

Sometimes, Always, Never

KHARAN BADRI

What if there's no happily ever after greeting us with open arms and smiles?
Maybe there never was a bonafide you & I dotting the stars on our way to forever.
It's a long way down without your wings
to carry me back to our bitter reality.
Did my promises clip them;
of better days starring another me?
The man you deserved to hold
instead of the mirage lying beside you.
If only I were more flesh & blood & less lofty sentiments of idyllic somedays.
Smoke and mirrors inundate our home;
we lay bare, exiled by unconsummated intimacy.
Blow the haze clear with your soft lips,
those that'll never press upon mine again.
Distracted by false hope,
our future evaporates unceremoniously.