When we launched our capital campaign, Bryant was a very different institution than it is today. We had great people, but our physical plant limited our options in developing new programs, recruiting top-flight faculty, and offering students the kind of comprehensive education for success that we believe is essential today. We felt a need to develop a beautiful campus adjacent to the Unistructure that would provide new facilities for learning experiences and green space for student activities.

Now, we celebrate the astonishing success of the Campaign—“It’s About Changing Lives”—in a campus transformed. The George E. Bello Center for Information and Technology has become the cornerstone of intellectual life on campus, with traditional print resources in the Krupp Library, absolutely state-of-the-art digital research and inquiry capability, and work-study rooms that allow for a team approach consistent with the learning requirements of students today. With the completion of the Elizabeth and Malcolm Chace Wellness and Athletic Center, we have a fitness and workout facility that helps students maintain a healthy lifestyle, including a series of well-attended sessions on weight management, diet, stress reduction, smoking cessation, and other topics. With renovations in facilities across campus including the Unistructure, the Bryant Center, and the Kofler Center, the Campaign has enabled us to develop a physical plant that allows us to meet our strategic goal to provide a student-centered experience focused on academic excellence.

And it’s working far better than we had any reason to expect. The applicant pool for Fall 2005 was the largest ever, and the quality of applicants was the highest ever. From this pool, we were able to select, recruit, and provide for our biggest and best first-year class in history, with 830 students and an average SAT up 40 points versus last year. Resources from the Campaign have enabled us to not only create financial aid packages that give these great students an opportunity for a Bryant education, but to provide them IBM Pentium IV laptops to use on a campus that outside evaluators have consistently praised as among the best in the nation in terms of wireless access and technological innovation. We’ve also diversified our student body with increasing numbers of students from throughout the nation and around the world, and developed programs to ensure that all students can make an effective transition into college.

If there’s one overriding lesson I’ve absorbed, it’s that a higher education institution can’t be static; just as the world is changing, we must embrace change. We wouldn’t have developed our acclaimed international program, achieved university status, expanded our athletic programs, renewed our AACSB accreditation, enhanced our national and international reputation, or attracted the quality of people that you find here today if we’d been satisfied with being “good enough.” It is our mission, it is our destiny to be great.

If we were to list the names of the people who have contributed to this institutional transformation, it could fill up this whole issue of Bryant Business. It’s about great faculty, terrific students, dedicated and enthusiastic alumni, committed volunteers, far-sighted and generous donors, smart and hardworking staff. It’s about changing lives.

With your continuing help, engagement, and support, we have changed thousands of lives and will continue to do so far into the future.

On behalf of everybody in the Bryant community, thank you—for your extraordinary generosity, for your belief in our potential, for your engagement in our vision.

Sincerely,

Ronald K. Machtley
President
The Campaign for Bryant has transformed an already strong university into one that is, in the words of one veteran professor,

“Absolutely First Class.”
Jack Callahan '56, George Bello '58, and Malcolm "Kim" Chace led The Campaign for Bryant to a triumphant conclusion.
What began as just a gleam in the eye of a few of Bryant's visionary leaders has become a stunning, full-fledged reality: The Campaign for Bryant has surpassed its $35-million goal and is fulfilling its promise to change lives. From the dean's-listed freshman who learns he's won a scholarship to the professor who now uses new state-of-the-art technology to expand and enrich her classroom instruction; from the million-dollar philanthropist lit up with pride to the newly minted graduate digging $25 out of her jeans pocket for the senior class gift—everyone is taking home the prize.

"It's an emotional thing for me," says Jack Callahan '56, outgoing chair of the board of trustees and vice chair of The Campaign for Bryant. Callahan received an honorary doctorate from Bryant in 2005 and describes the tremendous pride he felt looking out from the stage at a sea of happy faces at Commencement. "You've never seen so many positive, upbeat people," he says. "You think to yourself, 'Holy mackerel, where did these kids come from?'"

The Bryant family has good reason to be celebrating. The University set an ambitious—some thought too ambitious—$35 million goal for its capital campaign. "At the beginning, a few people questioned what we were doing," Callahan concedes. Bryant had never conducted an extended campaign before, and, with its origins as a proprietary institution, had only a brief history of alumni giving. "But now," Callahan says, "there are believers all over campus."

Hasbro chairman and CEO Alan Hassenfeld, though not a Bryant graduate, was among the first to get the campaign ball rolling in 1998 with a $1.5 million donation. Hassenfeld has been a board member at Brown University, the University of Pennsylvania, and other leading institutions over the years, but continues to serve as a Bryant trustee because, as he says, the place has got real people who are getting things done. After he made his gift to the Campaign, he stepped back and said, "Now it's time for the alums to give."

That was all George Bello '58 and his wife Carol needed to hear: "It wasn't a question of yes or no, it was a question of how much," George Bello says. "The beauty of having some financial success is being able to give back to the institutions that have helped you." His lead gift of $5 million enabled Bryant to get started on one of the crown jewels in the Campaign's master plan—the George E. Bello Center for Information and Technology, designed by the same world-renowned architects who designed additions to the New York Public Library and Frank Lloyd Wright's Guggenheim Museum: Gwathmey Siegel and Associates.

"Bryant is clearly on the move," says vice chair of the Campaign Malcolm "Kim" Chace, whose gift helped build the Elizabeth and Malcolm Chace Wellness and Athletic Center. "Applications are up, incoming student quality is at an all-time high—it just makes sense to build on this great foundation."

After the exciting momentum of its launch, the Campaign weathered the dot com crash of 2000 and the 9/11 attacks that forced many institutions to button down their hatches and conserve resources. Throughout, the Bryant family persevered, holding campaign functions in cities all over the nation—Boston, Miami, Chicago, San Francisco—and meeting a $750,000 challenge grant from the Kresge Foundation. Alumni from all generations came together to push annual giving to a record high, infusing Bryant with general funds for a variety of university enhancements including scholarships and expanded programming.

The Campaign has also enabled the University to recruit and retain the best possible faculty, a crucial goal of the University's first strategic plan. "Great students come about by being taught by great teachers," says Bello, who is still in touch with his accounting professor, John Renza, Sr. '43. "He was a role model for me," he adds. "I can still picture his worksheets on the board!"

An institution that has never satisfied itself with the status quo, Bryant has continued to look for new ways to provide the best, most relevant education to its students. And the Campaign has made it possible for the University to achieve its mission of educating the whole student—to prepare students to achieve their personal best in life and in their chosen professions.

So of course the Campaign has made a profound difference to students and faculty on campus today. It's also made a difference to donors, who feel in their hearts what it means to have a positive impact on so many people. In the pages that follow, you'll hear the voices and see the faces of Bryant students, donors, professors, and alumni who can attest to the electricity generated by the Campaign—the enthusiasm, commitment, and involvement—and to the remarkable way the Campaign has changed their lives. 📚
BIRTH OF A TRADING ROOM

When Kristin Stein '06 was in high school she knew she wanted to study business. But when she visited Bryant's campus the summer before her senior year of high school, she had a hard time seeing past the orange construction fences, the clods of unearthed dirt, the rumbling bobcats and drills. "I was so discouraged," says Stein, who didn't realize she was looking at the nascent George E. Bello Center for Information and Technology.

