After Blake’s Songs of Innocence and Experience

WILLIAM DERGE

(on a work of art by Lisa Sheirer entitled Water Stories – Lilypons 2)

I.
Things were pretty clear then, the pencil thin lines of reeds, curved like the hairs on a stevedore’s arm, the sculptured reflections of clouds, scabbing bark of sycamores or rust scars on seasoned machinery, the koi, streaks of welder’s sparks against the pond bottom, black flaked with sunken leaves, all which, cross-eyed, I could double and overlap, or flatten with one eye denied, or smear with a squint, but not split the infinite, confine to time or border, but jump to the call to a disciplined Labrador on a falling kill.
How some scenes stick like blue-ambered grease augmenting the whirr of engine and axle, stirring the oil slick to an industrial sublime II.

Ankle deep in Parris Island muck, black leather reddened to South Carolina clay, from which no Canada escape or faked heart condition can extricate, but with each sucking step sink deeper in.

Every black reed is the gnomon of a steady sundial.
It is never cool here.
It is never night.
The door to the season’s passing is rapidly closing, and the fish that circle your naked flesh are piranhas in goldfish clothing.
