Delaney & Bonnie In Concert Saturday Night At Meehan

The Brown University Hockey ring, alias Meehan Auditorium, will again be turned into a rock fest again Saturday night. Thursday night marked the first big concert for Bryant in too long a time, featuring Seals and Crofts who masterfully played the mandolin, fiddle, and guitar. Also on that program was Sister Kate — Kate Taylor and The Flying Burrito Brothers.

Delaney and Bonnie will be the feature for Saturday, joined by Boston's finest, the J. Geils Band, and the oldest singing Taylor, Alex, who will lead "Friends and Neighbors."

The doors open for the concert at 7:30. Tickets are still available at $5.00 and may be obtained at the door.

Thieves Strike Again

Last weekend added new items to the list of thefts at Bryant this year. Last fall a color television was taken from the Gardner Hall Lounge and during Easter break its replacement was pilfered from the maintenance building. Also last fall a V.W. was taken from the Bryant parking lot on Brook Street, and has never been found.

This week a stereo system was taken from Barber House and two televisions and a stereo were taken from Gardner Hall. Also taken from Gardner were two bicycles which had been chained and locked to metal railings in the back lobby of the dorm. In all instances there was no sign of forced entry. Also taken this past week was another V.W. from the Brook Street lot. Police did manage to find the car two days after it was taken. Investigation is still under way by both the Providence Police Department and the Colbert Agency in the other thefts. This brings to a total of more than ten thousand dollars the theft or damage sustained at Bryant since September. Plans for the new campus call for a larger and more diversified protection force in order to inhibit theft and vandalism at our new facilities.

1970 Census Reveals:

College Attendance Up

College attendance has grown so dramatically in the past 30 years, according to a U. S. Census Bureau study, that about two-thirds of today's college youth have parents who did not attend college themselves.

Since many studies have shown that college often produces changes in interests and attitudes, the increase in educational attainment could have implications for the current so-called "generation gap," some authorities indicated.

According to the Census Bureau study, of America's 14- to 24-year olds, 61 per cent of the white students enrolled in the fall of 1969 were from families whose head had not gone to college. Among Negroes enrolled in college, the study reported that "71 per cent were from families whose head had not attended college, including 50 per cent whose head was not a high school graduate."

The percentage of young persons in the population with four years of college or more has nearly tripled in the past 30 years, going from 5.8 per cent in 1940 to 16.4 per cent in 1970.

During the same period, the percentage of persons with four years of high school or more rose from 37.8 per cent to 75.4 per cent.

Just in the past 10 years there have been sizable increases in educational attainment. In 1970, among persons 20 to 24 years old who had completed high school, the census study found that 52 per cent of the men and 42 per cent of the women had completed some college, compared with 42 per cent of the men and 33 per cent of the women of the age group in 1960.

Numerous studies have shown that college education often produces persons with more aesthetic and intellectual interests, more liberal attitudes toward politics and sex, and greater self-confidence, said Theodore Newcomb, professor of sociology and psychology at the University of Michigan.

Such changes, of course, also occur among persons who don't attend college, he said, but college apparently speeds the changes. Mr. Newcomb cautioned.

Bryant Prof. To Attend Paris Peace Talks

William B. Sweeney, Jr., Assistant Professor of Economics at Bryant, has been appointed by the World Justice and Peace Commission of the Diocese of Providence to represent the Diocese at the Paris Peace Conference.

Professor Sweeney is one of 25 representatives from the United States, and the only Rhode Islander in the group.

Professor Sweeney has stated that he has three objectives to his mission. The first is to gather information and meet informally with the Vietnamese in Paris in the hope of developing a better understanding of their views of a feasible solution to peace in Vietnam and "to develop some kind of peace proposal that could be handed to the North Vietnamese and American delegations at the talks."

Lastly, on his return Professor Sweeney will participate in a speaking tour as a follow-up program.

The group plans to spend eleven days in Paris, beginning May 20 and returning May 31.

Captain Mowry House

The Bryant College Alumni Association has announced plans to restore the historic Captain Joseph Mowry house and use it as an alumni center on Bryant's new campus.

The house, built in 1708, was scheduled for sale and possible demolition when Bryant began its construction of the new campus, but the Smithfield Historical Society convinced the administration to move the house along with the barn and another younger house to the present site across John Mowry Road from the dormitory complex.