When Stein returned to campus eight months later for an open house, however, she was completely won over—by the enthusiasm of the students she met, by a generous trustee scholarship that covered three-quarters of her tuition, and by the promise of what that construction work would soon become.

By the beginning of Stein's sophomore year at Bryant, the beautiful Bello Center—the centerpiece of The Campaign for Bryant—was open for business. Inside, the C. V. Starr Financial Markets Center's state-of-the-art trading room, along with a $50,000 grant for curriculum development from the NASDAQ Foundation, made possible a sophisticated kind of coursework that ultimately helped prepare Stein for her first job as a financial analyst for Citibank Private Bank in Manhattan this fall.

"The FMC gave us hands-on experience so we could see the theory put into practice," says Stein, whose studies included creating an investment portfolio with a tracking template linked up to Reuters live data. Now, Bryant's trustees have allocated $200,000 of University funds for advanced finance students to manage in real portfolios in order to learn investment strategy. "The Financial Markets Center takes students out of textbook thinking," says finance professor Asli Asciohlu. "The students enjoy the courses so much, I don't think they notice how well they're learning."

Stein is grateful for the enhancements in the finance department and for the scholarship support she received. Otherwise she's sure she wouldn't have had the four-year college experience that she loved, the close relationships with Bryant faculty, and a great junior year-abroad experience. "I'd do it all again in a heartbeat," she says.

Joe Cravero ’07, Somalisa Ker ’08, and Julie McMahon ’07 mix it up in the kitchen of the new ICC.
CREATING AN INTERCULTURAL HUB

Formerly located in a dorm room in the basement of Hall 6, Bryant University's Intercultural Center (ICC) has new digs where you can't miss them—squarely in the middle of the Bryant Center. Supported by The Campaign for Bryant, the spacious facility includes a lounge, a modern kitchen for preparing ethnic meals, a conference room, and administrative offices for the International Student Organization (ISO) and the Multicultural Student Union (MSU)—organizations open to all Bryant students.

“The ICC's goal is to bring the world to Bryant, and the Center's new space caters to that,” says Somali-American Ker '08, an accounting student and vice president of the MSU. “Students stop by all the time during the semester, before or after class. During finals, we're open at night for study sessions. We couldn’t do that in Hall 6.”

Ker, whose parents came to the U.S. from Cambodia in 1975, will be organizing two celebrations this year—Lunar New Year in February and Asian Pacific Heritage Month in April. “This was my calling,” she says. “I can connect the Bryant campus with the Asian American community here in Providence because I'm part of both.”

In supporting the ICC, the Campaign has achieved two mutually beneficial aims: serving the needs of Bryant's multicultural population and fostering an appreciation of diversity among tomorrow's business leaders. “The ICC is a crucial part of the school's mission to prepare students for success in business and in life,” explains Abraham Hunter, director of the Center. “Everyone who comes in the door is exposed to something new or different. You can't leave here without knowing more, without being challenged or awed.”

WELLNESS FOR LIFE

When Mike Fisher '67 returned to campus in 1966 to finish his degree and work in the athletics department, his coach, Tom Duffy, loaned the basketball player and his new bride a set of furniture to fill their empty apartment. Fisher has since built a successful career in the financial services industry, but he has never forgotten all the things Bryant gave him, both before and after graduating. So when the opportunity came for him to take a prominent role in The Campaign for Bryant, he jumped—like the hoopseller he once was. His gift was instrumental in helping to fund what would become the new Elizabeth and Malcolm Chase Wellness and Athletic Center, which meets current students' needs as holistically as Bryant met his own.

The facilities—“just sparkling in every respect,” in Fisher's words—include an natatorium, cardiovascular and strength equipment, and Cunnamino Group Exercise Room for kickboxing, spinning, yoga, and aerobics classes, among other activities. The Center also has a full-time health and wellness coordinator, Jennifer DiPrete, who has instituted such programs as "Wellness for Life," "Finding a Balance: Stress Management," and "Body Image and the Media" to support students both physically and psychologically. “My day is just not complete without my gym visit,” says Rose Qualtieri ’07, who, like other students, enjoys enhanced self-confidence and focus thanks to the Wellness Center. “I feel like a whole new person.”

Alumni gifts helped build the Elizabeth and Malcolm Chase Wellness and Athletic Center.

FROM TRAGEDY TO LEGACY

Bryant students are always out there, getting and up-starting, and in 1985, a group of them once again started something new—in this case, the first new fraternity on campus in fifteen years. The fraternity brothers of Kappa Delta Rho had a great experience of fellowship and service, and after graduation, a group of them continued to get together for yearly golf outings.

Then the unthinkable occurred: Erik Constantino '86 lost his nine-month-old son, Jason, to a severe case of bacterial meningitis. Shocked and saddened by the tragedy, Erik's fraternity brothers—many of whom were just starting families of their own—decided to reach out in the most meaningful way they could: they began a foundation in Jason's name to fund an annual scholarship at Bryant for a student majoring in marketing or management. The friends continue to meet annually to golf, but now about 90 others join them, and the outing has become a benefit for the Jason Constantino Memorial Foundation Partners-in-Scholarship Fund.

 Already the scholarship has made a critical difference to a number of Bryant students. "My mom and dad were so proud, and I was ecstatic," recalls last year's recipient, marketing major Derrick Pouliot '07, of the day he got his financial aid package in the mail. "It's a great honor, and it really helps my family." Pouliot made the Dean's List.

A SCHOLARSHIP FROM THE HEART

Janice Wilbur Sullivan's personal history has been tied up with Bryant's for the last century or so. Her grandfather, Elmer Wilbur, graduated from Bryant in 1913 and returned as Dean of Admissions and Dean of Men in 1946. She herself attended Bryant for several semesters in the 1970s, studying marketing and other courses she loved, but she did not complete a degree program. Her husband, Peter Sullivan, graduated in 1974 and remained active on campus, serving in various capacities including membership on the Campaign Steering Committee.

Three years ago Mrs. Sullivan became a trustee, and the family recently funded the Janice Wilbur Sullivan Endowed Scholarship to help a female Bryant student. "Education is so important," Sullivan says. "Once you have it, no one can take it away from you.

It's one thing to put your own children through school, but it feels very special to help a student in need."

"I love her," says Kristin Acciari '05, who has received the Sullivan scholarship for the last two years. "She's absolutely wonderful, and she's done so much for me."

The scholarship was originally designated as a one-year grant. But when Sullivan met Acciari on campus two years ago, she was so impressed with her that she decided to extend the scholarship so it would stay with Kristin until she graduated.

"It gives me great pleasure to see someone finish school, to have a fresh start, and not be bombarded with loans," Sullivan says, a phenomenon Acciari can appreciate. "I just met a girl who's walking away from college with a bachelor's degree and a $90,000 debt!" Acciari says. "A scholarship like this definitely makes a difference for students.

And this is exactly what Janice Sullivan had in mind when she endowed the scholarship. "I did not graduate from Bryant," says Sullivan, "but I am so proud to be affiliated with such a prestigious school and to know that I am helping to make a difference in a young lady's college education."

