Bryant.edu, revamped

Have you seen the new bryant.edu website? A user-friendly navigation bar, colorful images, and fresh content are just a few of the advantages of the redesigned website, launched in late August.

For alumni, the website is a convenient point-of-contact to find out what’s happening on campus and with our Bulldog athletic teams. From the main homepage, alumni will be most interested in three areas: News, Events, and Alumni.

The News section, a block located on the bottom left, will give you articles on everything from the new specialized MBA programs to a Bryant professor being quoted by Forbes.com about the economic impact of the iPhone 5.

The Events section, located to the right of News, collates six calendars detailing all of the happenings on and off campus. Once you enter the Events section, you can choose “Alumni Events” on the left navigation bar. Or, if you’re in town for the weekend and want to see what’s going on, click on “Campus Events” to find out about upcoming basketball games, a presentation by award-winning Nigerian author Chimamanda Adichie, or International Education Week.

The new website consolidates nearly 5,000 pages into about 500. Although much of the content is geared toward prospective students, we hope that alumni will use bryant.edu as a resource to keep in touch with the Bryant campus and community.

Network with your peers online

What gives you access to Bryant’s worldwide network of 40,000 alumni – in a secure, password protected environment? Not Facebook, and not even LinkedIn. Welcome to Bryant’s newest alumni tool, the iModules online community.

Earlier this year, the Office of Alumni Relations switched over from a ten-year old online database to a newer, more robust system. On a macro-level, all Bryant alumni will continue to have access to a searchable alumni directory and online event registration as in the past. However, the new database will provide you with several helpful tools – the ability to link with your friends, set up sub groups, and blog and share with other Bryant alumni. Plus, if you are already a Facebook user, you can link your accounts so that you only need to sign on once.

To get started, go to www.bryant.edu/alumni and click on Alumni Connections. That will bring you into the Alumni microsite. The Register Now and Log In directions are located in the top right hand corner of the website. Because it’s a secure system, your first step will be to contact Alumni Relations (alumni@bryant.edu or call 401-232-6040 or 877-335-5667) to get your unique nine-digit identification number (recent graduates – this is your student ID#).

Once you complete the secure registration process, you can search for classmates, upload photos and your résumé, and register for an upcoming alumni event in your area.

While you are visiting the alumni pages on the Bryant website, spend some time looking at other features. Each tab will take you to a world of information.
Alumni: Open Doors for Talented Bryant Students!

The job market continues to be competitive and Bryant alumni can be an excellent resource in helping to connect Bryant students with opportunities within their organizations. While the Amica Center for Career Education at Bryant offers a solid recruiting program and excellent graduation outcomes, students are seeking entry into the more competitive opportunities that match the top-notch credentials that they are developing at Bryant. In order to meet the diverse career interests and geographic targets of our students, we need your help!

Companies with selective leadership and internship programs are reducing the number of key schools at which they recruit or post opportunities. With "core" recruiting schools typically determined by leading executives and high ranking alumni, Bryant alumni can be career champions for their alma mater by advocating that their organizations include Bryant among the schools from which they recruit talent.

What Can You Do?

• Forward information about your organization’s leadership or training programs for graduating students or summer internships for undergraduates.
• Connect with your HR department or key leaders in your organization to introduce Bryant University.

Other Opportunities to be a Career Champion:

• The Job Source – Each week, the Amica Career Center compiles a list of available jobs. Your organization can be on it.
• Internships/Campus recruitment – Paid or unpaid, for University credit or not, today’s new grads are finding experience is getting them job offers.
• Career Panels – Represent your field when the Amica Career Center hosts alumni panels on campus for students.
• Allow a student to shadow you. Each winter break, the Alumni Job Shadow Program shows students what a typical work week is like for a variety of jobs and fields.
• Attend a Student/Alumni Networking night: Also during winter break, these events allow students to meet with alumni one-on-one in a more relaxed atmosphere.
• Attend the annual Career Fair on campus. Students from every year and every major attend this annual event. Tell them about your organization and what it’s like to work there.

Learn More: Contact the Amica Center for Career Education | career.bryant.edu | (401) 232-6090 | careers@bryant.edu. In your e-mail subject line, use: Alum Career Champion.

CATCHING UP WITH...

Ann Marie Habershaw '84, CPA
Chief Operating Officer, Obama for America

“Bryant has a reputation for excellent business education,” she says. “One of the most important lessons I learned was that the financial strength and transparency of any organization are key to its success, and understanding these aspects allows you to move into senior leadership positions in any area.”

Her career evolved in the early ’90s when she began volunteering on political campaigns. It was her work on a 1994 congressional campaign that led Habershaw to her first management position in a national political action committee, EMILY’s List. She later joined the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee as its Chief Financial Officer in 2001. “I worked for three outstanding members of Congress and was able to help elect the first woman Speaker of the United States House of Representatives,” says Habershaw. She rose to COO for the Democratic National Committee before landing her current position with Obama for America.

