Governor Speaks at Last Good Citizenship Assembly

Bryant College held its last Good Citizenship Lecture of the semester in the school auditorium on Friday, January 15, 1964. The school orchestra under the direction of Professor Handy, provided the opening address and stressed the need for greater participation by everyone in our Government. He introduced the guest speaker, His Excellency Dennis J. Roberts, Governor, State of Rhode Island.

Governor Roberts opened his speech by expressing his appreciation for being given the opportunity to address Bryant students. He pointed out that the work performed by V.President E. Garrett Jaques in the civil affairs of this country, and he informed the assembled group that a great many people hold the hope of the future, and graduates of Bryant stand out in the community and are not lost in society. Many of them are leaders in the complex machinery of government.

Governor Roberts defined the government as not just a little matter of an occupation of some people are engaged in, but a dedication to the protection and the general welfare of the people. The requirements of our government are large, and the State’s income would exceed the expenditures of the government, but the State’s income would exceed the expenditures of the government, but it’s daily service is endless; and it’s always at hand. Rhode Island’s budget for 1953-1964 was outlined by Governor Roberts, and it is clear that the State’s income would exceed the expenditures of the government, but it’s daily service is endless; and it’s always at hand.

Addition to hospitals and home loans in the State are among the requirements of the government, and the State’s income would exceed the expenditures of the government, but it’s daily service is endless; and it’s always at hand. The State’s income would exceed the expenditures of the government, but it’s daily service is endless; and it’s always at hand.

The minimum extra payment a veteran may be able to make in the month’s regular payment, is $500. For the convenience of the veteran, he can either make double payments each month or double the amount of his regular monthly payment from time to time, Reavy said. The practice of making advance payments on a mortgage is also a good insurance against a time when the veteran may be hard pressed for money. At such a time, the veteran can make the extra principal payments regressed to keep his loan from going into default, Reavy said.

More than 3,000 veterans having loans in the Rhode Island Office already have paid off their GI home loans in full since the VA began the GI loan program in 1945.

The Student Senate’s banquet took place at the Hotel in the month of February, Tuesday, 1964. President Mr. LaBarre welcomed those present and introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Mr. Murphy.

Betta Sigma Chi Holds Banquet
Betta Sigma Chi held its formal banquet on Jan 19 at Gaze Tavern, New York. New officers and pledges were sworn in. Guests were Dean Gallici and Mr. Murphy. The new president, Mr. Murphy, expressed his deep appreciation to the leaders for their trust and confidence. The retiring president, Mr. LaBarre, presented a trophy depicting his line leadership and helpful service to the fraternity.

Teacher-Traine to Be New Editor
Next semester John Murphy, a teacher-traine entering his sixth semester in February, will be the Editor-in-Chief of the ARCIIAW.

John entered Bryant in September, 1957, and began on his teaching degree with a major in Business Administration.

The author of “In This Corner” for the past semester, John has thus been able to accept the job of guiding the ARCIIAW.

He is just elected president of the Fashion Society, and has been a member of the Business Administration faculty.

He and his wife are currently residing in Providence.

WACO, TEXAS-(ACP)-Following are 15 easy ways in which to fall in love, as written by Jack Woodard for the Oregon State Daily Bulletin.

1. Enter the course as late as possible. By changing your mind about the curriculum, rather than starting, you should be able to avoid classes until the second or third week.

2. Do not bother with a textbook.

3. Put your social life ahead of your studies. If necessary, cultivate a few friendships in the class.

4. Observe how many neat people there are, and listen to their conversations.

5. Make yourself comfortable in the classroom, such as sitting in an easy chair by a window.

6. Have a few friends handy during the study period so you can chat when the work becomes dull.

7. If you must study, try to lull them all together and get it over with.

8. Make sure you don’t get into a class that you don’t want to take.

9. Read your notes on everything you learn. Since they can be pretty hard to forget, you can’t afford to delay your routine or you wouldn’t have to study as much.

10. Never interrupt your reading by checking on what you have learned. When you are not learning, it is not pleasant anyway, since you have to study later.

11. Avoid bothering with notebook paper. You can’t afford to lose it, so don’t put it away.

12. Try to follow the simplest arrangement: keep all the notes in a given day’s lesson, and then make a card of it.

13. Remind yourself frequently how dull the course is. Never lose sight of the fact that you really want to study for something else.

