Even Johann Sebastian Bach had to fake it through the mirk on merciless days, clavier keys arthritic and
sick of his touch,
the gleaming machine of his mind stuck in neutral.
No God in the mud.
The angels of his process skulked like street orphans and threw rocks at dogs too damaged or old
to outrun
one dull man’s
failure and lost time.