THE

ARCHWAY

I Am Your Paper

All my name is "Emily Archway" and I live at Bryant College. As you are now reaping my autobiography, I am only a few hours old. Yes — I am new. I am the child of the earth, and yet I am old enough to realize that there are a number of things that can happen to me. Perhaps I will be slain by some evil force, or perhaps I will be rejoiced over. But why should I be rejoiced over? Or why should I be slain? — no, such a sad fate — no, such a joyous one — at least until the bus is swept out.

The entries were judged on Originality and their emphasis on some phases of Bryant life. After considering and voting on the sixty-four entries submitted, the judges decided that Miss Hirt's entry, The Archway, was the best because under this popular place, located at the end of South Hall, the students will have some fates I wouldn't think about. I may be sent to some far corner of the earth, or perhaps I will be thrown on the floor or the ceiling. But why should I be thrown on the floor or the ceiling? — no, such a sad fate — no, such a joyous one — at least until the bus is swept out.

The Archway staff devotes a lot of time to the newspaper and I really hate to see copies of the paper thrown in the trash. We ask that you try to be a little less wasteful with the newspapers. I think it would be nice to read the paper when you first get it. If you may throw it away — try the wastebasket, not

SIFE takes second place

By: Jeren Cortes
Staff Writer

SIFE recently placed second on their intercollegiate competition for Finance. Due on the Heights, which was held at Boston College from January 27 through January 29. The 36 hour case study included Bryant’s own Dan Terrell, Katie Peltier, and Adrienne Sheedy.

The three dedicated members spent weeks in Boston where they were presented with the task of creating a budget for a low income family. Other competitors included students from the University of Southern Maine, Sacred Heart, Suffolk University, and Green Mountain University. With just 10 minutes to present their idea, they took second place and a prize of $2,000.

SIFE, also known as Students In the Free Enterprise, is described as a community service group with a business focus. Members use skills they have acquired through their studies and apply them to cases for which they find solutions. SIFE concentrates on entrepreneurship, marketing, economics, and ethics.

The competition in Boston rewarded the three participants with networking opportunities and the development of teamwork skills. The Bryant University students presented their unique solution for the 36 hour case in front of many well known businesses as well as competitors from other universities.

Dan Terrell said, “It was great watching other presentations after ours to see how others handled the same case... The case brought together many aspects of finances into one larger challenge.”

This semester Bryant’s SIFE has increased their membership significantly with a turnout of 65 students at their first meeting. They hope to participate in more competitions this semester and are set to see a growing name for Bryant University’s SIFE.

Sparks fly with Senate vote

At an organization, the Senate wrote a letter to the INROADS Representatives to respond to concerns stated in Senator’s emails and clear up any misinterpretations of the Senate’s decision. In the letter, the Senate wanted to express that they did not vote “no” in an INROADS presence on campus, but rather to the ISG being a student association as it was presented in the constitution. Listing this, the Senator stresses that the decision “was made based on the Student Senate’s job to represent and govern student organizations and the student organization creation process.”

Dr. Eakin commends the ISA Representatives for their response to the questions being asked during the meeting and believes the Senate has policies set for them to follow and they “sincerely followed these policies.”

As for the future of ISA, everyone agrees the door is open. Both the Senate and Representatives of ISA have expressed interest in continuing to work towards a more positive outcome for the future of ISA.

About Our College Founders...

By Carolyn Squillante

Among the many business school pioneers are Henry B. Bryant and Henry P. Stratton, who were the most commanding and dominant figures in organizing business schools and popularizing business education. In 1883, the first school was founded in Cleveland, Ohio, by the educational entrepreneur Stratton in Bryant and Stratton's School of Business Colleges. From it sprang all the other colleges of the kind in the United States and Canada. Soon after the Civil War, Bryant and Stratton established a school in Providence, which became part of the present Bryant College.

Henry B. Bryant was a graduate of Providence School, and Dr. Henry P. Stratton was a pupil of Pratt Institute. The Bryant and Stratton plan is a movement to the existing system, and advocates of Henry B. Stratton. It was the wise selection of different names to select locations for the many schools.

NOSE, THROAT,
and Accessory Organs not Adversely Affected by Smoking Chesterfields

FIRST SUCH REPORT EVER PUBLISHED ABOUT ANY CIGARETTE!

A recent study, making the first report of its kind ever, has been released by Chesterfield Cigarettes. It was conducted by the Cornell University Medical Center and is the first to report the effects of smoking on the respiratory system.

Millions of people have been exposed to the dangers of smoking, but this is the first time that the effects on the respiratory system have been scientifically documented.

The study involved over a thousand volunteers, all of whom were non-smokers. They were monitored for a period of six months.

"The results of this study are surprising," said Dr. John Smith, the lead investigator.
"We found that smoking Chesterfields actually had a positive impact on the respiratory system."

In addition to the positive effects on the respiratory system, the study also revealed that smoking Chesterfields had no adverse effects on the other accessory organs
of the body.

This news is especially important for people who smoke, as it provides some reassurance that smoking Chesterfields is not as harmful as previously thought.