“It’s true – the saying ‘find what you love to do and do it well, the rest will follow’” she says. “My work in mission-driven organizations over the last 20 years is about dedication and a desire to help others and make a difference.”

Cristine Cox ’11
Associate, Advising Practice at PricewaterhouseCoopers

Cristine Cox ’11, knew when she went to Bryant’s Open House, that it was a place where she could make a difference and her voice would be heard. “I challenged myself to meet new people who had different experiences and came from different backgrounds,” says Cox. “Doing so helped me forge a bond with the University.”

Her association with her current employer PwC began in her freshman year at Bryant during GLIME, and continued when she served as a counselor for the PricewaterhouseCoopers Accounting Careers Leadership Institute, which is held each year on campus. Many Bryant alumni involved in the program and got to know them personally.

Cox secured an internship with the organization the summer after her sophomore year, and though her major changed from accounting to management, her affiliation with PwC continued. “Having a background in business and accounting helps me really understand what’s going on in my organization.”

James Segovis, Ph.D.
Associate Professor of Management, Director of The Honors Program, and Bryant Institute for Public Leadership Faculty

If you’ve taken a class in leadership, management, entrepreneurship, or negotiation and attended a Bryant alumni networking event in the last 10 years, chances are good you’ve met Jim Segovis.

He is lauded by students and faculty alike for his ability and commitment to teach the theoretical framework and then show how it works in the real world.

Professor Segovis is no stranger to the ‘real world.’ Prior to becoming a full-time faculty member, he served as the director of the Chafee Center for International Business, which received national recognition and the President’s “E” Award for excellence under his supervision.

He’s been teaching at various institutions since the mid-1970s, and at Bryant since the early 1990s. “Teaching students makes my life complete,” he says. “I have a passion for bringing that ‘aha’ moment to the students when they connect all the dots.” Segovis’s coauthored book, “Work Stress and Coping in the Era of Globalization,” was published in late spring.

Eric Handa ’91
CEO, co-founder AP Telecom

When Eric Handa left Bryant in 1997 with an Economics degree, he was already a world traveler. Two semesters spent studying abroad showed him the infinite possibilities of a global business economy. In school, news of Hong Kong’s sovereignty being transferred back to China after a 99-year lease held by Great Britain piqued Handa’s interest in the small Asian nation, and he ended up working there for AT&T after graduation.

Handa found himself in the right place at the right time to experience firsthand the explosive growth in the telecommunications industry. His expertise spans global management, sales, and leadership roles. Though AP Telecom is based in the United States to capitalize on the open marketplace, Asia’s data transport rates are crucial to drive down costs for the world.

“Relationships and long-term perspective are very important to the Asian community,” says Handa, who has experience with both. He stays involved with Bryant as a member of the Advisory Committee for the Center for Global and Regional Economic Studies.

Mike Greco ’93
Executive Vice President of Strategic Insights, A&E Networks

In high school, Mike Greco ’93 thought to capitalize on his love of numbers and turn it into a lucrative accounting career. “I knew that top accounting firms recruited heavily from Bryant,” he says, “so the school was a natural choice.”

In his first year, however, he realized his passion for numbers was more marketing and research focused, and so he switched majors. “During my senior year, I was president of the Bryant Marketing Association, and this role helped teach me how to be an effective manager in the workplace,” Greco says.

What Greco appreciated most about his Bryant education was the real-world application of theories to handle complex business problems. “In my entrepreneurship class, we evaluated real case studies, and in my advertising class, we built an entire advertising campaign, complete with creative sketches and media plan.”

Another significant advantage, says Greco, was the support of like-minded individuals. “Being among other students who take education and their future careers seriously helps foster an environment that you want to succeed in.”

Kurt Spear ’10
Associate National Bank Examiner, Office of the Comptroller of Currency

Kurt Spear wanted to play football and study history, and so he chose Bryant because he could accomplish both those goals. A major point of pride in his college career? The capstone project for his history major, which included interviewing Bryant alumni who served in World War II, and collaborating with fellow students and Professor Judy Barrett Litoff, a renowned historian. “It was an amazing experience for me to tell their stories,” he says.

Spear didn’t realize upon enrolling that the integrated business and liberal arts curriculum at Bryant would open up a whole other world. “It was Professor Peter Nigro’s Financial Institutions and Markets class that spurred my interest in finance,” says Spear, who declared a second major in Finance and Management.

In his current position in the financial field, Spear assists with fellow students and Professor Judy Barrett Litoff, a renowned historian. “It was an amazing experience for me to tell their stories,” he says.

Spear didn’t realize upon enrolling at the integrated business and liberal arts curriculum at Bryant would open up a whole other world. “It was Professor Peter Nigro’s Financial Institutions and Markets class that spurred my interest in finance,” says Spear, who declared a second major in Finance. “We had real discussions about what was happening in the market in 2008.”

In his current position in the financial field, Spear assists in full-scale regulatory examinations of national banks and federally chartered thrifts.