Russell LeBeau, a college trustee and chairman of the alumni fund, has said that alumni are planning a lounge, club style dining room, and a few bedrooms for visiting alumni. However, the success of the plan will depend on the success of the alumni fund drive — a goal of $50,000.

The Mowry House is said to be one of the oldest homes in northern Rhode Island. The Mowry family owned the house until 1860. Since that time it has passed through four owners including Earl S. Tupper who donated the land and building to Bryant.

For June

The Selective Service System announced today that the highest Random Sequence Number that any local board may call will remain at 125 through June 1971.

The action follows the announcement of Department of Defense that the May and June draft calls will total 20,000, all to the Army. The May draft call had been previously announced as 15,000. The Defense Department has now requested 88,000 through June of 1971 as compared to 99,500 through June of 1970.

The highest Random Sequence Number reached through June of 1970 was 120 as compared to the ceiling of 125 through the first six months of this year, a difference of 5 numbers.

Draft totals and RSN ceilings for 1970 and 1971 are as follows:

Krishman's Critique

By Harry Krishman

And They Call It The Birth of The Blues

Perhaps this column should be entitled "A Night in Terror," but it's not. If it were a movie it might star Peter Fonda, Warren Beaty, Dennis Hopper, Faye Dunaway, Peter Boyle, and Edgar Buchanan. Regretfully, it is not a movie. This article is true and sad. The stars include Marc, June, Cosmos and Felonius (the possible culprit, Alan Kluger, Poochie (from upstairs), the Providence Fire Department, Officer X of the Providence Police Force, myself, and a veritable cast of millions. To set the scene it is important to know what was going on. It was 12:30 at night. I was studying my taxes, and June, Marc, and Cosmos were watching a great movie about a werewolf. Anyway, the werewolf (who was only a little kid at the time) had just been shot by his uncle who had mistakenly mistaken him for a wolf.

Did you ever smell urine burning? Well, it stinks! A strong smell began to circulate through the apartment and after some degree of investigation, it was discovered that the smell had originated in the heating ventilators. Next, smoke began to come flowing out of these ventilators. I believe it was Smokey the Bear who once growled, "Where there's smoke, you better get a fireman." So Peter called the Fire Department. In the meantime, June and I were in the basement trying to locate the origin of the smell when who should turn up but Felonius. No sooner than later, the wah-wah and spinning red lights of Providence's finest appeared over the horizon. I looked for the dalmation in the lead, but no spots. After some time of touring the building with the firemen, Officer X turned up. We used to watch Dragnet and Adam 12, so we were ready for the questioning. Now, the firemen had already decided that our analysis of the smell had been correct — burning urine. So, up came Officer X. "You know what it smells like to me?" he said prodding. Now this guy was big. He was so big that he had to duck and turn sideways to get through doors. He was so big that even John Wayne, the Duke himself, would be proud of him. Heavy? He was intense. Who needs Grand Funk?

In the meantime, in another part of town...

State and National Legislation was at a loss. The President was missing. Lost in Roger William Park, boy President had run into a police officer chastizing a youth and going through what Al called unlawful search and seizure. The time was 10:45. Our leader informed the policeman of the youth's rights. Time 10:46, the policeman questioned our leader. Time 10:47, our leader, Al Kluger, was taken to jail, directly to jail and without passing go. A state of turmoil existed. Cliff Wallach, unknowingly, had become the President of the student body, while in another part of town, in jail, the deposed President was causing trouble. While in jail for a period of an hour and fifty-five minutes, Kluger managed to get his cell shifted three times for causing a nuisance. The reasons for these annoyances were singing "the Feel Like I'm Fixing to Die Rag," "Blowin in the Wind," and singing and dancing to the "Birth of the Blues." (respectively) It was not enough that he sang by himself, but he had each of his fellow inmates singing with him. The time 12:30, Al Kluger was released and met by State and National Legislation and two Florida exchange students. The time 12:40 and ex-convict Kluger (is there a law against President's with jail records?) and friends return home to the sounds and sights of Providence's Fire Department. Now, our two stories merge.