Kristin Acciari '05 is attending Bryant on a scholarship funded by Bryant trustee Janice Wilbur Sullivan.
Derrick Pouliot ’07 is a recipient of the Jason Constantino Memorial Foundation Partners-in-Scholarship Fund, created by Bryant alumni.
Like many other Bryant students, Daniel Fiandaca '96 saw his GPA go up after taking a course designed by Professor Laurie Hazard.
A RISING TIDE LIFTS ALL STUDENTS

Bryant professor Laurie Hazard wrote the book on learning, namely, Foundations for Learning (Prentice Hall)—the basis for the University's Foundations for Learning course. The 15-week course began as an elective, but when research showed that students who took it earned a grade point average .5 higher than students who didn't, Bryant knew it had to make the course's learning strategies available to all incoming students. The Campaign enabled the University to meet that imperative by providing funding to hire additional instructors. “I lost my control group!” Hazard says, but she is delighted to see that all her students have risen with the academic tide.

It’s a trend that finance major Daniel Fiandaca ’06 can confirm. “I had gone to a private high school and thought I knew how to study, but this course made a real difference for me,” he says. Fiandaca describes how, just as the freshmen were studying for their first mid-terms, the course immersed them in a unit on test preparation. “It couldn’t have been more relevant,” he says. And—true to the statistic—his GPA improved .5 points.

Fiandaca, who is completing a summer internship in institutional investment services at Fidelity, has also worked at Bryant’s Academic Center for Excellence (ACE). Comprised of a writing center and learning labs staffed by specialists and certified student tutors, ACE provides one-on-one tutoring in every subject area Bryant offers and connects all first-year students with a faculty member for personal and academic support.

“You can learn how to do things the old-fashioned way—by making a lot of mistakes,” says Hazard. “But that might damage your GPA. The Academic Center for Excellence and the Foundations for Learning course provide what’s called the ‘vicarious experience of consequences’—learning from someone else’s mistakes.”

DO THE RIGHT THING

In the Hollywood version of Jane and Keith Mahler’s story, the couple would “meet cute” reaching for the same magazine in Bryant’s library and, decades later, name a periodical room in the Bello Center to commemorate their romance. In the actual version of the story, Jane ’79 and Keith ’78 (who really did meet as Bryant undergraduates) made their major gift to place than Bryant to invest for the future,” says Keith.

Not that sentiment didn’t play a role in their decision. The Mahlers’ years at Bryant had a great impact on their careers—Jane studied hotel and restaurant management and subsequently owned and ran her own banquet hall; Keith studied finance and is now a successful real estate investor—and on their personal lives, as well. “We have incredible memories and enduring friendships from Bryant,” says Jane.

“For me,” Jane continues, “giving to the Campaign came down to setting an example, to teaching the next generation that the institutions that matter to us will not survive without the generosity of people who can afford to give.” Keith is more direct. “Giving back,” he says, “is the right thing to do.”

Campaign Highlight
August 2004
Living up to its promise of student-centered, academic excel-lence, Bryant College becomes Bryant University.
MULTI-TASKING FOR BRYANT

Andrea Picarelli ‘01 wears a lot of Bryant hats. There’s the successful-alumna hat: immediately after completing her B.S., she landed a plum job in human resources for Tyco Engineered Products & Services. There’s the current-student hat: she’s now finishing a second degree at Bryant—this one with a concentration in communication—to complement her business background. There’s the recruiter hat: Picarelli interviews business majors for positions at Tyco—a role that has given her a unique perspective on Bryant students’ readiness for the job market. “I just don’t see this level of preparedness in students from other schools,” she says.

And now there’s the donor hat: caught up in the excitement surrounding The Campaign for Bryant, Picarelli took advantage of her employer’s matching gift program to begin an endowment at Bryant. Proceeds are earmarked for two purposes. The Dr. Hinda Pollard Scholarship, named for a late Bryant management professor who was a big influence on Picarelli, will assist a student who has a communication major or minor. Meanwhile, the Robert and Maureen Picarelli Fund, named for her parents, supports enhancements for the communication department. “I wouldn’t be where I am if it weren’t for Bryant and my parents who strongly encouraged me to attend,” she says. “The University continues to evolve and grow, and I want to add to that.”

A COMMUNICATION COUP

Laura Weiderhold ‘04, now works at WFXT-Boston Fox25.

Everybody laughed when Laura Weiderhold ‘04 told them she was going to business school to prepare for a career in broadcast communications. But one year after graduating from Bryant, Weiderhold is newsroom coordinator at WFXT-Boston Fox25, which reaches the fifth-largest market in the nation.

Bryant students who concentrate in communication have typically gone on to careers in human resources, public relations, and ad agencies. But campaign resources have so enriched the communication department that, according to outgoing chair Stanley Baran, it’s become a leading program in New England—and prominent on the national map as well. Now students like Weiderhold are landing jobs at newspapers, magazines, and broadcast media outlets.

Weiderhold credits her success to a winning combination of communication coursework, internships, and a solid grounding in business. (“After all,” she says, “business is in everything!”) Weiderhold undertook an independent study in media literacy—a sort of crash course in the history of television programming—that armed her with an excellent background in the industry. Another arrow in her quiver was a senior year internship facilitated by Bryant’s career services in the newsroom of WJAR, the NBC affiliate in Providence. “I learned the assignment side of the news working with editors in the mornings, following up on tips, deciding which stories would play on which news show,” she recalls.

Weiderhold also got exposure to the technical side by going out on shoots with the satellite trucks and reporters—watching them write the story, do the voiceover, set up for a live shot, and seeing how sometimes a story could fall apart or take a 180-degree turn. “I got all this great career experience while getting paid to do something I loved,” she says.

Other recent enhancements in the communication department include the hiring of three full-time faculty—including Wendy Samter, a rising star in the field—and a new state-of-the-art television production studio that is part of the $5-million renovation of the Koffler Center. The new TV studio has brought about new courses, such as a class in television production taught by Mike Montecalvo, the morning anchor on Rhode Island’s Fox affiliate. In this advanced class, students produce a weekly program that is cablecast to every system in Rhode Island. “Our students write the theme music, they design the graphics, they write, research, and produce every episode in our magnificent studio,” says Stanley Baran. “It’s a terrific opportunity for them. And thanks to the Campaign, we don’t have to patch things together. While other schools are grappling with reduced resources, Bryant can provide an education that’s absolutely first class.”
Bryant students gain hands-on experience in the new TV production studio in the Koffler Center.
A GIFT THAT KEEPS ON GIVING

At Homecoming on September 24, 2005, a special reception for the class of 2000 dedicated a unique senior class gift: the stone wall in Hassenfeld Common. Installed in 2001, the wall is a focal point on the campus, flanking the brick alumni walk and joining the Bello Center with the Unistructure. Students play football and frisbee near it; they walk alongside it on their way to class. It frames their activities and forms the quadrangle in the heart of Bryant’s campus.

“We had an unusual amount of spirit and class identity,” says Bob Fresella ’00, who was co-chair of the senior class gift. “We wanted to give back to the institution that had given so much to us.” The Bello Center had just broken ground that year, and the seniors saw underwriting the stone wall as their way of becoming part of the transformative project that was beginning just as they were leaving. The class of 2000 was also the first class to institute a multi-year pledge structure, allowing young graduates to split a pledged gift over a five-year period. Inspired by the seniors’ enthusiasm, Campaign vice chair Kim Chace matched their cumulative gift by 20 percent, bringing the class gift to a grand total of $54,000.

