From September to May, approximately 4,500 students of all ages and sizes mill about the Bryant campus in their efforts to complete their graduate or undergraduate degrees. They study things like accounting, marketing, management, and other such aspects of the business world.

For six weeks in July and August, those running around the campus are fewer in number, but their sizes more than compensate for the lack of persons. Together they weigh over ten tons, and they come to Bryant College to study one thing and one thing only: football. They are the New England Patriots.

Since 1976, the Patriots have held their pre-season camp at Bryant, making use of not only the college's athletic facilities, but also classrooms, dormitories and dining facilities. The Patriots have now extended their contract, signing a three-year contract with

Phi Sigma Nu awaits final appeal

By Dave Murphy and Steve Medin
Of The Archway Staff

All rights and privileges of the Phi Sigma Nu Fraternity have been suspended until December 20, 1984. A letter from Peter Barlow on December 19, 1983 ordered the fraternity to "cease all activities normally associated with fraternity life." Mr Barlow's letter cited five points supporting the sanctions.

The brothers of Phi Sigma Nu felt they were dealt a great injustice. Lloyd Winston, representing the organization commented "The sanctions are unfit for the crime."

Mr Barlow's original letter suspending the ability of Phi Sigma Nu to operate as a fraternity, focused on damages, an illegal party while on probation, and a rushing letter distributed to prospective pledges making specific reference to illegal activities.

Mr Barlow's first point cited excessive damages that led to social probation extending from May 1980 through December 1980.

The fraternity's probation period was extended to May 1982 and residence hall probation was instituted through January 1982 due to damages further affirmed Barlow's sanctions, his second point.

Continued damages resulting in extensions of both social probation to January 1983 and residence hall probation to May 1983 strengthened Barlow's argument, serving as

Special O. heads chosen

Special Olympics, one of the most exciting and rewarding events held at Bryant College, involves an enormous amount of planning and coordination is involved in not only the actual Games, but also the fundraising, the volunteers, and much more. The Student Senate at Bryant College has designed a structure to keep the planning of the Games as organized and effective as possible. Sharon Pelletti, Kim Crockett, and Martin Merritt make up the management team for the 1984 Northern Rhode Island Special Olympic Games.

Two Senators vs. the world on 21-to-drink issue

By Diana Douglas
Of The Archway Staff

Yes, they are doing it again and Bryant students were again called to stand up for their rights. Representative Baldelli of Woonsocket is, for the second consecutive year, sponsoring a bill to raise the drinking age in Rhode Island to 21. On Thursday, January 19, John Kempf, senate president, and George Spellman, a senior senator, spoke before the Special House Committee. The only two opponents present, Kempf and Spellman were up against such organizations as the State Health Department, the Governor's Office on Highway Safety, Mothers' Against Drunk Driving, and various other individuals.

Kempf and Spellman's main arguments were that raising the drinking age would force the third point of his letter. At this point in the situation the brothers who normally shared suites 320 and 330 in Dorm 2 were reassigned to different dorms.

Barlow's fourth point cites that Phi Sigma Nu held an illegal party that resulted in further extension of social probation to May 1983 and a requirement that they sponsor three civic activities.

Mr Barlow's fifth point stated that his office had, "received literature that had clearly demonstrated that the fraternity had consistently and blatantly violated most of the social and Alcohol regulations of the College. This same data also indicated the use of marijuana as a recruitment tool."

Phi Sigma Nu's response attempted to justify alcohol consumption in the presence of minors with a misconception that their only requirement was to provide an alternative beverage to comply with the alcohol policy. College policy on suite parties states that there will be no minors present if alcohol is being consumed.

Secondly, their appeal attempted to disassociate the activities of past Phi Sigma Nu members from those currently participating in the organization. The "new" Phi Sigma Nu cited four examples in which the brothers had participated in community events.

Phi Sigma Nu President Paul Gimlewicz closed his response to the sanctions recognizing the fact that the rushing letter distributed to prospective pledges violated social and alcohol regulations of the College.

After reviewing the Phi Sigma Nu explanations, Mr. Barlow made no changes to the sanctions. In Mr Barlow's eyes, they had no case. He comments "It is unrealistic that they do not know the rules of the college."