"You go to college?" Officer X asked. "Yes, sir," I said. "What year you in?" "Junior." "And you kid, what year you in?" he says to Marc. "Senior," says Marc. "You think I'm Stupid," says the officer, "that smell is pot!" Now, this isn't exactly what you need at 12:45 — a pushy cop. "Stay here," he says as he began to search the apartment. Who invited him in the first place we began to wonder. Then he started grilling Marc. "Come with me." "What for?" "You own this place?" "No, sir, I only rent it." "You rent it — you own it," insists our not so stupid officer.

Cats are good pets. When you want them to run, they usually run. June and I busied ourselves with the cats while Marc was being towed downstairs to talk to the policeman. It was at this time that Al Kluger, fresh out of jail, returned to the picture. Upon coming home he was informed of the situation. Alan, apparently not phased by his prior arrest, began informing the officer of Marc's rights. June and I played hide and seek while the crow began to gather. The firemen were great (all three truckloads). "What's with the cop?" they asked. Out came Officer X. "It's pot. It smells like pot." One fireman said, "Hey, maybe they got some pot." Officer X then said, "I got some in my back pocket. We'll go behind the building and smoke it." Who needs Alex Taylor anyway? Really weird things began to happen. The firemen became entranced with a Zodiac poster which shows various types of sexual erotica. Officer X said he'd be back in a few days with the C squad. Cosmos and Felonius ed, however, that educational level should not be considered the only factor in any "generation gap." He said that if the gap is any greater now than it has ever been, the current rapidity of social change also is an important factor in producing changed attitudes and beliefs between generations.

Despite the large increases in number of youths attending college, the census study noted that the likelihood of college attendance is still directly related to family income.

"In October, 1969, among the families who had dependents of college age (18 to 24 years old) and whose family income was $15,000 or over, 66 per cent had a dependent member attending college as a full-time student. Among families with dependents of college age whose family income was under $3,000, only 16 per cent had a dependent member enrolled full-time in college," the study said.

Insight

by ALAN KLUGER

Having just returned from Bryant's new "campus in the sky," I am somewhat puzzled. No one can doubt the beauty of our new home in spacious Smithfield or the eye catching view of Hillier's 9th Wonder of the World. I anticipate, with great favor, the benefits of living within a shout from all the freaks on campus. But as I looked around I wondered, "Where is the Arch?" Then it suddenly hit me; there's no arch! there's no arch!, there's no . . . !!! In panic I fled to the Pink House that is supposed to house the Rathskeller, but I found people still living there. I turned, got into my car and here I sit. Hasn't anyone thought of the repercussions of our move to Smithfield? With no Arch there is no emblem of Bryant College. To quote the Bryant College Student Handbook, "The Arch, which forms a background for the globe, torch and quills, is a college landmark, affectionately remembered by thousands of Alumni." Now we are forced to abandon this great monument to Educando Dirigere Mercaturam — "Education for Business Leadership" and venture naked and unknown to mysterious Smithfield. Some students say, "Hell, the Arch doesn't mean anything to me." To those not hypnotized by the Bryant tradition, this may very well be true, but this great matter of urgency affects all of us.

What about this newspaper? What are we going to call it?, the Dome, the Pond, Harry's Herald or maybe we can give it out at dinner and call it "Tupper's Supper". Just as the name "New York Times" brings shivers down the spine of all armchair diplomats, so the "Archway" has brought joy and news to future businessmen for time on end. (There's a rumor that Doc Hammond read it as a tyke).

Is it all going to fall by the wayside because we have no forethought or love of heritage? Where do we go when it rains? Where are the pledges of Bryant's sororities going to congregate before heading into battle? The plain fact is that we have taken our beloved Arch for granted. It's time to speak up for tradition! The trouble with the world today is that people always want to change things. We must find a way to preserve honor and heritage if we are to remain linked to the glorious past. To move the Arch and reassemble it on our new campus would involve contractual problems with Brown University. To construct a new one would entail funds that we are told are depleted. Fearing that crisis is indeed upon us, I dread the day when we, as alumni, return to Bryant College in the country and reminisce about the good old days and how we used to hang out right over there under the ——— !?!?!?

Sometimes You Can't See The Forest For The Toilet Paper

Ever since "environment" exploded into the American consciousness, the most frequently asked question has been, "What can I do?"