Five years later, the seniors are still stepping up to the plate for Bryant: the recently graduated class of 2005 started a library endowment fund for their class gift. “It was a unanimous choice,” says John Cullen ’05, who served on the student senate for his four years at Bryant. The students used a traditional network to raise funds for their class gift, with student executive board members who would recruit five donors from the class, who would then each recruit another five donors. Douglas Krupp ’69 and the University worked together to match raised funds, bringing the gift to a grand total of $72,000 for the endowment. Says Cullen, “It will be a gift that keeps on giving.”

The stone wall in Hassenfeld Common was funded largely by the Class of 2000’s senior gift.
PRESIDENTS' CUP
In intercollegiate athletics, just as in the business world, consistency is an excellent measure of success. The Bryant University athletic program is demonstrating a consistent ability to compete and win at a high level. In the 2004-05 academic year, the Bulldogs received the Northeast-10 Conference Presidents' Cup trophy for the second straight year. The Presidents' Cup is awarded annually to the top overall athletic program among the 15 member institutions that make up the NE-10.

"Bryant University has again enjoyed a remarkable season of success," said conference commissioner David Brunk. "The commitment and dedication of its coaching staff and its student-athletes is extraordinary, and the entire institution should be extremely proud of this accomplishment."

Bryant claimed team conference titles in three sports: women's volleyball, women's tennis, and men's golf, while the women's softball team won its first-ever conference tournament championship in the spring. Men's tennis finished second in the final standings while softball, men's lacrosse, and women's lacrosse all placed third.

Bryant finished second in the Presidents' Cup standing in 2002 and again in 2003, before finally capturing the trophy following the 2004 season.

The Presidents' Cup is awarded to the institution that compiles the most points based on the placement of each of its programs that compete in league championships. Points for men's and women's cross country, men's and women's indoor and outdoor track & field, and men's golf are awarded based on placement in respective conference championships.

In addition to the success Bryant saw in conference competition, the athletic department also secured a spot on the national scene with eight student-athletes earning All-American athletic honors in 2004-05; 16 earned all-Region distinction, and more than 40 student-athletes were recognized for academic success in the classroom. Bryant also sent eight teams to various NCAA championships this year—highlighted by the men's basketball team's run to the NCAA Division II Championship game in March.

MEN'S BASKETBALL HONORED AT STATE HOUSE

The 2004-05 Bryant University men's basketball season will be remembered for years to come. During its run through the NCAA Division II tournament, the Bulldogs captured the hearts of the Bryant community and much of the state of Rhode Island in their quest for the school's first national title.

Though the men came up just short in the championship game, which was viewed on CBS by more than 3.6 million, they received a hero's welcome from a large group of cheering students as they returned to campus with a police escort that included two Rhode Island state troopers.

On April 6 the team was invited to visit the Rhode Island State House as guests of Governor Donald Carcieri—and they were saluted by the Rhode Island Senate.

"No one will forget the thrilling run in the NCAA tournament," proclaimed Senate President Joseph A. Montalbano before a standing-room only session in the Senate Chambers. "These individuals are champions, leaders, and ambassadors."

Later that evening, President Machtley honored the Bulldogs with the NCAA finalist trophy at a campus rally.

The Bulldogs won a school record 25 games in 2004-05, led by junior regional All-American John Williams '06 and Mike Williams '04, the Northeast-10 Conference Defensive Player of the Year.

The 2005-06 men's team will open their season with away exhibition games against national powerhouses University of Connecticut (November 3) and UNLV (November 12).
The successes in the Bryant University Athletics Department over the past couple of years have propelled Bryant to top status in the conference and enabled it to compete on regional and national stages.

One of the key architects behind the Bryant athletics program's recent success has announced that he is leaving the University. Dan Gavitt, Bryant's highly respected Director of Athletics, will become the Associate Commissioner for men's basketball at the Big East Conference.

"My six years at Bryant University have been very special because of the incredible people on this campus," says Gavitt. "President Ron Machlley gave me an outstanding professional opportunity and I appreciate his confidence and support for the program. I'll miss working with the best coaches and student-athletes in the Northeast-10."

Since joining the Bryant University athletics department in 1999, Gavitt has overseen the highly successful athletics program that has also focused on its athletes' academic success. A total of 40 student-athletes earned academic honors nationally and by the Northeast-10 Conference last year. During the 2000-01 campaign, Bryant earned the distinction of finishing third among all Division II institutions in student-athlete graduation rates.

Bryant has seen several teams win conference and regional titles and has won two straight Northeast-10 Conference Presidents' Cup trophies. Over the course of the past two seasons, Bryant captured eight conference titles, delivered 16 teams to the NCAA tournament, and has produced 18 All-Americans.

Also earning recognition by NACDA is Bryant graduate Craig Bogar '76, who was named NAIA Southeast Director of the Year. Bogar, director of athletics at the University of Mobile since 1998, was a two-time team captain of the men's swimming team at Bryant and later earned his master's degree from the University of Maryland.

Award winners are selected by NACDA from four geographic regions—northeast, southeast, central, and west; the NACDA membership is separated into six categories—Division I-A; Division I-AA/ Division II; Division III; NAIA; and Junior/Community Colleges.

The Bulldog softball team enjoyed unprecedented success during the spring season, highlighted by the program's first-ever Northeast-10 Conference championship, and another trip to the NCAA tournament. Leading the charge was senior standout Deidre Kittredge '05, of Worcester, Mass. Kittredge was a force at the plate, hitting .413 with 62 base hits including a team-best five home runs. Her efforts were rewarded as Kittredge was named 2005 Northeast-10 Conference Softball Player of the Year, the first such honor in the program's history. Head coach Lisa-Ann Wallace won coach of the year honors by the NE-10 in 2002.

The Bulldogs posted a 29-17 record in 2005, winning the Northeast-10 Conference tournament championship with a 4-0 win over top-seed and host Le Moyne College, earning the conference's automatic bid to the NCAA tournament for the second time in the program's history.

Well before the first championship trophy was awarded this past season, back when the new academic year was barely a month old, Bryant women's tennis student-athlete Sacha Solomon '07 was hard at work playing for a regional championship. Participating in the Intercollegiate Tennis Association (ITA) East Regional Championships last September, the Bourne, Mass., native would claim the championship with a perfect 5-0 record and with it, represent Bryant and the East Region at the ITA Championships in Orlando, Fla.

Coming off an incredible freshman season in 2004—she was named the Northeast-10 Conference Player and Freshman of the Year and led Bryant to its first conference title and NCAA appearance—Solomon placed sixth at the nationals and finished the pre-season tournament with a No. 1 ranking in the region heading into the new season. In addition, Solomon's play earned her a No. 27 national ranking—the highest ever in school history.

Solomon's play during the preseason in the fall certainly helped set the stage for the spring season where the Bulldogs again proved to be the tops in the conference. They posted a 22-2 record in 2005 and earned their second straight conference championship and berth in the NCAA tournament.
MEET THE DEANS

Bryant’s change to university status last August has resulted in a reconfiguration of academics into a college of business and a college of arts and sciences, with a dean to oversee each. The College of Business continues Bryant’s tradition for educating business professionals and leaders with programs that provide numerous career options along with a liberal arts component. At the same time, Bryant’s Graduate School of Business is expanding its traditional business education by creating joint partnerships abroad. The College of Arts and Sciences offers degree programs and minors in the liberal arts, which are supplemented by core business courses.

