

Pledging is almost over, these guys only have 2 more weeks; they look like they might finish in time for Easter. Formal time is upon us, and it looks as though we are heading for the mountains again. Look out New Hampshire! No one knows what the heck is going on with PKS sports, because Madson has been busy in Dorm 5. Quote of the Week "Newark Airport is closed." Until next week "Keep on tannin'."

Phi Sigma Sigma

by Melissa McEnerney

Hello everyone! We all hope everyone had as an exciting Spring Break like most of us did. First of all we want to thank our brothers and say that we are so glad that we all got to enjoy this trip together. Our song is true because "we are as close as we can be to our brother fraternity KT." For the crew that went to the Bahamas we would like to say thanks to the guys Rugby team and Soccer team for making it such an enjoyable trip. Don't you all wish you were back at Waterloo!

For some highlights of the trip I'll fill you in. First of all, of course we are trying to leave when Super Storm '93 hits. Thanks for letting us camp out at Fort Harrigan. The game we all invented when down there was fun. For those that don't know, it was a baseball game called Babe Ruth. Crazy Ruth and Goldie were the top scorers, with Babe, Spunky, and Glen a close second with Venus, Siamese and Camper lagging behind. We definitely had some surprise athlete contenders though.

We had fun visiting Phi Kap and more Bryant Kids on Paradise Island. The highlight of the trip was when Mean Jean knocked out Brian Bingham on the swing at the Coliseum. Watch out next time. Anyway for everyone else that went somewhere we heard you had fun. Especially all the guys who went to Jamaica.

Anyway, as always it's a hectic week for us. Thanks to all the fraternities who helped us out on Tuesday night. And also thanks to everyone for coming to our Comfort night Monday. Our Alumni will be up this weekend for the all greek alumni thing and we are all excited to see the girls again. Maybe we'll invite the guys Rugby team to sing with us.

Well, that is about all for now. Good luck to our soccer crew. Thanks to Carol for helping us out with that. Babe appreciates it! Meg and Cyndi you are doing a great job. And to Earth, Wind and Fire — Hang Tough! We are all glad that you can use the answering machines.

Make sure that you see all of our sisters with tans and braids with beads because they will be gone soon. Kelly H will tell ya that the braid has to fit the bead hole. Especially do not forget to check out Froggies Manhattan Tan. And finally you can take the girl out of Bryant, but you can't take Bryant out of the girl! Proven Spring Break '93.

Let The Chips Fall Where They May

In an age where free agency looms big and money talks and Lou Gorman walks, teams are riddled with high salaries. As a general manager you can either pay and be a contender, or go home with your wallet intact and sit on the sidelines.

Many clubs choose to dish out the cash and play, but there are those clubs in small markets who just cannot compete with the teams that seem to have bank accounts that would help the bail out even President Clinton.

In the end these teams will be atop the division come September. Here are my predictions for the '93 season.

American League East

In the American league East, teams have been acquiring and shipping personnel in order to put the best team possible on the diamond. The Blue Jays will win another divisional crown even though they have lost an ace reliever in Tom Henke. They have acquired Dave Stewart a possible twenty game winner and that coupled with the likes of Morris and Guzman will make the Blue Jays dominant. The offense will produce more runs than last year, but the once strong and flawless defense may be suspect.

The Yankees will have to be content with second place, but could possibly make things interesting if they are able to stay away from injuries. With the off season signing of Abbott and Boggs, Steinbrenner has fielded a winner. They have perhaps the best offensive and defensive infield in baseball. Their weaknesses lie with the bullpen and Steve Howe; Howe can you give him another chance?

The Orioles will do no better than third and at that I am a bit skeptical. They took apart the double play tandem of Cal Ripken and Billy Ripken. Billy now resides in Texas and adding insult to injury they fired third base coach Cal Sr. Look for Cal Ripken to have another sub par year.

