Changes Ahead for Spring Weekend

Spring Weekend may cease to exist as we know it. This statement, in a memo from Student Senate President Harry Franks to student organization presidents concerning Spring Weekend, reflected the mood of the memo and of the meeting of these students on Monday.

Franks called the meeting of student leaders to address administration concern about Spring Weekend. At the meeting, Franks said the administration feels that "they have been the bend but that students have not taken any responsibility for this weekend." Discussion at the all-student meeting centered around the "no cups allowed under policy" and the possibility of the cancellation of Spring Weekend.

The no-cups alcohol policy is currently in effect and will cover Spring Weekend. The students at the meeting questioned the "new" policy; however, Ellen Servetnick, Director of Student Affairs, said the policy is not new, sight page 11 of the student handbook which states, "carrying open containers of alcohol outside a student's room, or the limits of an approved social function...[is a] violation of College Policy."

Servetnick, also the Chairperson of the Spring Weekend Committee, stressed that Spring Weekend is still being planned. She continued saying that planning was needed to offset problems of past Spring Weekend. "We have been very, very lucky in the past with large crowds in undesignated areas," were the major problems Servetnick said. Responding to the rumors that Spring Weekend would be cancelled, Servetnick stated, "no, only the policy will be changed if it will be cancelled." Servetnick said the committee was looking for ideas about Spring Weekend and that together students and the administration could find a resolution so that there would be no surprise guidelines.

When asked whether a no-cups alcohol policy was enforceable, Servetnick replied that she was not sure. However, Chief of Public Safety Richard Wheeler said that a no-cups alcohol policy was impossible to enforce without bringing outside (police) forces on campus. Asked whether he would do that Wheeler stated, "I would not feel I was doing my job if I had to use an army of law enforcement officials." Wheeler said that enforcing a policy and getting the job with the understanding that there would be no firearms or night stick at the enterence, "I don't know if I'd have the stomach for it," referring to bringing outside police onto campus to regulate Spring Weekend.

Whether the no-cups alcohol policy would be enforced at the Monday meeting expressed concern that the policy would actually create a worse situation. The students stated the policy would force students to drink and socialize inside the dorms. This situation, they argued, would only increase the illegal alcohol and fire alarms, two of the major problems cited by Servetnick that need to be corrected.

Students at the meeting pointed out that no major incidents occurred last Spring Weekend, using the fact that in the May 4, 1989 edition of The Arch, the Syzm Dean of Student Life Ed Golden wrote a letter congratulating the student body and their guests for a successful Spring Weekend. Golden wrote, "This past Spring Weekend was far and away the best in recent memory...with this kind of cooperation and support I look forward to the continuation of this tradition that has been valued and appreciated by our students.

Wheeler admitted that there have been no major incidents for the past two Spring Weekend 1987.

Pool Questions Faced by Administration

Michael L. Boyd

"There has never been an intention of not having a pool on campus," stated LaFond during the Vice President for Student Affairs, at yesterday's Student Senate Meeting. He added that if the current pool is replaced, "I would not feel...[is a] violation of College Policy."

Job Action Against Townhouses Likely

Michael L. Boyd

A job action is expected to be initiated in the near future

According to Joe Mitchelbeck, Vice President for Business Affairs, at yesterday's Student Senate meeting, he stated that the job action is being implemented by local union labor groups. It is being made in response to the decision of the College to use a contractor who uses nonunion labor to build the new townhouse complex. The job action is expected to result in the picketing of the Bryant Campus and the job action is expected to result in the picketing of the Bryant Campus and the job action is expected to result in the picketing of the Bryant Campus and the job action is expected to result in the picketing of the Bryant Campus and the job action is expected to result in the picketing of the Bryant Campus.

LaFond added that the contract was awarded to Turner Continued, p.3
Spring Weekend’s Last Fling

The momentous spring event known as Spring Weekend is approaching a rapid demise. The administration has said that no cups will be allowed on the track during the events held there this year. This is one compromise that the students may not be able to handle.

In the past, Spring Weekend has been a ritual on the Bryant Campus. The population of the campus swelled during that weekend to over double its normal size. The Weekend was marked with loud music, much socializing, much alcohol and much revelry. In the past few years, the event has been toned down considerably. Students have given up the privilege of having coolers with them on the track. Last year, students gave up a guest when the number of guests per resident was trimmed from two to one. These changes were made in order to ease the security burden of The Weekend.

In the past few weekends, there have been very few incidents. Last Weekend was considered a huge success. Ed Golden, Dean of Student Life at the time, considered the Weekend a success. In a letter to The Archway, he called Spring Weekend “far and away the best in recent memory.” He went on to thank all of those involved in its success and safety, including SPB, the Senate, the GLC, Health Services and ARA. “But the true hallmark of an event,” he stated, “goes to the Bryant student body and their guests. Without your cooperation and support [Spring Weekend] could not have gone as incident free as this one did.”

This shows that the Bryant Community has been responsible for their actions and the actions of their guests during Spring Weekend. If a policy banning cups from the track in enforced, it will create more havoc and add to the possibility of serious incidents occurring. If cups are banned from the track, students will simply move the festivities indoors. Now which would be safer to the Bryant Community - 5000 people outdoors during Spring Weekend activities can be monitored, or 5000 people located behind closed doors during Spring Weekend festivities?

