MISSION STATEMENT: The Bryant Literary Review is an international journal of poetry, fiction, and creative nonfiction housed in the English and Cultural Studies Department at Bryant University in Smithfield, RI. Since our first issue in 2000, we have published original and thought-provoking creative work from a wide array of established and emerging authors. We see our purpose to be the cultivation of an active and growing connection between the Bryant University campus community and the larger literary culture.

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES: Authors can submit their poetry, fiction, and creative nonfiction work here: <https://bryantliteraryreview.submittable.com/submit>. Limit one submission per author: one fiction or creative nonfiction piece and up to three poems. Fiction and creative nonfiction pieces should not exceed 5,000 words (give or take). We do not accept previously published work. Our reading period is September 1 to December 1.

Copyright reverts to author upon publication. For samples of previously published work see <https://digitalcommons.bryant.edu/blr/>. Any questions can be directed to Professor Tom Roach at troach@bryant.edu.