Another problem that plagues the birds is they lack depth in the outfield. Between Brady Anderson and Devereaux, they started 311 games last season. These players will need some rest if they are to stay healthy; the situation has gotten so desperate they are teaching catcher/infielder Mark McLemore to play the outfield.

Folks, this is as optimistic as I can get for the Old Towne team. Clemens and Viola are the best one two punch in the bigs, but after that there is not much in the way of a pitching staff. The Sox signed veterans Andre Dawson and Ivan Calderon for their offensive capabilities along with their leadership roles. Look for Mo Vaughn to be the impact player he was touted as.

But Lou Gorman has tried to put a band-aid on a wound that is much to large. Add a lack of offense with the youngest and most inexperienced infield in the league and you spell trouble. Butch, start looking for a new job.

The Brewers have a slew of young talent in Pat Listach, pitcher Cal Eldred and catcher Dave Nilsson; but with a lack of leadership, the club is destined for fifth. Losing a

Around The Bases

Robb Martin
Archway Sports Writer

.320 hitter in Paul Molitor and a perineal 20 game winner in Chris Bosio has dropped a one time contender to a cellar dweller.

The Cleveland Indians finally made it out of the cellar last season and will just barely do it again. But with the help of Belle, Nagy, Lofton, and Baerga they will manage to turn some heads. Look out in years to come, they are scheduled to be in a new stadium come '94. Remember what Camden Yards did for the Orioles.

The Tigers will be in the basement despite the fact they will lead the league in home runs. But with pitching woes and the fact that Fielder, Deer, Tettleton, Fryman, and Lou Whitaker are a combined age of 34.2 years old. Injuries have a way of ruining a team.

American League West

Tom Kelly will lead the Twins to the top of the AL West with superior pitching and veteran bats. Scott Erickson, Kevin Tapani, Rick Aguilera along with a host of young arms will show how the west was won. Look for Puckett, Shane Mack and Knobloch to have banner years.

The Oakland Athletics are no longer the power they were in the days of the bash brothers. It has been a fire sale for many of the clubs free agents deciding to go elsewhere. Dave Stewart has gone north of the border, Moore is gone, as well as Canseco. But Oakland manager Tony LaRussa is still one of the best in the business and he still has enough talent left in Darling, Davis, Steinbach, McGwire and Eckersly. Look for Ricky Henderson to be in a new uniform and soon.

Chicago has the most talent in the American League but unfortunately most if not all are coming off of injuries. Bo Jackson will be on the roster come opening day but it is just a matter of time before he hangs up the uniform. Ellis Burks is coming of a back surgery, and Ozzie Guillen is back from major knee surgery.

The ChiSox will have their share of long balls. Supplied by such sluggers as Bell, Thomas and Ventura. If Burks can stay healthy he will once again put up All Star numbers. McDowell will once again lead the team in pitching but then you have Dave Stieb who at the ripe old age of 35 is the biggest gamble in their rotation.

Look for the Seattle Mariners a one time whipping post in the West, to make great strides. Their growing pains are over and with new ownership, a new manager (Lou Pinella), pitching (Bosio) and Ken Griffey Jr. they have climbed out of the cellar for awhile.

Kansas City has acquired some key ingredients in order to compete. But the question is whether they will be competitive. They have acquired Cone, who hasn't proven himself in the AL and Jose Lind a Gold Glove winner from Pittsburgh.

Quality players who will have to step up for the Royals are McRae, Gubicza, McReynolds and Joyner. Hal McRae has done an admirable job but he can do no more.

Texas has the power necessary in Jose Canseco and Gonzalez but has serious problems in its pitching staff. No longer do they have Guzman, and Ryan is just to old and can only be used on five days rest and Henke is approaching 36 and many wonder whether he will be able to be effective anymore.

Last and certainly least would be the California Angels. Even their new uniforms will not help them. In trading Abbott to the Yankees the Angels traded away its only quality starter. However, this team has two credible Rookie of the Year candidates in J.T. Snow and Tim Salmon so at least things will be interesting.