The brothers then scheduled a meeting with Dr. O'Hara, Bryant College President, to discuss the situation. O'Hara's secretary, Avis Hallam cancelled the meeting before the President was notified. John Kempf of Phi Sigma Nu said "Les Lafond specifically directed Avis Hallam to cancel that meeting."

Determined to meet with the President, the brothers waited outside a classroom for Dr. O'Hara to finish administering an exam. When confronted, Dr. O'Hara did not realize that a meeting was ever scheduled and also informed the brothers of the appeal process, emphasized the rules of the school, and directed them to Mr. Lafond to initiate their appeal.

In the appeal letter to Mr. Lafond, the fraternity asserted the rush letter was not authorized by the officers of the organization. The pledgemaster, the appeal pointed out, acted independently and without the consent of the entire organization. The appeal also stressed the fact that if the sanctions were upheld, the consequences for the fraternity were disastrous. Not only would these restrictions have reduced the membership to 4 or 5 when Phi Sigma Nu could reapply for recognition, it would eliminate any ability the frat has to recruit pledges. Also, the letter provided replies to all of Mr. Barlow's reasons for the sanctions. The Brothers feel no adequate answers have been provided to their replies.

The results of Phi Sigma Nu's first appeal were presented in Mr. Lafond's judgement letter. The ruling allowed the organization to re-apply for recognition six months earlier than the original sanction. All other original disciplinary action remains status quo.

During Wintersession, the Brothers had a meeting to discuss the appeal with Mr.

10 Greek groups at Colby axed

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP)—Colby College, a liberal arts institution with 1,650 students, is abolishing fraternities because their presence is "detrimental and divisive," school officials announced yesterday.

At a meeting Saturday in Boston, the trustees voted unanimously to adopt recommendations of a panel it asked to conduct an eight-month inquiry on residential life at the private college.

The eight fraternities will be abolished in favor of a new "commons" system of residential groups. Recognition also will be withdrawn from two sororities, which do not have their own houses. About 20 percent of the students are members of fraternities or sororities.

Students learned of the decision yesterday at a meeting in the college chapel. The president of the Interfraternity Council, John Anderson, summoned individual fraternity presidents to explore a possible appeal.

Gregory Shefrin, vice president of the council, said his group was "disappointed the trustees chose not to improve the system from within." He said many students feel "shortchanged" because they voted last year to keep the fraternities and sororities on campus.

Fraternities were introduced at Colby in 1845 and at their peak had 90 percent of undergraduate men as members. However, they have come under mounting criticism on grounds of sex discrimination, alcoholism and an anti-intellectual outlook.

The trustees' commission, most of whose members are or had been associated with fraternities, concluded "sadly, but with great conviction" that the college should withdraw recognition from its Greek-letter societies when the current academic year ends.

"The consensus simply put, is that the fraternities no longer serve an overall constructive role at Colby, and that on balance, their continued presence is both detrimental and divisive," the panel said.

In a non-binding referendum last November, students voted 878 to 201 in favor of keeping fraternities and sororities. Faculty members had voted 76-26 the previous month in favor of abolishing them.

The report cited instances in which "fraternity members throw bottles or beer cans, shout obscenities at passerby or intimidate women students who are walking to a college function."

OPINION

"That will be one hundred dollars and fifty-five cents please"

Does this sound familiar? It is the friendly voice of the bookstore clerk as you plunk down the cash for this semester's books. How many other places could that money have been better spent? The possibilities are endless. The knowledge packed between the bindings of those books costs plenty and we all know it. That, however is nominal when compared to the amount of cash required from you to be here in the first place.

Is it worth it? Will it pay off? I guess we all ask that question from time to time. I think the most important thing is the quality of the experience at Bryant while we are here.

Are you receiving the type of education you expect? Is the Administration doing all it can to insure a varied and interesting social life? Are you getting what you paid for? If you feel content, great. If you do not, the channels through which to funnel your discontent exist.

The Archway wants to hear your opinions. We are a student run, student edited publication and we think there is no better place to voice your griefs and praise than between our pages.

We might not be able to change the price you pay for books or even reduce the tuition costs but our purpose and aim is to keep you informed on the Bryant scene and publish your opinions. So, if something is bothering you write us a letter. Stand up and be heard.

Winter Weekend guest policy explained by SPB

Due to the concern of the Bryant College guest policy, the following was proposed and accepted for January 27 & 28, Winter Weekend.

