PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

From time to time we are fortunate to come upon opportunities to reflect on the larger meaning of our lives, to place into context our daily responsibilities and concerns. I would like to share with you two such occasions that recently captured my attention.

One event took place on campus on May 22, 1999, when the 136th class of Bryant undergraduates passed under the Archway and into the world. Though this is my third commencement as President of the College, I am still moved by the bright, eager, and committed faces of each new generation of business professionals. They have every reason to be optimistic about their future contributions; we have every reason to be proud of the professional skills and personal qualities we’ve helped them develop.

The other event was quieter, but no less revealing. It came in the form of an e-mail from Susan Engels Denmark ’84 that illustrates how much we often take for granted. Allow me to quote at length:

“I just received your recent edition of the Alumni Bulletin. As I read through it I felt compelled to write for two reasons. The first is that my husband, Christopher J. Denmark ’83, passed away suddenly, without any warning, in September of an aneurysm of the aortic artery. He was giving a speech as the president of NEMED (New England Medical Equipment Dealers). Chris and I met at Bryant and married the year after I graduated. Chris was an example of what a good education from Bryant can do for a person with drive and determination to succeed. He had purchased his father’s business of a chain of pharmacies and did an incredible job transforming them from pharmacies to home medical equipment stores and making the company a true leader in the health care industry . . . . He was the first to say that Bryant College prepared him for this challenge.

“My second reason for writing was to thank you, the college, for the education I received at Bryant. I graduated in the class of 1984 with an accounting degree . . . . I have three children — 12, 10, and 2 years old. When Chris passed away he left me a large company to manage and run. My priority is still and always will be my children, however I also now have a large responsibility to the continued success of the company my husband built. I have extremely good people running the company for me. They provide financial and other necessary information to me on a weekly basis . . . . Without the background that I received from Bryant College I would be overwhelmed by the financial and accounting aspects of the business.

“I hope someday to be able to give back to Bryant as much as it has given to me... Bryant College has made a big difference in my life.”

As I watched our graduates accept their honors and the joyous congratulations of family and friends, I couldn’t help but reflect on Susan’s story. One lesson to draw is that life doesn’t carry any guarantees, that we never know what we must be prepared to face. Yet another lesson reminds us of our most human values: caring for those who are close to us and treasuring the time we have. A third lesson: Because we can’t anticipate the challenges our graduates might face, Bryant must remain focused on fostering a broad set of professional skills and personal qualities that will enable them to be adaptable, creative, and successful in all their endeavors.

Susan’s confidence, courage, and commitment to her family and her business are an example to us all. Our graduates may not face the challenges that she found so suddenly thrust upon her, but they will face adversity, they will need to persevere, they will have to continue to learn new skills and habits of mind to succeed in the coming century. If they can face their challenges with the grace and vitality with which Susan faces hers, Bryant will have succeeded well beyond our hopes and dreams.

To this last Bryant graduating class of the 20th century, I offer a few simple words of advice. Leap eagerly on the opportunities that life presents. Treasure your family, friends, and colleagues. Never miss an opportunity to broaden your horizons or enrich your mind and spirit.

And to all Bryant alumni everywhere: Welcome these new graduates into your midst. They are worthy inheritors of the proud Bryant tradition.

Ronald K. Machtley
President

THE TRUE MEANING OF COMMITMENT

Commitment. The word has become a staple in corporate communications. You hear about commitment to shareholder value, commitment to a mission statement, commitment to this and that. It is a word that gets a lot of play but often seems to be somewhat empty.

But when I hear the word commitment, I think about drive, discipline, and a passion to get things done. My first manager at Pacific Mutual penned an interesting phrase. He said that brains and ideas are a dime a dozen, but the key individuals are those who get things done, who have passion and dedication. Those are the individuals who get ahead.

I’d like to illustrate this sense of commitment with a short story about Kevin Deegan, a 34-year-old technician for the Kodak Corporation.

Kevin always dreamed of being an athlete and following in the footsteps of his older brother, a champion athlete. But he had a problem: He had severe cerebral palsy. He could ride a tricycle, however, by using his left arm to grip the handlebar and his left leg to peddle. So when Kevin learned about an around-the-world bike trip, he signed up to ride the final 3,000 miles.

During the 50-day ride from Los Angeles to Washington, D.C., Kevin fell two, three, and four times a day. Each time, he picked himself up and kept going. He had made a commitment to complete the ride.

By the time he got to St. Louis, Kevin could hardly walk. Two days from the end of the trip, Kevin slammed into the back of another bike, went flying, and sustained a severe injury. Blood gushed from his forehead and the medical team wanted to take him out of the ride, but he refused. Kevin struggled through the last three miles of the day, and that night received 12 stitches. He’d already received 30 or 40 stitches over the course of the trip.

On the final day, Kevin rode triumphantly into Washington, D.C., with his teammates and his brother. That night, Tour-de-France winner Greg LeMond attended the group’s celebration. “Kevin, you are my hero, and the most courageous rider I’ve ever met,” he told him.

Now Kevin circles the state of Michigan every summer to raise funds and awareness for individuals with cerebral palsy.