Look for the National League preview in the next week's Around the Bases.

Racquetball Places Third In Regional Tournament

by Jesse Albright

The racquetball team captured third place in the Eastern Collegiate Regional Tournament last weekend in Albany, NY. This year's finish was the best finish in five years for Bryant, which took second place in 1988.

The feature of the weekend was the women's captain, Bobbi-Jo Bell, who won her first regional singles title. Seeded third in the women's #1 singles division, she came from way behind in her semifinal match to upset the #2 seed Deb McConnell of Penn State, 4-15, 15-14, 11-9 before a standing-room only crowd on the stadium court.

It was the first time Bell had beaten McConnell in six meetings between them, spanning the last three years. She captured the title by another upset, this time the #1 seed, Jen Ocif of RPI, 15-9, 15-13, in the final.

The rest of the women's team added more trophies to Bryant's collection. Erin O'Connell finished third place in the women's #4 singles and Wendy Smith finished fourth in women's #6 singles.

Bell and Kristen F. Levins combined to take third place in the #1 doubles division while O'Connell and Smith took third in women's #2 doubles.

The Bryant men's team did equally well in the men's competition. Rookie Todd Guarino finished third in men's #2 singles and Derek Gonda also took third in #3 singles.

The two combined to win the men's #2 doubles title, upsetting last year's winners, Mike Sabatini and John Lewis of Penn State, 15-14, 15-12, in the finals.

Also for the men, Paul Martin, seeded first in #4 singles, had to settle for second place, losing to Penn State's John Lewis for the first time in his career in the finals. He and John Powers combined to win the #3 doubles title, also upsetting a Penn State team in the finals.

Bryant finished behind runaway champion, Penn State and second-place SUNY Binghamton. Bryant just missed second place by 9 points, which is an extremely slim margin. Both men's and women's teams finished third in their competitions and combined to finish third overall.

It was a weekend where almost every Bryant player was recognized for tournament achievements. During the awards ceremony, even Coach Denise Savoie was recognized with a standing ovation for her sportsmanship and involvement in this year's regional tournament.

The racquetball team is now resting comfortably until April 13th, when they will travel to the National Intercollegiate Championships in Phoenix, Arizona.

Major League Baseball Suffers Tragic Loss

Major League Baseball's Cleveland Indians suffered three losses, of which two were fatal. Monday night a boat, carrying three of the players, struck a pier on Little Lake Nellie about 25 miles west of Orlando, Florida.

Steve Olin, the Indians No. 1 relief pitcher, was killed instantly in the accident which occurred after dark. He suffered multiple skull fractures.

Teammate Tim Crews died at 5:40 am Tuesday at Orlando Regional Medical Center from a fractured skull and other internal head injuries.

Bob Ojeda, the lone survivor, underwent surgery Monday evening for a laceration of the head. He was then moved from the intensive care unit Tuesday morning, and his condition was upgraded to "stable and improving."

The boat was reportedly heading back to the shore to pick up two friends, Fernando Montes and Perry Brimmond, waiting to go fishing with the three in the boat. When the boat hit the pier the two friends raced over to help.

When they reached the boat Ojeda said, "Help them; they need help."

according to Brimmond in a interview with The New York Times on Tuesday, March 23.

The three players and their families were gathered at Crews' house on their only day off in the 29 game spring training schedule. After a barbecue they decided to go out on the lake fishing.

Joe Bick, Olin's agent, said the 27 year-old pitcher had promised Alexa, his three year old daughter, she could ride a horse.

"That's the primary reason they were there," Bick said in an interview with The New York Times. Olin and his wife, Patti, also have two 7-month-old babies.

Crews owned the boat for about five years. The players would have gone fishing earlier in the day, but it rained much of the day.

According to The Times article, Crew did not want to go fishing on that lake. He wanted to go to an adjacent lake but the water was too shallow for his boat.