1.) Guests must be signed in by a Bryant Student at the door of the event. The Bryant student that signed, will take full responsibility for the guest. Fines resulting from violations incurred by the guests will be levied against the Bryant Student.

2.) Only two guests can be signed in by each Bryant student.

3.) The guest will be given a guest card, which must be carried at all times during the evening while on campus. The guest card is the only way a non-Bryant student will be allowed to enter an event.

4.) To obtain a drinking wristband (Friday night) or a hand stamp (Saturday night), the guest must show two forms of identification, one with a picture.

Bryant students of legal drinking age must carry a Bryant I.D. with an alcohol validation sticker on it to obtain a wristband on Friday night or a stamp on Saturday night. If you have turned twenty over winternession or have lost your I.D., you may have your picture I.D. taken, starting Wednesday, Jan. 25 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., according to the Office of Student Activities.

This policy has been developed by the SPB, in conjunction with SEAL's. This will serve as a pilot program that will allow us to test its appropriateness in future weekend events. If the guest policy is successful on Friday night with SEAL's in effect, it could be implemented on Wednesday nights (Wine and Cheese). Your cooperation is needed for this policy to be effective.

After Winter Weekend, the guest policy and SEAL's on Friday night will be evaluated. We are looking for student feedback, please leave any suggestions in Box 44.

Watch the Computer

By Art Buchwald
L.A. Times Syndicate

Forget George Orwell in 1984, and keep your eye on the computer. The new computers, which are being installed in Washington by the bureaucracy to save money and make our government more efficient, may chip away a little more at our rights to privacy.

The new computers can now "talk" to each other and gather up information from other computers without the average citizen knowing anything about it.

For example, the IRS computer can call up a credit bureau computer and say, "Honeywell, can you give me some idea on how much money Charley Ogilvy spent last year on lunches, dinners, hotels and transportation?"

"Sure TRW, hold on a second. Here it is, $23,800. Is he in any kind trouble?"

"He might be. Call me in a few weeks and I'll let you know." "While I've got you on the line, can you tell me what Sam Knishe filed as his income last year? He claims he's dead broke and can't pay his Lord & Taylor bill."

"Knishe made $150,000."

"Thanks for the data. I'll talk to you soon."

Meanwhile, over at the FBI, its master computer is trying to locate a Fred Lumbach, who bilked them on a sting operation. It calls up the U.S. Census Bureau. "Apple, what's the last address you have for Fred Lumbach?"

"Gosh, our census data is supposed to be confidential."

"We know that but we have to find him."

"Okay, 1222 Harding Road, Beesville, Virginia, but you don't know where you got it."

"Is this Lethargic National Bank computer?"

"Speaking."

"This is Hewlett-Packard, the Social Security mainframe. A Mrs. G.L. Carruthers has been collecting health benefits when she doesn't deserve them. Would you transfer $800 from her bank account to ours?"

"Sure, what are fr...ly computers for?"

"Hi Sperry, what's new at Selective Service?"

"Did Frank Dolan ask for a student loan from your bank?"

"If memory serves me, he did."

"Well don't give it to him. He hasn't registered for the draft."

"It's done. You promised me in-depth profiles on Ivan Monk, Donald Grunewald, and George Dormer."

"I'll call you tonight, pal."

"This is the New York Welfare Department computer. Am I talking to the Health and Human Services computer?"

"That's correct."

"We have a Mrs. L.L. Jones who says she hasn't received her medicare check for the past five months."

"Mrs. Jones is dead."

"She's in our office kicking and screaming and seems to be very much alive."

"I'll send you a printout of her death certificate. If that doesn't convince her, nothing will."

Awareness Week in Ready-Stage

The Film The Day After brought a hypothetical nuclear war to the living room for the first time. But is nuclear war inevitable? Who wants to be responsible for destroying the planet? Why do governments recommend the continued build-up of nuclear arsenals? It could be political. It could be economic. It could possibly be national defense, or it could even be all of the above choices.

Well, the year is 1984.1984.That book written so long ago has finally reached our calendars. You are still here, I am still here and we can all be happy that our world is still here. The recent deployment of Cruise and Pershing II missiles throughout Europe has increased world tensions to the extreme. Yes, the United States economy is back on track with inflation down and production up, but some ask why? Nuclear proliferation is the new business word for the eighties.

