

At the Post Office

MARTHA CHRISTINA

A blue tooth device
glows behind the ear
of the 4th man in line.
He talks into space: his father's incontinence, the expense of the vet, of Depends.

"All I want", the woman behind me sighs, "is a book of songbird stamps."