Instead of waiting for Montes and Brimmond, Crews took off to the other side of the lake to investigate a noise they thought was an alligator.

Crews, 31 and father of three children was unconscious. He was than flown by helicopter to Orlando Hospital where the doctor's first priority was to keep him alive. No surgery was attempted and Crews passed away the next morning.

The only survivor of the crash, Ojeda, was treated for head injuries and is expected to make a full recovery. However, it is going to be emotionally draining on Ojeda and his fellow teammates.

"It's going to be a nightmare," said Keith MacWhorter, a 1980 Bryant graduate, who was a teammate of Ojeda when they played for the Pawtucket Red Sox in the early 1980s.

"But if anybody can handle it just the right way, if anyone can somehow help people overcome their grief, Bobby can," MacWhorter added in an interview with Bill Parrillo of The Providence Journal.

The Indians canceled Tuesday's game with the Baltimore Orioles and Wednesday's game with the New York Mets.

The team worked out yesterday and attended a memorial service last night at Chain O'Lakes Convention Center.

Andre Thornton, an ordained minister who played the infield for the Indians in the 1980s, led the service.

Rebirth Of Men's Tennis Team

Change is the focus of the 1993 men's tennis team, which will be heading into NE-10 competition this spring with 4 sophomores, 6 freshmen and the youngest coach in the league.

The team will be coached by 23-year old Jeff Bullett replacing veteran coach Robert Coker. Bullett said he is pleased to have been selected as Bryant men's tennis coach. "My background in the sport should allow me to contribute a great deal of technique and strategy to each of the players on the team," he added.

Along with a new coach comes an equally fresh injection of talent. Jason Wall, Andy Lipsky, Alessandro Barnabo, Brian Fries, John Blaine and John Cloutier, all class of '96, will be the names to read about in future Archways.

Returning to the line-up will be last year's #1 and #2 singles players and this year's Co-Captains Roman Pavlik and Paul Francis. Joining them, will be Steve Zinck and Brian Cote who played at the #4 and #5 positions last year.

Aside from a newer and younger squad, the team has also experienced further additions.

Just past the MAC are six renovated tennis courts. The courts were worked last summer and finished in early fall.

"Even though the courts were finished behind schedule, they were superbly constructed," added Pavlik, who was last year's NE-10 player and rookie of the year.

Coach Bullett says he is expecting a very promising season. "With our new appearance, the 1993 Bryant team plans on being the ace in the NE-10's," he said.

Students and Athletes Support Athletics

Bryant athletes and students at the beginning of the month showed their support of Bryant's athletic program by attempting to stop a possible move to a Division III program. For the time being Bryant plans to remain Division II.

Varsity athletes, on March 2nd, gathered 1021 signatures from the student body on a petition to block the reassignment of Bryant College athletics to a Division III program.

The petition was organized by the athletes, and all the signatures were gathered in approximately five hours.

The petition was organized in anticipation of a March 3rd meeting between President William Trueheart, athletic directors, and presidents of the schools in the Northeast-10 (NE-10) Athletic Conference. According to F.J. Talley, the meeting was not about the changing of divisions but pertained to athletic scholarships.

The issue of Bryant going to Division III was discussed during NE-

10 Conference meetings held in the fall. It was decided then Bryant would stay with the conference and remain Division II.

The main reason NE-10 schools discussed dropping to Division III was monetary. Division III schools do not offer athletic scholarships which would reduce average expenditures for most Division II teams. To travel to Division III schools, however, would increase travel expenses since most competitive Division III schools are not close to Bryant. Schools such as R.P.I., St. Joseph's, and Pittsburgh State are at least three hours away.

When asked about the possible move to Division III, women's head volleyball coach Karen Mendes said, "To recruit you have to sell the conference. If you are an independent, which most Division III schools are, there are not as many conference awards and press [coverage]."

Coaches and athletes feel a drop to Division III will diminish the number of quality athletes in the future at Bryant.