Build ups in both the United States and Soviet Unions' arsenals have reached alarming proportions. Many feel that it is necessary and extremely important for our national defense to include nuclear weapons in our sunken military foxholes or throughout the world oceans. Recent demonstrations all over the world have shown that many nations do NOT enjoy our massive nuclear umbrella (Just ask Canadians how they feel about Cruise missile testing on their territory).

Well, now it is your turn to see exactly what is happening all over the world. March 26-30,1984 has been dedicated NUCLEAR AWARENESS WEEK. An entire week of films, lectures, open forums, theatrical activities and debates will open the issue to both the pro and con. This event will be what you as students make of it; the potential is extremely high. The faculty has cooperated a great deal to pre-organize this informative event, now let's see your support! Organizing this event is open to anyone who may be interested. COME SEE YOUR FUTURE SO 1984 WILL NOT BECOME WHAT ORWELL PREDICTED OVER 35 YEARS AGO! TUESDAY, JANUARY 31, 1984 at 3:30 in room 386 A&B.

THE SCENE

-From National On-Campus Report.

AFTER A COLUMBIA U. STUDENT KILLED HIMSELF by jumping in front of a train, administrators and psychologists swept through freshmen dorms, talking with students to help them cope with the collective trauma. "The level of anxiety is likely to be greater if things like this are not discussed," said one dean.

CASTING OF THE MUSICAL "HAIR" was protested at the U. of Kansas, where two black students claim they were given access only to roles designated for blacks. About 70 students marched to protest the casting of the 60's musical about peace, freedom, love...and protest.

AN ALTERNATIVE BOOKSTORE failed to get Dartmouth College approval. A student group, the Dartmouth Entrepreneurs, says it will proceed with its plan to form a student-run bookstore. Without college approval, however, the group can't use the school name.

BOB HOPE'S COLLEGE SPECIAL brings much-welcomed recognition to participating campuses, but doesn't always excite student audiences. U. of Florida student organizers of the Gator Growl were unhappy when Hope stopped festivities to re-shoot sequences, including his entrance, and said later Hope "took over" their event. The Syracuse U. student newspaper called student reaction to Hope's show there less than spontaneous, again because of re-tapings.

OHIO AND MASSACHUSETTS STUDENTS played a role in defeating propositions to raise the drinking age in those states to 21. In Ohio, student registration campaigns paid off in high campus-area voter turnout. In Massachusetts, student lobbyists helped convince state Senators to defeat a drinking age bill.

WOMEN DUMPED BLACK INK ON PLAYBOY AND PENTHOUSE magazines to protest their presence at the U. of Minnesota bookstore. The second ink-spill in two weeks ruined about 100 magazines, but didn't weaken the store manager's resolve to continue offering the magazines.

STUDENT DISPATCHERS are replacing three campus police officers laid off as an economy move at Radford U. Though the administration says service dispatchers aren't allowed the same access to computerized crime data that regular officers could call on.

FLYING IN THE FACE of common perceptions of today's student as materialistic was the death of the Millionaires-To-Be Club at Arizona State U. The club, which asked successful business people to speak on campus, folded due to lack of funds and interest in its programs.

Fogg rolls into Lowell

Bev Fogg, career services coordinator at Bryant will be moving to Lowell

By Diana Douglass
Of The Archway Staff

Bev Fogg, the coordinator of Career Services has resigned after four and one half years at Bryant. Ms. Fogg "takes pride in the growth of the office" during her employment and feels there is now a greater utilization and awareness on the part of students toward the career service center.

In the future she would like to see the computerized career service network grow since she feels it is of "tremendous value to undergraduate students."

Ms. Fogg will be moving to Lowell, Massachusetts where her husband will start a new job. She will also be looking for a job in the Lowell area. Ms. Fogg says she will "miss the Bryant community" and considers her experience here "wonderful." However she also states she will "welcome the change" and the opportunity to practice what she has preaching as a career coordinator.

P.C. players perform 'Pippin'

Pippin, a musical extravaganza about a naive young man coming to terms with the real world is the subject of the long-running Broadway hit to be presented by the Blackfriars Theatre on the campus of Providence College February 3-5 and 10-12.

The story of Pippin is conjured up by a colorful troupe of traveling actors lead by a fast-talking, high stepping master of ceremonies, who leaps forth and promises "a stunning example of magic and merriment."