In his new role as dean of the College of Business, Jack W. Trifs will lead the continuing development of business academic programs and standards. He began in this position on July 1. Trifs’ academic career started in 1984 at the University of South Carolina, where he taught finance. Since 2002, he was dean and professor of finance at the School of Business, University of Southern Maine. From 1995 to 2002, he served as associate dean and interim dean at the Crummer Graduate School of Business, Rollins College. From 1997 to 1999, he was director of the school’s two-year, full-time M.B.A. program.

Trifs earned a doctorate in finance and econometrics from the University of Florida, a master’s degree in finance and accounting from Dalhousie University, Canada, and a bachelor’s degree in accounting from the University of New Brunswick.

Says Trifs, “There is no reason Bryant shouldn’t be recognized as one of the top business programs in the country—or in the world.” Trifs cites the quality of the programs, people, faculty, and the vision and leadership on the part of the senior administration as factors that attracted him to the University.

Longtime Bryant professor David Lux has been appointed dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. “I’m looking forward to working with Jack Trifs,” Lux says. “We look at the development of the two colleges as a joint venture.” Lux served as special assistant to the vice president for academic affairs before he was appointed dean of undergraduate studies in 2003. He came to Bryant in 1990 as an associate professor of history, and in 1996 was appointed chair of the department of history and social sciences. Prior to that, he was an assistant professor of history at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University and published a major study on early modern scientific organizations—Patronage and ROYAL SCIENCE: THE ACADEMIE DE PHYSIQUE DE CAEN (CORNELL, 1989). Dean Lux received bachelor’s, master’s, and doctoral degrees in history from the University of Michigan.

“Bryant’s approach gives students the basis for experiences that change lives—and they can bring their broader educational background into play with their skills and real-world problem solving.”

NEW FACULTY

The following faculty members have joined Bryant for the 2005-06 academic year.

Esha Chatterjee, assistant professor of mathematics, has a B.Sc. and an M.Sc. from the Indian Institute of Technology; an M.S. from the University of Massachusetts Amherst; and a Ph.D. (May 2005) from the University of Rhode Island.

Carol DeMoranville, assistant professor of marketing, has a B.S. from The College of William and Mary; an M.B.A. from the Appalachian State University; and a Ph.D. from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Ramesh Mohan, assistant professor of economics, has a B.S. and M.S. from the University of Malaya and a Ph.D. from Kansas State University.
Associate Professor and Sarkisian Chair in Financial Services Peter Nigro presented a paper titled “Borrower-Lender Distance, Credit Scoring, and the Performance of Small Business Loans,” written jointly with Robert DeYoung and Denis Glennon, at the 41st Annual Bank Structure and Competition Conference, Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, this spring. More than 600 people attended the conference, which featured keynote speaker Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan. Nigro also presented the paper in June in Berlin, where the keynote speaker was the president of the Bundesbank.

Professor Robert Conti received a Shingo Research Prize Award for his co-authored article “The Effects of Just-in-Time/Lean Production on Worker Job Stress” at the 17th Annual Shingo Prize Conference held in April in Grand Rapids, Michigan. The Shingo Prize was established in 1988 to promote an awareness of lean manufacturing concepts and to recognize companies that achieve world-class status. Business Week has dubbed it the “Nobel prize of manufacturing.”

Communication professor Stanley Baran served as Visiting Pastor at Kingston Congregational Church on February 20, giving the sermon “Speak the gospel in an accent not often heard in our culture,” which focused on the United Church of Christ’s activism in media freedom.

Professor of English Tom Chandler, who is also Poet Laureate of Rhode Island, was the keynote speaker at the 12th Annual Writers’ Day conference held at Southern New Hampshire University in March. His address was titled “The Community Writer—Confronting Creativity on Demand.” He was profiled in the April issue of Education Update and gave a lecture and poetry reading at Roger Williams University on April 28.

Professor of economics Joe Ilacqua lectured at the European School of Management in Tbilisi, Georgia, in April. Pictured are Ilacqua (left) and his colleague Bardi Badri Gelitashvili, economics faculty at ESM. Ilacqua also visited the European Humanities University in Minsk, Belarus, and other universities in Ukraine, Belarus, and Russia to lecture and work with faculty, students, and colleagues as well as alumni from Bryant’s Community Connections program.

IN MEMORIAM

Earl F. Briden

English professor and former dean of undergraduate studies Earl F. Briden, Ph.D., died on January 28. A long-time resident of Cranston, he taught English at Bryant University from 1960 until 1996, when he became assistant dean of faculty; he later became dean of faculty and, in 1997, dean of undergraduate studies. He returned to the faculty in 2003. At Bryant he also served as chair of the English department and coordinator of the communication program. He was awarded the Bryant Alumni Association’s Distinguished Faculty Award in 1984 and the Award for Excellence in Teaching in the Liberal Arts in 1989.

Dr. Briden received his Ph.D. in English from Brown University in 1970, his master’s degree from Brown in 1966, and his Ed.B. summa cum laude from Rhode Island College in 1963. Before teaching at Bryant, he was a faculty member at the University of New Hampshire and he had taught at the Leander Peck Junior High School in Barrington. A Mark Twain scholar, he published many articles and book reviews in scholarly journals and anthologies and he contributed a number of articles to the Mark Twain Encyclopedia. He was a member of the Mark Twain Circle, an affiliate of the Modern Language Association. He served in the U.S. Army from 1955 to 1958, and spent two of these years in Budingen, Germany, as a tank commander and tank driver with the 83rd Reconnaissance Battalion, 3rd Armored Division, with the primary assignment of relieving units patrolling the East German border.

Dr. Briden requested that donations in his name be made to the Bryant University Scholarship Fund, 1150 Douglas Pike, Smithfield, R.I. 02917 or to St. David’s Memorial Fund.
YANG APPOINTED TO NATIONAL COMMITTEE
The National Committee on United States-China Relations selected Hong Yang, associate professor of science and technology and director of the U.S.-China Institute at Bryant, as a member and one of 20 Public Intellectual Fellows on the committee’s new Public Intellectuals Program.

The program aims to enrich understanding of policy-making processes in both the United States and China, establish useful relations with academic colleagues and policy practitioners, and contribute to the policy debate on China and how best to manage Sino-American relations. Funded by The Henry Luce Foundation and The C.V. Starr Foundation, the program will bring the Public Intellectual Fellows to Washington and Beijing for briefings. In addition, they will accompany high-level delegations to visit both countries.

More than 125 scholars applied to the program. Yang is the sole representative in the academic environmental category. He will serve on the committee for two years.

NEW TEXTBOOK BASED ON BRYANT FIRST-YEAR PROGRAM
Laurie Hazard, director of the Academic Center for Excellence, and J.P. Nadeau ’90, former director of The Writing Center, are authors of the new textbook Foundations for Learning, published in June by Prentice Hall. Based on Bryant’s successful first-year program of the same name, the book encourages college students to take responsibility for their own education and gives them the tools to do so.