To answer those questions many organizations have published pamphlets, handbooks and guides that deal with what could be called "lifestyles." They urge the citizen to use white toilet paper, compost his garbage, launder with non-phosphate soaps, tune up his car, and in general see that his purchases are not the result of environmentally destructive practices.

Too often these booklets become the easy way out both for the organizations that publish them and the citizens who use them. They enable the organizations to cope in a simple and efficient manner with the growing numbers of people who contact them for advice. And they enable the individual to check off his list of lifestyle practices and feel he is doing all he can to save the environment.

In so doing, the booklets can divert the citizen from looking more deeply into the issues of pollution and responsibility. They also make it easier for organizations to avoid coming to grips with complicated problems and reorienting their programs to cope with them.

That is not to say the lifestyle booklets are bad. For from it. They are often essential in helping people realize that everything they do has environmental implications — whether it is in misuse of natural resources or poisoning of air and water. They also help people see the interconnectedness of all things which is the essence of ecology. However, they can mislead people into thinking that if they follow those guides, environmental problems will be solved. And they imply that the consumer can always make significant environmentally sound choices.

Unfortunately, that just isn't so.

For even if everyone carried out the lifestyle recommendations there would be no noticeable improvement in the poisonous codition of air and water. Solid waste problems would still be overwhelming and natural resources would continue to be misused. The probable result would be disillusionment on a massive scale.

The real problem is that there are few environmentally sound alternatives. In most realms of choice one can only pick the lesser of two evils. And that is not good enough.

Consider the automobile. It is responsible for the majority of air pollution. Except for the very few American cities which have subways, mass transit in America is still a dream. Most people have no choice but to drive to work, and they cannot choose but to own an auto with an internal combustion engine. The alternatives — walking and bicycling—are both unpleasant and unhealthy as long as the majority continues to drive cars. Buses most often are not available. Therefore, the honest way to tell people how they can help is to point out to them their current lack of alternatives and urge them to press public officials for stricter controls on autos. They should also be urged to work for private mass production of automobiles with external combustion engines which are virtually non-polluting.

Or take recycling. Most lifestyle booklets focus attention on turning in old newspapers but ignore the problem of creating a demand for the recycled paper those newspapers will become. Many mills already claim to be handling all the waste paper they can and industry says it will take 20 years to build the facilities necessary to recycle the paper now available. If all government, businesses and organizations insisted on buying recycled paper, it's probable those mills would be built a lot sooner.

Or water pollution. Some 60 percent of it is caused by industry over which the individual has no direct control. Only forceful action by government and public outcry is going to get polluting industries, which have always assumed a right to pollute, to change their ways. The majority of the remaining water pollution comes from municipal sewage treatment plants. The only way the citizen can eliminate that source of pollution is to elect public officials who will spend his tax money for total water treatment.

These solutions, however, are complicated and more difficult. Since it's hard enough to get people to give up their phosphates and to buy returnable bottles, it isn't surprising that organizations often emphasize the easier things, postponing for a while a serious discussion of what saving the environment really requires.

It requires reading dull, complicated laws and financing lawsuits against polluters and recalcitrant government agencies. It takes finding out how city or county government works, what interest groups get their way, and how the citizen can make his voice heard over that of the lobbyist. It takes writing Senators and Congressmen over and over again. It takes bringing abuses at home into the public spotlight. It takes questioning and challenging the sacred cows of government and industry. It takes being immune to and able to refute insinuations that environmentalists want to precipitate unemployment, take away conveniences and essentials and may be communist-inspired.

It is hard hard work. And it will take a long long time.

But the cause of environmental quality will founder on a compost heap of handbooks and pamphlets unless concerned citizens move into the public arena where the real battles must be fought. The lifestyle issues are valid educational tools and a measure of personal commitment. But they will never clean up the air and water or redirect a wasteful natural resource policy that ignores the needs of the future. To imply or believe that they will is misleading, and may prevent or postpone important action until it is too late.