The book, written by Roger O. Hirson, portrays the starry-eyed Prince Pippin's search for his place in the sun. He tries war and finds it distasteful. In despair, he turns to his boisterous old grandmother, who sings her philosophy in a rousing comic number called "No Time At All" In it, she advises Pippin to live it up, a course he embarks upon with a vengeance, with the assistance of a bevy of voluptuous dancers.

Pippin's father, Charlemagne, is seen as a hard-living, hard praying Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire whose council of war is done as a lively minstrel show. His wife, Pippin's predatory stepmother Fastrada, sings and dances "Spread a Little Sunshine", another of the musical's showpieces composed by Stephen Schwartz, whose credits include the score for the world acclaimed "Godspell."

Director John Garrity will lead the company through the cheerful anachronisms of the plot that is loosely derived from history, but dances and sings in a modern mode. The choreographer will be Patricia Sharkey, creating dances that range from minstrel-show soft shoe to sultry acrobatics. The semi-commedia dell'atre burlesque costumes will be designed by Mary Farrell, and the lighting will be designed by Jim Eddie. James Ascoli will be musical director for this swinging, youthful parable that will play at the Blackfriars Theatre for six performances on February 3-5 and 10-12.

For more information contact John Garrity, Director of the Theatre program, at 865-2327.

the college to utilize the facilities as pre-season training camps through 1986. This marks the first time Bryant and the Patriots have contracted for three years at a time. The dates for the 1984 pre-season camp are July 13 through August 24, 1984.

The Bryant campus begins gearing up for the Patriots in June, scarcely one month after the pomp and circumstance of graduation has sent another class of future business leaders off to meet the challenges of the world. The college begins to prepare for the approximately 125 coaches, staff members, and administrative members that accompany the Patriots each summer to camp.

Preparation for almost 90 daily boarders is extensive. The facilities utilized by the Patriots include the use of the classrooms in the Bryant Unistructure for the offices of the coaches, management personnel and media relations personnel, as well as for team meetings after daily practice sessions. The Patriots use 2 of the 14 dorms on the Bryant campus, to house players and coaching staff. Telephone service to each room is required, as well as a linen service.

The food service at Bryant must prepare for the 125 diners that use the 1,200 seat dining hall each meal. Throughout the training camp, the Patriots will consume almost 3,700 pounds of beef, 625 pounds of fish, 700 pounds of breakfast meats such as bacon and sausage, 8,000 eggs, 2,400 gallons of fruit juices and punches, 14,000 pieces of fruit and 8,000 pounds of ice. All of this food hasn't gone to waste, as the Patriots have compiled a 61% winning average (65-41) during the regular season since they first started having their training camps at Bryant College in 1976.

Over 50 acres of the campus are occupied by athletic facilities. The center of the athletic complex is the main gymnasium, with its 2,700-seat arena; men's and women's exercise and weightrooms; locker facilities and the athletic department offices.

In addition, the newly constructed M.A.C. houses a 30,000-square foot, all-purpose gymnasium for both varsity and intramural sports plus five racquetball courts. Outdoor facilities include over 30 acres of playing fields, an all-weather running track, six tennis courts and an international style cross-country course.

After the students leave, the fields used for varsity and intramural sports are primed for two months: the grounds crew in charge of the turf management program fertilize and water the fields with a water cannon, ensuring they are in top form when the Patriots arrive.

Sullivan to assist Nash

The position of Assistant Director of Student Activities has been filled by Liz Sullivan, who will be starting her new job February 6. Liz was one of 75 applicants for position, of whom five were interviewed at Bryant. She has been attending Framingham State College in Framingham, MA, where she has studied Public Administration. Her experiences in this field include working as a staff member in new student orientation, training staff leaders, developing leadership training programs for student leaders in clubs and organizations, and being an advisor to the Student Activities Board at Framingham State College. Laurie Nash, Director of Student Activities at Bryant and a member of the Interview Committee, said Liz's recent involvement with students will be an asset to her in her new job.

A seniors weekend "retreat" is being planned for April 13-15. Bill Phillips, Coordinator of the Counseling Center, said reaction has been very positive to this new idea. The weekend will consist of group discussions and personal reflection on the students past four years at Bryant and what opportunities the future holds. The cost for the weekend is $30 and includes 5 meals and the two night stay at a house on the ocean in Narragansett. There is a limited number seniors who can participate in the program. If you have any further questions contact Bill Phillips and look for future information in The Archway.