As you grow and develop and go out into life, I hope that each of you also has a chance to commit with passion to a noble pursuit, whether it’s in your career or otherwise.

OF DEGREES
WELL EARNED

It is said that within each of us is a story. Set it free and we may bring a small dose of understanding, perhaps even wisdom, to others... even to ourselves. I want to share [two] stories with you.

I'd like to begin with your story, that of the Class of 1999. Your tale is one of discipline, hard work, and old-fashioned tenacity. I know it wasn't easy because I walked a similar path many years ago, working days and going to law school five nights a week for four years. They tell me that most of you followed a similar routine, attending graduate school on a part-time basis. But Frederick Douglass said it best: "If there is no struggle, there is no progress."

So I offer my congratulations to each of you on a job well done and a degree well earned.

This triumph is not yours alone, however. Most of you didn't walk this path alone. You have jobs, bosses and co-workers, homes, spouses, and children. People who encouraged you and helped lighten your load. You would not have come this far without their support and sacrifice.

You also had the support of a distinguished faculty and administration. You owe them more than you know, as you will discover each time you succeed in business and in life by applying lessons they helped you master here at Bryant College.

THEN AND NOW

I'm fascinated by the second story, that of Bryant College. It was founded back in 1863 by Midwestern entrepreneurs Henry Bryant and Henry Stratton, who sought to fill an educational void. American commerce and industry were flourishing during those Civil War years, creating a need for a whole new class of workers — business professionals. And while traditional colleges produced graduates with years of Greek, Latin, and letters, they provided not one minute of instruction in business.

In as few as 10 weeks, Bryant and Stratton graduated men and women proficient in bookkeeping, commercial law, practical penmanship, and business correspondence. By the 1870s, the College also offered philosophy, language, art, and engineering instruction. Students worked at their own pace, graduating only when they showed mastery in the classroom and effectiveness on teams running the school's mock bank, store, and office. One rite of passage was turning a profit on $1,000 in play money given each new entrant.

To me, today's curriculum and learning experience represent savvy, high-tech versions of the program set out by Bryant and Stratton more than 100 years ago. Now, as then, Bryant students are well versed in a potent mix of business and the humanities. And graduates are as avidly sought by companies today as they were in the last century. You are prepared to be far more than mere technocrats, and as a result will live richer lives and go further in business. The fact is, the higher you look in the ranks of corporate America, the greater the percentage of liberal arts degrees you find. In other words, it takes a whole lot more than business and financial acumen to run a company.

So I would say that in picking Bryant, you chose wisely. Good luck and Godspeed.
“Most of you didn’t walk this path alone. You have jobs, bosses and co-workers, homes, spouses, and children. People who encouraged you and helped lighten your load. You would not have come this far without their support and sacrifice.”

Wayne Budd '99H
Group President, Bell Atlantic
“Every day is the opportunity for a new beginning. Whatever you want to change, start today. What have you always wanted to do that you thought was impossible? What is holding you back from making changes?”

Megan Gorman ’99
Richard Bach [author of Jonathan Livingston Seagull] said, “Learning is finding out what you already know. Doing is demonstrating that you know it. Teaching is reminding others that they know it just as well as you. You are all learners, doers, teachers.”

In the real world, the lines drawn between teachers and learners will be removed. We must be able to seek out our own teachers and recognize those who are looking to learn from us. We have all become good at being students in the classroom, but now is the time to apply our knowledge and become doers.

STARTING ANEW

Every day is the opportunity for a new beginning. Whatever you want to change, start today. What have you always wanted to do that you thought was impossible? What is holding you back from making changes? Focus on how you can accomplish the impossible, rather than on why it is impossible. Now is the time to be the person you have always wanted to be. What a head start you will have if you begin today, May 22, rather than waiting until January 1, 2000, to make your resolutions for the next century and for the rest of your life.

With changes come many unknowns. I am sure that many of you, like me, have experienced moments of apprehension as you consider the future. The security of the known is being traded for the exhilaration of the unknown. The next year will probably bring a new career, new friends, a new community. Do not let fear of the unknown hold you back. Set goals that will help you accomplish your dreams and follow them.

Henry Ford once said, “Obstacles are those frightful things you see when you take your eyes off your goal.” The goal is a wonderful tool that keeps you looking where you are going. Look back only long enough to see how far you’ve come and then focus on the task at hand.

But what about failure? Is it still in the back of your mind? A statement published by United Technologies Corporation in the Wall Street Journal reads, “You’ve failed many times, although you may not remember. You fell down the first time you tried to walk. You almost drowned the first time you tried to swim, didn’t you? Did you hit the ball the first time you swung a bat? . . . Don’t worry about failure. Worry about the chances you miss when you don’t even try.” Believe in yourself even though there may be times when no one else will. The success of accomplishing something is all the sweeter when you know that you made it happen.

And finally, after you become happy, successful, and maybe even famous, don’t forget about your friends at Bryant College, without whom you never would have started on the road to where you are going. What you have achieved, combined with what you are capable of achieving, will guarantee that you are among the very best learners, doers, and teachers of the next century.
