At the Post Office

A blue tooth device glows behind the ear of the 4th man in line. He talks into space: his father's incontinence, the expense of the vet, of Depends.

"All I want", the woman behind me sighs, "is a book of songbird stamps."