OGBUEHI HOSTS M.B.A. STUDENT TOUR OF SOUTHEAST ASIA
In an April lecture titled “The Quest for Global Knowledge,” five M.B.A. students shared how their business and cultural perspectives were transformed by a 20-day study voyage directed by marketing professor Alphonso Ogbuehi. The trip, which took place in January, brought the group to Singapore, Bangkok, Shanghai, and Hong Kong, enabling M.B.A. students to take an in-depth and up-close look at the fastest growing emerging markets in Asia. Students experienced first-hand the dynamism that characterizes the business environment of the major economic centers of China and Southeast Asia. Professional and personal testimonials about the experience were accompanied by inspiring video footage.
Bryant's 142nd Undergraduate Commencement on May 22 was actually a first as well. The 683 seniors were the first undergrads to earn a degree from Bryant University. Three academic programs saw their first graduates walk across the stage to claim bachelor's degrees in communication, information technology, and applied psychology.

William W. (Bill) George, former chairman and CEO of Medtronic, professor of management practice at the Harvard Business School, and the author of Authentic Leadership: Rediscovering the Secrets to Creating Lasting Values, received an honorary degree and gave the keynote address. He advised students to be themselves and lead with their own unique qualities.

"If you are genuine with others, and practice the five dimensions of an authentic leader—knowing your purpose, practicing your values, leading with your heart, building enduring relationships, and having self-discipline—I have no doubt that you will be an authentic leader throughout your life. Not sometime in the future, but starting right now," said George.

Also receiving honorary degrees were John D. (Jack) Callahan '56, chair of the board of directors and CEO of the Callahan Group and chair of Bryant's board of trustees from 1998 to 2005; Zhang Jingao, president of China University of Geosciences (Wuhan), where he also teaches management practices; and Arthur H. White, co-founder and vice chairman of Yankelovich (formerly Yankelovich, Skelly & White) and a Bryant trustee from 1990 to 1999.

Graduate School Commencement was held on Thursday, May 19, for 128 students. Shivan S. Subramaniam, chairman and chief executive officer of FM Global in Johnston, R.I., received an honorary degree and gave the keynote address. He asked graduates to help restore the reputation of the business community after "recent high-profile investigations in the mutual fund, financial, and investment banking industries, and the disastrous meltdowns of several very large, publicly traded companies." Said Subramaniam, "It's the only long-term approach that will be effective."
New graduate Matthew Alarie proudly displays the flag of his concentration.

President Ron Machleig, left, stands with John D. Callahan ’56, past chair of the board of trustees and CEO of the Callahan Group.

Janet Prohaska, associate director of public relations, congratulates son Steven on earning his communication degree.

Zhang Jiaojiao, president of China University of Geosciences (Wuhan), received an honorary degree from Bryant.

Holly McCarthy, Abigail Janssen-Lornquist, Eric Widor, and Tahani James celebrate their success as Bryant graduates during Commencement festivities.
Stan Lomangino surveys the crowd that turned out for Commencement 2005.

Ian Johnson, Che Perez, and Shane Chelseaham (left to right) were members of the University’s Intercultural Center while students at Bryant. The Center fosters an appreciation for diversity and an understanding of other cultures.

Quentin ("Que") Phillips, president of the Student Senate, and Ryan O’Toole get psyched for what the future has in store.

Sherri D'Alessandro, of Lakeville, Mass., revels in her new status as a Bryant graduate.

Heather Belanger looks jovial as her tassel blows in the wind. Could she be thinking yet about a career in marketing?

Kati Mackley (left), wife of President Ron Mackley, takes in the pomp and circumstance along with Lucy Callahan (center) and Maureen Gibbons.

Brand-new graduate and finance enthusiast Kristen Wilson stands with mom, Shirley Wilson, assistant professor of management at Bryant.

Graduate Bosita Yip and associate professor of history James (Jim) Estey are picture perfect in their caps and gowns.
ROTC members Robert Jacavone, John Boyle, and Michael Thomas are sworn in at commencement exercises.

Vi Pham shares a special moment with her family.

Stephen Miller, a member of the Alumni-Admission Connection, exchanges a few cheerful words with a classmate.

Marketing chair Keith Murray gets caught up in the moment.

Mauricia Lopes has a lot to smile about ... she has a shiny new business degree, emphasizing finance.
The spring semester brought a variety of exciting conferences, lectures, and panel discussions.

Fashion designer and philanthropist Kenneth Cole spoke on April 5 as part of the Entrepreneurial Extravaganza, sponsored by the Bryant University Global Entrepreneurship Program and the Brown University Entrepreneurship Program.

The Department of History and Social Sciences and the Department of Science and Technology joined with the U.S.-China Institute to sponsor a talk and slideshow, "War Photographs for Peace Applications," on April 14 by Dr. Yang Lin, director of the Archeology Division, National Museum of China, Beijing.

"The Conundrum of Body Image: Racial Identity and the Development of Body Image Issues among African American Adolescent Girls" was the subject of a lecture on March 30 by Sharlene Nagy Hesse-Biber, professor of sociology at Boston College. The lecture was sponsored by the Department of History and Social Sciences, the Women's Center, and the Department of English and Humanities.

Peter Schultz, professor of geology and planetary science at Brown University, talked on "July 4th Fireworks: Planning for NASA's Deep Impact Mission" at an April 15 lecture sponsored by the Department of Science and Technology.

U.S. Senator Jack Reed spoke to the Bryant learning community as part of "Raise Your Voice" week, a national campaign that encourages student participation in public life. Student Activities, the Women's Center, the Department of Political Science, Bryant University Democrats, and Bryant University Republicans sponsored the event.

A lecture, "White is a Color, Too! Why Whiteness Matters in the Struggle Against Racism," was given April 25 by Ashley "Woody" Doane, associate dean for academic administration and professor of sociology at the University of Hartford, and Patricia Rollins Trosclair, director of the Multicultural Center at Johnson and Wales University. The event was sponsored by the Department of History and Social Sciences.

PATRIOTIC

New England Patriots head coach Bill Belichick spoke in the MAC March 30 as part of the Trustee Speaker Series. A capacity crowd of 1,300 guests turned out to hear this legendary coach of the Super Bowl champions talk about how knowledge and character can drive success in any organization. Coach Belichick shared anecdotes about the team and fielded questions from students. Prior to the lecture, Bryant athletic team captains, coaches, and staff enjoyed a brief visit with Coach Belichick in the Bulldog Room.

WAILIN'

Acclaimed saxophonist Kirk Whalum debuted a high-energy music program of jazz, soul, and funk on April 7. Whalum, who has recorded and performed with such music industry luminaries as Quincy Jones, Luther Vandross, Al Jarreau, Barbra Streisand, Nancy Wilson, and Whitney Houston, was accompanied by a full jazz orchestra. The concert followed the Alumni Achievement Awards, and was part of the President's Cultural Series in conjunction with Black History month.
Bryant students define success for themselves—as individuals and as team members.

Members of Bryant's Students In Free Enterprise (SIFE) were named 2005 SIFE Regional Champions at a competition held in Hartford, Conn., on April 7. At the competition, teams were judged on how well their community service projects taught others the principles of free enterprise. The team then advanced to the SIFE USA National Exposition, hosted by the Kansas City Business Community at the end of May.