Hats off to ARA

by RICHARD KAPLAN

During the year, ARA has made remarkable improvements in trying to make the food we eat, real food. Who knows, if it continues, the food might be edible. The idea of making our own ice cream sundaes for dessert is a real cool one. Many of us will get fat making huge sundaes, but we deserve it. After all, we've gone on a diet for a few years trying to avoid the cafeteria's unappetizing food. For breakfast, ARA has added english muffins and apple pancakes. The grill has been moved from the back room to the front line to make the food warmer when it is served. Now we can actually see our eggies as they are made instead of guessing as to whether they were made last week, last month, or last year. For lunch, assorted pizza has been added to the menu to give the students a choice. Previously, the only choice we had was eating or not eating.

Tuesday, ARA tried convincing us that the food they have been serving all year is actually very tasty. The barbecue, which was held on South Hall lawn was a real masterpiece. The barbecued chicken looked savory, but it was so rare that it was doubtful that the chicken had been killed yet. The potato chips, soda, and popsicles, however, were excellent. In spite of the food, the weather made the barbecue a success.

The cafeteria service, which has come a long way, looks very encouraging for the new campus next year. After all, if you want a strong student body, you need good food. Something has got to be done with the rubber hamburgers, hard toast, uncooked roast beef, unappetizing meat loaf, and other of the cafeteria's tasty treats. Usually the cafeteria is only impressive when our parents' come up, but lately the cafeteria has even impressed the students. This years "Flying Fickle of Fate Award" definitely goes to ARA for a fine try in making a real cafeteria out of a mess hall. Hats off to ARA!

IRS Exempts Some Working Students

Providence, R. I. — Students with jobs who may be exempt from federal income tax withholding on their wages this year should so notify their employers, JOHN J. O'BRIEN, District Director of Internal Revenue for RHODE ISLAND, said today.

Working students who qualify under the tax law for exemption from withholding, Mr. O'Brien advised, should fill in and submit a Withholding Exemption Certificate (Form W-4E) to their employer by May 1. Exemption certificates filed for 1970 expire April 30.

Students who did not owe any tax last year, and expect to owe none in the current year should so certify, Mr. O'Brien said. This would eliminate the need to file a tax return next year unless there has been tax withholding and the student wishes to recover it.

Single students with income of less than $1,700.00 and married ones filing jointly with income of less than $2,350.00 will not owe any federal income tax for 1971, Mr. O'Brien stated.

Sports Editorial

A Year In Review

by STEVEN DIAMOND

Another year has concluded at Bryant College and the last year here at Providence. Some teams have suffered with some of the poor conditions that they have played on and now they will be playing in style on the new campus.

This year in sports was significant for the college because it finally showed everyone, even the students that Bryant has more than just a basketball team. This year when the basketball team couldn't put it all together, other teams came through impressively.

The basketball team with Coach Tom Folliard will be getting a lot of talent from this year's freshman team. They will have a fast team with excellent shooting and ball handling. Next year we hope they can bring in the N.A.I.A. tournament playing in their own gymnasium. The basketball schedule is constantly getting tougher with some big college teams being added.

The fall and spring baseball teams coached by Bill Stein is still undergoing developing stages. This year Bryant played their closest game of their history with New Haven College, one of the best small colleges in the country, to a 6-4 loss. Next year it will be different with a new field to play on. No more running up the hills in center and right field.

This year the bowling team, the most successful team this year, represented Bryant in Kansas City. They finished third in the country and first in their area. Bryant is going all out to be number one next year because all of the starters are returning. Coach Nelson feels with some freshman talent the team will be unbeatable.

Coach Fred Reinhardt is still doing an amazing job with the track and field teams, plus the cross-country. With Roy Lapidus and Bruce Stewart returning next year, the team will surely be amongst the top.

The Bryant Golf team has really been doing a fine job with the coaching of Archie Boulet. The team traveled to Florida and were unbeaten at home this year. The team has promising freshman and will be strong next year.

The tennis team coached by John Gillooly is also in the rebuilding stages. After losing many top players last year the team compiled a respectable record and are looking forward to a winning season next year.

The soccer team has come a long way now competing with some of the top college teams in the area. Still a new team, Bryant faced Holy Cross, Providence College, and U.R.I. Most of the team will be returning looking forward to a successful year.

Bryant College is definitely on the way up in all respected sports. This years attendance at most of the games was smaller than usual. It is so important to have the students play their roll by supporting their team.

Until next year, I would like to wish all the students, faculty and administration a most rewarding summer.

Members of baseball team listen to strategy from Coach Stein.