14. Foul out exactly when your final examination will be so that you can forget about it for a long time.

15. Keep up all night before important examinations. You can spend the first half of the evening discussing your day’s events before going to bed, and the latter half drinking coffee.
Time to Take Inventory

It's been a long time since I've had either the time or the inclination to write an editorial, but now that the semester, my last by the way, is drawing to a close, I've managed to find my way through the fog and compose an editorial, or perhaps the better word would be essay.

As the end of an important accounting period in my life is coming into sight, I find myself taking a look at inventory of myself in order to evaluate the profit I've accumulated over the years I've spent at Bryant. Ever since my first day on campus I've been a student of inventory, and it seems to be that as I conclude my college career, a more lucrative phase of my life awaits.

The 'profit' I've acquired over these years seems to indicate that I've become an expert in the management of inventory, just as I have about accounting. I've spent my college career on the job, but the real accounting has been done off campus.

This brings to a close my "inventory" career, a career which has taught me the responsibility of leadership, the frustrations of obstacles, the satisfaction of attaining a goal.

As my final wish, I wish to express sincere thanks to all my staff for making this career possible and providing the one it has been.

ROBERT DOBBINS

Bryant College is losing a star faculty member and an outstanding student as Bob Kulingan completes his days at Bryant. Perhaps Bob's biggest accomplishment during his stay here has been his work as the president of the Greek Letter Council. This job involves leadership, aggressiveness, and understanding — characteristics for which Bob can honestly be commended for having.

Bob has served as president of Kappa Tau Fraternity and president of his Junior Class. He was a member of Student Senate, on the Board of Directors of the B. A. & A. Society, and a news reporter for the ARCHWAY.

Bob's hometown is Springfield, Massachusetts. During the Korean War he served in the United States Air Force for four years. He came to Bryant College in September, 1953, as a transfer student from Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts. Here he elected the BA-1 course, majoring in economics. His education was continued up to the present by the reading and work that he was married in March, 1953.

After graduation Bob will be employed as an automobile representative for General Motors in Providence. Upon leaving he says, "I have enjoyed working with every one and being a part of Brynecollege activities. I believe that I shall come back often to visit the old place."

5. He wins his wings as an Air Force officer, earning "A Pilot is Born".

6. Then winds up his training with the latest and finest planes in the Air.

7. And a Pilot is Born!

Hi sport fans—well this is it. The last of "Sports with The Indians" over this season and recap the highlights of the season.

We started off, way back when, with a big 11-3 victory for the Vigilantes over the Freshmen with a score of 27-1. The 11-3 victory was broken down into six goals by each team and the remaining 13 points came from a single goal by the Freshmen. The Vigilantes proved to be the better team for the title.

Next, the Vigilantes had an opportunity to compete against the Freshmen in a game of basketball. The Vigilantes won the game by a score of 37-23, with a key player being Alpha Phi Jean. The game was very exciting, with the Freshmen trying their best to keep up with the high-scoring Vigilantes.

Next, the Vigilantes had the opportunity to compete against the Freshmen in a game of tennis. The Vigilantes won the game by a score of 6-2, with Alpha Phi Jean being the key player. The game was very exciting, with the Freshmen trying their best to keep up with the high-scoring Vigilantes.

With the high-scoring season, the Vigilantes proved to be the best team for the title. The Vigilantes were able to outscore their opponents in their matches, and their teamwork and strategy proved to be the deciding factor in their success.

Camels Are America's Most Popular Cigarette

You can see how mild and flavorful Camels are in our movies. From then on, it was hard work and perseverance.

ANDY DOWLING

As many of you who attended the B.A. & A. Society banquet last Thursday night will agree, Bob Griffith did a tremendous job as president of the Society this year. Yes, Bob should be congratulated for his fine work here at Bryant. To put it in Bud's own words, here's what he says about his time spent at Bryant, "It's been a wonderful semester. I'm glad to get it over. I'll be glad to leave Bryant." But has done a fine job as president of the Newsmen Club this semester. In his fraternity, Kappa Tau, he held the position of second vice president his third semester, and first vice president his fourth semester, and held a seat in the Student Senate.

Bud's fellow classmates at 97 Cook Street, his "home away from home," honored him by electing him vice president this second semester and then president his third semester. He is also still for the boys' dorm hall for a year.