Two senior honors students, Greg Gruenenthal '04 of Woonsocket, R.I., and Warren C. Noyes '04 of Waterbury, Vermont, presented a paper with Bryant Professor Hong Yang at the 2004 Annual Meeting of the American Institute of Biological Sciences (AIBS) held in March in Washington, D.C. The paper is titled, "Carbon isotope ratios of individual lipids from fossil deciduous conifers: A record of photosynthetic responses to continuous light in the polar regions during the Tertiary." Part of their honors thesis, the students' research explores molecular preservation and stable isotope signatures of the Eocene Arctic flora that existed around 45 million years ago.

Five students from Bryant University participated in the International Competition at the 2005 Delta Epsilon Chi (DECA/DEX) International Career Development Conference, held May 4-7 at the Disneyland Resort and Conference Center in Anaheim, Calif. Four of the five made it to the finals in their events and then placed in the "Top Ten" in their category: Kate Iaridi '06 (Travel and Tourism category); Michael Dee '08 (Management Decision Making-Merchandising category); Brenton Carr '08 (E-Commerce Decision Making category); and Kathleen Levey '05 (Retail Management category). DEX, a professional organization serving a diverse international membership of more than 14,000, provides leadership and career opportunities to develop and enhance tomorrow's leaders. There were 2,000 participants at this year's conference, and events were judged by business professionals who are active in their fields. In addition, Kate Iaridi was elected at the conference as Rhode Island's DEX president for next academic year.

The Bryant University Student Alumni Association (SAA) has been named "Outstanding Organization of the Year" among all member schools of the Association of Student Advancing Programs (ASAP) in New England and Southern Canada. The SAA faced strong competition from UMass—Amherst, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and Clark University. Bryant's achievement is a credit to the outstanding membership and leadership of the organization and the support of the office of alumni relations. The Student Alumni Association also won the "Web Site of the Year" award, largely due to the creativity and technical skills of Webmaster Michael Oliveri '08. Visit the Web site www.bryantsaa.org for more information.

A group of first-year students from Adjunct Professor Carl Sheeler's BUS 101 class placed first in the e-Pitch Competition held February 23 as part of the Global Entrepreneurship Program. The five students had 90 seconds to present a compelling and concise business idea to faculty and business leaders. More than 100 business group representatives from various classes were narrowed down to 10 finalists. Sheeler's class prevailed and accepted awards and cash prizes for their model of an improved twist jar that allowed users to drain the container more efficiently. The students were David Almonte, Dean Andrikos, David Clark, Timothy Cole, and Kevin Delade.

SAA members Mike Oliveri '08; Phil Weiss '08; Gina Doeb '08; Geil Batutari '08; Donna Harris, SAA Advisor; and Joe Hausen '06, SAA President.

The annual Relay for Life continues to grow and gain incredible support from the entire Bryant community. The third relay raised more than $56,000 and organizers have met their three-year goal of $150,000. This year 51 teams participated and the top teams were each led by a Bryant student.
CAMPUS NEWS:
SPOTLIGHT ON BRYANT

BRYANT CONFERENCES AND EVENTS

As Bryant’s academic reputation continues to grow, the campus continues to host some of the most interesting business and cultural forums and events.

GOLFING FOR SCHOLARSHIPS
The 2nd Annual President’s Cup Golf Tournament and subsequent auction held on June 20 at the Newport Country Club in Newport, Rhode Island, was another win for Bryant students. Twenty-six foursomes—104 total players—tapped off in a shotgun format to raise more than $50,000 for the President’s Scholarship Fund at Bryant University. “The entire Bryant community works together to make this an outstanding event each year,” said Glenn McQuaid, corporate relations officer at Bryant. “The success belongs in large part to the alumni and corporate sponsors who buy foursomes and make donations and to the faculty, staff, students, parents, and friends who lend a helping hand.”

NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE THE WOMEN’S SUMMIT
The eighth Women’s Summit, “Strategies for Success,” was a sellout again this year, with a record 950 registrants. Kari Machtley chaired the March 16 event, of which Fidelity Investments was the primary sponsor.

“The predominately female audience immediately connected with opening keynote speaker Martha Barletta, president of The TrendSight Group, a Chicago-based consultancy that helps Fortune 1000 companies tap into the buying power of women. She is also the author of Marketing to Women: How to Understand, Reach, and Increase Your Share of the World’s Largest Market Segment, which is now in its third printing.

Luncheon keynote speaker was Carolyn Kepcher, executive vice president of the Trump Organization. Kepcher, whose popularity has soared with her role on NBC’s hit reality series, “The Apprentice,” is also the author of Carolyn 101: Business Lessons from The Apprentice’s Straight Shooter.

Michele Hoskins, founder of Michele Foods, Inc., is a single mother and former school teacher whose products are distributed in more than 4,000 food stores nationwide. She recently published Sweet Expectations: Michele Hoskins’ Simple Recipe for Success.

In between keynote addresses, conference attendees had the opportunity to attend a wide range of enriching and inspirational workshops led by national, regional, and local speakers, as well as Bryant faculty and staff. A networking reception capped the day.

WORLD TRADE DAY
The John H. Chafee Center for International Business at Bryant celebrated the 20th anniversary of World Trade Day at Bryant on May 28 with a program titled “Keys to Success in Today’s Global Economy.”

This year’s keynote speakers included Thomas “Mack” McLarty, president of Kissinger & McLarty Associates in Washington, D.C., who served under President Clinton as his Chief of Staff and as a Special Envoy for the Americas.

The conference continues to grow in attendance and in regional and national stature, with more than 500 businesspeople in attendance. Keynote speakers and breakout sessions spotlight trade opportunities to help businesses support their growth strategies. The conference gives manufacturers and service companies a chance to network and learn about the latest international business developments.

The Platinum Sponsor for the event was Bank of America. Gold Sponsors were GTECH, The Providence Journal, and UPS. Silver Sponsors included HB Communications; PricewaterhouseCoopers; The Hartford; Tillinghast-Tillrot, LLP; and the Beacon Mutual Insurance Company.

This event is made possible through a partnership between Bryant University and the R.I. Economic Development Corporation and the State of Rhode Island.
AWARDS AND RECOGNITIONS

BRYANT GETS AN “A”
In May, Standard & Poor’s (S&P) raised its long-term rating on Rhode Island Health and Educational Building Corp.'s outstanding debt issued for Bryant University to an "A." It was previously an "A-.". This places Bryant among a prestigious group of more than 20 colleges and universities in New England that have received an "A" rating.

TECHNOLOGICALLY SAVVY
Bryant's #2 ranking on the list of the top 10 most connected campuses by The Princeton Review was prominently mentioned in USA Today this past March. Rankings are measured by computer-to-student ratio (specifically, university/computer lab computers, not privately owned ones) and wired and wireless broadband networking capacity, as well as whether or not students are required to have a computer on campus. In March, Bryant's Laptop Central support program received the IBM Self Maintainer award for the fourth time in two years. The award is given to the organizational program that exceeds the national average in quality and efficiency of repairs for in-house technology support. Bryant has also been selected to receive the 2005 ACUTA Award for Institutional Excellence in Communications Technology in the Small Size Institution category. This past year, Bryant was the first runner-up in the public sector category in the Cisco Growing with Technology Awards 2004.