By Rhonda Micahelson
1983 Orientation Leader

What better way would there be to spend three to four weeks of your summer vacation than to work as an orientation leader here at Bryant? If you are energetic, enthusiastic, and love to work with people, this could be just the experience you are looking for.

Take a minute to think back to your freshman orientation and the excitement as well as the apprehension you felt while spending your first night on campus. Remember that crazy group of Orientation Leaders who made you feel comfortable in your new surroundings and acquainted you with the best that Bryant has to offer? You too could be a part of all of this excitement!

During the next few weeks, fifty to seventy-five outgoing, dynamic Bryant students will be involved in a competitive interview process in hopes of becoming one of the 1984-85 Orientation Leaders for the Crossroads New Student and Parent Orientation Program. The goal of the selection committee is to form a group of students who are able to maintain their individuality while portraying a realistic image of Bryant College. These students must be able to work together, as an entire unit, to provide the best possible orientation experience for the new students and their parents while proving the continuing success of the Crossroads Orientation Program. The leaders are chosen based on their enthusiasm, communication and leadership skills, ability to get along with their peers, and other valuable criteria.

The prestigious job of Orientation Leader includes serving as a general information and referral source for new students and parents, acquainting students and parents with student services, rules and regulations on campus, and conducting group sessions. These sessions include Time Management, How To Succeed Academically, Budgeting Your Money, Campus Awareness, Sessions on Individual Majors, and leading as well as participating in group discussions with new students and parents. Orientation Leaders should be able to commit themselves to many responsibilities. They will participate in planning and training meetings which are held in the Spring, stay overnight on campus for the period of time required for summer training and the three summer orientation sessions, and live in the college residence halls with the orientees during their stay. Orientation Leaders are also required to participate in an evaluation of the orientation program, and help plan and implement the selection process for the following year's orientation program.

Applications are now available in the Office

Of Student Activities. After returning a completed Orientation Leader application to the Office of Student Activities, the first round of an intensive three-part interview process begins. During the large and small group interviews, and finally the personal interview, the applicant is given the opportunity to prove to the selection committee, which is comprised of several faculty members, administrators, and past orientation leaders, his/her communication and leadership skills, effectiveness in dealing with people, and enthusiasm. The selection committee works together to select the most capable and compatible orientation group.

A comprehensive training program for the newly appointed orientation leaders, which is composed of weekly spring meetings and training sessions during the summer before the orientees arrive, serves to improve leadership, communication, and presentation skills, and covers topics discussed during orientation. Factual information about functions and services provided by various offices in the College is given so that the Orientation Leaders have the adequate knowledge necessary to conduct informative sessions. To supplement the training meetings, Orientation Leaders are required to read material about Bryant College and know where to direct students to information and resources, if necessary. At this time, the slide show, Tupperbowl, and other night events for the new students are coordinated by the Orientation Leaders. Group development is a vital part of the training program because the success of the orientation program depends upon the ability of the Orientation Leaders achieve group unity and to work closely together with more support for one another.

The ultimate goal of the Orientation Leader is to best prepare the new students and parents for the challenges that lie ahead during their transition to college life. I have had the great honor to serve as one of the fourteen Orientation Leaders for the 1983-84 Crossroads New Student and Parent Orientation Program and I feel that being a part of the program's success has brought me a great deal of personal pride. It was as equally rewarding to work with many of Bryant's administrators. Learning a great deal about the ability to deal with people has greatly improved my interpersonal skills. The bond that was created between the Orientation Leaders is something very special to each of us. The positive feedback that was received because of our work as a group and as individuals allows us to believe that we reached our goal: the successful introduction of the new students and their families to the Bryant community.

a Rockford law firm, Anderson accepted a graduate fellowship to Harvard University Law School where he received his L.L.M. degree in 1949. After two years of practicing law in Rockford, he accepted an appointment as a U.S. foreign service officer in West Berlin, Germany, where he served until 1955.

Anderson's first elective contest came in 1956 when he won the Republican nomination for state's attorney. After serving for four years, he campaigned for the Congressional seat and was elected to Congress from the Illinois 16th Congressional District in 1960.