BRYANT IS "WINNING"
Jack Welch, retired chairman and chief executive officer of General Electric Company, has just published a new book, Winning, and according to Warren E. Buffett, "No other management book will ever be needed." A sample of Welch's wisdom: "I learned that smart people come from every kind of school. I've known many extremely bright people from places like Harvard and Yale. But some of the best executives I've worked with have attended places like Bryant University."

WHAT'S NEW AT BRYANT

NEW TRUSTEE AND NEW BOARD CHAIR NAMED
Thomas A. Taylor '63, '63H, of Swansea, Mass., has been named chairman of the board of trustees. Taylor, who has served as a trustee since 1999, succeeds Jack Callahan '56.

Taylor was president and CEO of Aetna Insurance, located in Lincoln, R.I., from 1995 until his retirement last February. He is a former director of the Northern Rhode Island Chamber of Commerce, past chairman of the board of the Property Loss Research Bureau, a former director of the Property Casualty Insurers Association of America, and served as chairman of the board of its predecessor organization, the Alliance of American Insurers. He is a former director of the Rhode Island Public Expenditure Council.

Jennifer L. Marks '85, of Farmingville, N.Y., has been named Recent Alumni Trustee. She received a bachelor of science in business administration with concentrations in marketing and management, and a bachelor of arts in liberal studies with a concentration in communication, summa cum laude. She also received a Senior Service Award at Commencement. She works for Acosta Sales and Marketing in Marlborough, Mass.

CHANGES IN UNIVERSITY RELATIONS TEAM
Ed Sevilla has left Bryant University to assume the position of executive director of marketing at Stonehill College, a newly-created cabinet-level role.

Sevilla has made significant contributions to Bryant while leading the University Relations team. These include editing Bryant Business and developing Bryant's institutional brand positioning. He has built a first-class team at Bryant, and we will certainly miss him.

To assure a smooth transition, Renee Buisson, who has worked closely with Sevilla as director of university relations, has agreed to serve as interim executive director.

OPEN FOR BUSINESS
The new Communication Complex is open for business (and everything else). Located in the Koffler Center, the 3,000 square-foot digital, multi-media communication facility is the centerpiece of the $5 million Koffler Center renovation and a key component in the evolution of Bryant's communication program.

BRYANT LITERARY REVIEW
The sixth edition of the Bryant Literary Review (BLR), a national journal of poetry and fiction, has been published. An editorial board of faculty, students, and staff selected seven short stories and 24 poems from approximately 3,000 submissions from across the country and around the world. The original work of Dan Dabrowski '04 is featured. Copies are $8.

For a preview of the journal, go to http://web.bryant.edu/~blr. The BLR is sponsored in part by the Woonsocket Call, the Pawtucket Times, Bryant's Academic Affairs and University Advancement divisions, and the Faculty Development Center.

Submissions for the next issue are being accepted through December 31, 2005. See the Web site for guidelines.
CAMPUS NEWS:
SPOTLIGHT ON ALUMNI

ALUMNI NEWS BRIEFS

Bryant has always been about changing lives—and making connections. Bryant alumni are finding many ways to reconnect, as the following stories illustrate.

CALLING ALL ALUMNI

Some Bryant alumni were pleasantly surprised this year when they received their annual phone call asking them to contribute to Bryant's Annual Fund. That's because Bryant students were on the other end instead of a telemarketing firm.

"Surveys indicate that alumni want to speak to current students, not professional callers located in another state," says Laurie Musgrove, vice president for university advancement. To make that happen, Bryant instituted an on-campus calling program and is working with RuffaloCODY, a consulting firm for nonprofits, to train students to effectively make those calls.

"Bryant student callers are able to answer any questions alumni might have about what's happening on campus, and that helps alumni feel more connected," says Nick Talley, RuffaloCODY program manager.

And alumni responded well to the students. One-third of the pledges received are from alumni who have never before contributed to Bryant, and more than 25 percent of alumni who are in the calling program are making a gift.

"People have been happy to hear from an actual Bryant student," says Jason Verissimo '06, of Hyannis, Mass. "They're very enthusiastic about Bryant's recent successes and where we are going."

ALUMNI LAURELS

Three Bryant alumni and an outstanding faculty member were honored with the Annual Alumni Achievement Award at a reception held on April 6 on campus, prior to a special concert in Janikles: David E. Alladice '61, Distinguished Alumnus Award for outstanding professional achievement or community service; Buzz Waltman '76, Nelson J. Gulski Service Award for exemplary and longstanding volunteer service to Bryant or the Alumni Association; Martin S. Hershey '91, Young Alumni Leadership Award, for innovative, responsible, professional leadership, personal achievement, and dedicated community service; and Robert Maksian Ph.D., Distinguished Faculty Award for his high level of devotion to teaching at Bryant.

(Left-right) Jason Verissimo '06, Hyannis, Mass.; Andrew Josefina '08, Rumford, R.I.; and Catherine Donalas '97, Holyoke, Mass., reach out to fellow alumni to reconnect them with Bryant and gain support for the Annual Fund.
In May, Bryant reached out to alumni with a “My Story” postcard, asking alumni to share their Bryant stories. Here’s what Lloyd Cahoon ’66 of Port Townsend, Wa., had to say:

My recollections of my time at Bryant are a mixture of many different experiences—academic and social.

I was an accounting major, and I will never forget all of the terrific professors who contributed to my education. Henry Lee taught cost accounting with enthusiasm, a sense of humor, and at times a sense of irreverence—you couldn’t help but pay attention. Dr. Thomas Mannon was one of my heroes—intelligent, classy, and demanding. James Ingraham was perhaps one of the best professors that I ever experienced—talk about the power of humor to teach! Herbert McLaughlin, professor of law, put life into the study of law—quite an accomplishment.

I also enjoyed the festivals with the floats, galas, queens, and princesses. Phi Sigma Nu was a wonderful source of friendship. And hours spent playing ping-pong in the recreation room above the Cantare were surprisingly competitive.

Bryant was a great time in my life. I entered the workplace at General Electric Company shortly after graduation as a trained, educated, and confident young man. And my confidence in myself, instilled as a result of Bryant’s nurturing, has never abated.

Help the Next Generation Achieve and Succeed

As a graduate of Bryant, you can help us continue to recruit a diverse group of quality students. Join fellow alumni around the country by becoming a part of the Alumni-Admission Connection (AAC). Your involvement will vary depending on your interests, availability, geographic location, and graduation class. Some of the activities you may become involved in include:

Referrals
Help us identify high school students to whom Bryant admission materials should be sent.

College Fairs
If you live within an hour of an upcoming college fair location, you may be invited to represent Bryant at one of these events. This is a great way to share your enthusiasm and meet prospective students. Several hundred inquiries are brought back to Bryant each year as a result of these fairs.

Recruiting Events
Throughout the year, AAC members actively participate in on- and off-campus recruiting events such as our fall and spring open houses. Depending on the event, you might talk about your career or simply mingle with prospective students and their families.

Phone Calling Campaign
During the spring semester, you may be invited to participate in this major campaign to answer questions that admitted students have about Bryant and encourage students to accept our offer of admission.

To join the AAC or for further information, contact Michelle (Barbato) Casale ’95, associate director for events and volunteers, at (800)622-7001 or m Barbato@bryant.edu.