Though his early Congressional career manifested a conservative ideology, the social upheavals of the late sixties promoted him to break from the conservative mainstream, most significantly by casting the vote which broke the deadlocked Rules Committee and reported out the Open Housing Bill of 1968.

During the 1970s, Congressman Anderson represented the principles of social reform, fiscal responsibility, and human rights by supporting the E.R.A., campaign financing reform, and open housing incentives.

After serving nearly two decades as Congressman, Anderson decided to seek the Republican nomination for Presidency in the spring of 1979. However, when it became apparent that he could not attain the nomination, he pursued an independent candidacy.

Since his unsuccessful 1980 bid, Anderson continues to be active politically through the National Unity Committee. He also lectures throughout the country and teaches both undergraduate and graduate courses at Stanford University and the University of Illinois Law School.

Lafond. At this meeting they brought up several arguments:

1. The Fraternity thought that they were demonstrating quantifiable involvement and had indeed worked to improve the image of the organization.
2. Compared to activities by other Greek organizations requiring disciplinary action, they feel they were treated unfairly and inconsistently.
3. It was the opinion of the Fraternity that the unapproved actions of a single member of their organization should be dealt with on an individual basis.

At this point Phi Sigma Nu awaits their final appeal with Dr. O'Hara. Until the appeal process is exhausted, the Fraternity is allowed to function as an organization. Commenting on the way the situation has been dealt with thus far, Lloyd Winston says, "The administration treats us like children, not the young adults this school prides itself on turning out."

the underaged to drive to neighboring states and therefore cause more fatalities. Also, statistics were presented by someone in favor of the bill that showed the number of drunk driving accidents in the 20 year old age group which Spellman attempted to prove were manipulated. This caused the committee to question the accuracy of the statistics.

Despite Kempf and Spellman's efforts, the committee voted unanimously to pass the bill onto the House (which will vote on it this week). According to Spellman, the general consensus after the hearing was that the bill would pass easily through the house, but have a more difficult journey through the senate.

The student senate is now working with the Association of Rhode Island Schools (ARISE) on a presentation to go before the senate committee during their hearing.

Special O.

Sharon Pelletti, as the Director of the Games, is ultimately responsible for the entire structure of the Games. She will also directly oversee each Special Olympics committee. Through her involvement in many leadership positions and sporting events, Sharon has proven her ability to successfully coordinate major events, such as Special Olympics.

Kim Crockett, as the Senate Chairperson of Special Olympics, is the liaison between the Senate and the Rhode Island Special Olympics. She will keep the Senate (therefore the students) informed of the progress of the planning of the Games.

Martin Merritt, as the coordinator of the athletic and facility committees, will be directly involved with the organization of the sports events.

This year's Special Olympics will be held Saturday, May 5, 1984. The management team will need your help to make the Games possible. Anyone interested in becoming a chairperson may pick up an application in the Senate office. General volunteers for the many aspects of the Games will also be needed. More information will be forthcoming. Get involved with Special Olympics and do something special for someone special!

Senioritis hits home early

It was dark outside, and the combination of snow and freezing rain fell against my window as I paced the length of my room. I was a senior in college, held captive by my last semester break.

The past semester had not been too difficult, just time consuming. An internship, a weekly radio show, a part-time job and a few classes thrown in all added up to a full week's worth of work. College kids don't work less than those on the outside, they just work at different hours, like 10 pm - 2 am or 5-7 am the morning before a big test. Some extremists even function on Fridays and Saturdays.

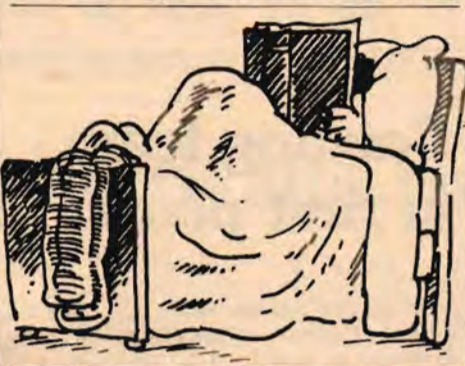

What makes a semester break is the task of filling the void, a void that most accurately could be compared to suddenly becoming unemployed. For days and months work piles up, and each day brings new challenges. Then nothing. Absolutely nothing. Sleep late. Watch Carson and Letterman. Listen to the radio. Daydream.

All of the above are enjoyable for a few days, or a week at most. But then the restlessness sets in; mid-day naps are a method of killing time. If you're lucky, you may find a part-time job, but that in itself is not easy.

I polished all my shoes, cleaned my golf clubs and threw out hundreds of memories cluttering the drawers of my desk. I called a few old high school friends to swap war stories and even toyed with the idea of reading a book for enjoyment. All before the first of the year. I thought of calling Bryant and signing up for Wintersession. Then at least I could yell and swear and complain about the course, the work and the teacher. But if I did that, I couldn't afford to go to Florida for Spring Break. End of idea.

So back to the vacation. It was sure easier when everything was scheduled out, even if it was only one day in advance at best. Class tomorrow at 9, 11 and 12. Lunch at 1. Nap until 3. Stereo until 5. MASH and Barney Miller and supper. More stereo. Maybe the library or night class. Wine & Cheese on Wednesdays. The comfort of orderliness.

My first semester break was great. I called all my high school friends and told them of my exploits. I even listened to theirs. I reluctantly agreed to clean the cellar, bring in wood for the stove and make my bed. I ate sandwiches for lunch.

As the years rolled on and semester breaks continued to come around, work expanded to fill the maximum time possible. Whoever came up with that saying was either unemployed or worked for the state department. Or a college student. I looked forward to cleaning the cellar, two or three times a week. We have enough wood inside the house to cook marshmallows for the state of Michigan. The lines on my bedspread run parallel to the floorboards. When it comes around to mealtime, I started plotting how I could use the week's leftovers to create some kind of gourmet meal, or at least something edible. I can even make cookies from scratch (don't tell the guys I live with). I cleaned up afterwards. I waited for the newspapers and the mail to come, and became acquainted with each delivery person. The cold weather forced me to take my lawn chair inside while I held my afternoon vigil over the doorstep and mailbox. The mailman says he's going to name his firstborn after me.

I never knew how much fun work could be. Give me a deadline, caffeine and a stack of typing paper and I'll crank out a paper overnight. I can study six chapters of anything but Statistics before 9 pm and still have a good time at Wine & Cheese. I can survive. Give me a month off and I crumble. If this is what it's like being unemployed, I'll sweep streets, flip burgers or join the Army if I don't get a job - just so I'm doing something.

If all else fails, I'll go to grad school. After all, you get a month off between semesters

Next time you're in London...

By Steven Grossman
Of The Archway Staff

The World At Night is a series of articles that explore interesting and worthwhile night spots in various cities of the world.

This week we take you to London to one of the most famous night spots for students.

The Hard Rock Cafe is a very "IN" place located near Hyde Park in a very popular section of London.

The Hard Rock is owned and operated by two Yanks from New York, and is considered a hang-out for americans studying in London, or just visiting. The place is small by american standards, but is about the same size as your average pub. On weeknights there is usually a long queue (line) for tables. The custom is to wait at the bar (SRO) til you table is ready. On weekends your wait at the bar will be a long one (about 20-30 minutes). While at the bar you should try one of their very different drinks. One the more famous drinks is a "Sloe Gin Fizz Shaken And Flung Against The Wall", the exact contents slip my mind, but this drink will BLOW yours. The Wait at the bar is well worth it. Once you are at your table you need to take a glance at the wall for the days fare. There is a good selection of different burgers, sandwiches and the ilk. The chips (fries) are also quite good. For dessert you have to try one of the Hard Rock's ice cream treats, they make Swenson's and Zip's look pretty feable.

As for atmosphere, this place has it. The ceiling is decorated with Confederate flags and football (ours no theirs) penants. The people are quite friendly, largely due to the fact that the tables seat a large number of people. This is not the place for an intimate dinner for two. The music, as the name suggests, is rock, but not the stuff us Yanks are used to. You will hear the latest tunes from London and Glasgow.

A hint for those of you who have to take The Underground or Tubes. The Underground (what we call a subway) stops running at 2300 (11 p.m.), so you may have to cut your evening short. However if you can afford a taxi, The Hard Rock Cafe closes at 0100 (1 a.m.).

The Hard Rock Cafe is located at 150 Old Park Lane. W1 London. Telephone (01)629-0382

Look for future reports on clubs in Montreal, Stockholm, Amsterdam, Paris, Tel-Aviv, and others.