A Senate Apology

To the Editor:
On Wednesday, February 14, a motion was passed by the Student Senate supporting the Greek Letter Council. This motion states that the Student Senate will back up the G.L.C.’s efforts to make sure any administrative policies implemented shall be addressed through the proper Greek channels. The Student Senate sincerely apologizes for any misunderstandings that may have occurred at yesterday’s meeting. If there are any other concerns, please do not hesitate to contact us at any time. Thank You.
Sincerely,
The Student Senate

Franks Apologizes to the Greek Community

Dear Greek Community:

I want to formally apologize for my decision at yesterday’s Senate meeting that referred the issue on pledging to the Committee on Fraternities and Sororities. I misunderstood your intentions, beliefs that you were asking us to make a decision on the pledging issue. However, as I stated, the Senate has no jurisdiction in dealing with this issue. After Dean Talley’s apology, compromise, and willingness to discuss the issue, I felt that no other decisions could be made at this time. It was my opinion that the GLC and the Committee on Fraternities and Sororities would be a better forum to resolve this issue. It is this committee meeting on Monday which is responsible to make all final decisions.

Prior to the meeting, the Dean had informed me that Students have given up the privilege of having coolers and blankets trimmed from two to one. These changes have gone as incident free as this one did. I believe that the administration believes that “no cup policy will be taken lightly by the student body, they are simply mistaken. How can a school that teaches the principles of management and business to their graduates expect such a radical change to be accepted?

The administration has passed a policy that will stand until it can be replaced by a policy that will be acceptable to everyone involved.

I had to leave by 5:00 p.m. This was another aspect which contributed to my decision. I understand that I made an improper decision and feel that the real issue is the Administrators lack of communication and input from the student body. This is one issue that needs to be addressed. If problems arise involving certain organizations, they should be confronted and given the facts before implementing policies that are not fully understood.

Please understand that my actions were not in any way against your cause. Once again, I apologize for the misunderstanding. If students still have problems with Friday’s decision, it will be discussed at next Wednesday’s Senate meeting in the Roundana.

Sincerely,
Harry H. Francis III
Student Senate President

Spring Weekend Beliefs

To the Editor:
On February 12, we attended the “Spring Weekend No Cup Policy meeting” for Presidents of campus organizations. Although we were unaware and did not meet this qualification, we stayed as concerned students.
We were amazed at the rationale that came from the members of the meeting. Although they were as upset as we were, they maintained a forum for suggestions and solutions. We commend their patience and attitudes as they face several issues over and over again in disbelief.
If the administration believes that the “no cup policy” will be taken lightly by the student body, they are simply mistaken. How can a school that teaches the principles of management and business to their graduates expect such a radical change to be accepted?

They should go back to MG 101 and take a crash course to refresh their clouded memories. Their inconsistencies are going to lead to a rude awakening. The incident reports will increase and the goal of our naive administrators will be shattered.

Spring Weekend’s purpose is to celebrate the coming of spring, a chance to have fun and relax before finals, and for action to remember four years at this fine institution. Taking away this opportunity will not be tolerated.

Much luck to you and your new found policies on the weekend of April 27-29.

We Raise our Cups!

Drucker Speaks On Small Business Via Satellite

by Douglas J. Highbee

As we move into the 1990s, the future of the American economy will take a more and more on small and medium sized businesses, according to Peter Drucker, noted economist and business policy and management organization consultant.

Drucker, who has been a Clarke Professor of Social Science and Management at Claremont Graduate School since 1971, spoke at Bryant, as were other major locations, by way of satellite hook-up on February 8 at the Center for American Progress, Washington, D.C., where he spoke about "The Care and Feeding of Small Businesses" and "Maintaining Competency of Executives and Professionals in the Small and Medium sized Businesses".

Until the mid-Seventies, the spotlight of US business was on large corporations, but this has changed, Drucker points out. Small to medium sized companies, especially family businesses, are not the mainstream, says Drucker. "Mass was once the important thing, but today small businesses can do anything big business can do," and with better results. The end of the eighties saw the liberation of eastern Europe. Now that the excitement has passed there is great speculation as to how the changes in the east block will affect the rest of the world. There has been much talk of a peace dividend, but how great is such a dividend? The relaxation of communist ideologies for a more market-oriented economy has, if nothing else, made us feel more secure that nuclear annihilation is a fear of the past. Hopefully some of the military spending will be redirected to much needed social programs. However, how would this affect the economy of areas such as New England, which has been fueled by much of the military budget. Military research and development has not only created jobs, but has produced tremendous technological advancements for the industry. With the reduction in military spending New England may be hard hit. However, a more important question is whether this reduction amounts to much. In his press interview on Monday, President Bush explained that there may be a reduction in the troops stationed in Europe at some time in the future, however, he believed that they were essential as a stabilizing force within Europe. He commented on the desire of east block countries to be rid of Soviet influence, but hoped American forces would stay in western Europe. As the countries of the east block hunger for development, another interesting question is if America will be able to profit from this by selling the much needed technologies. At the moment, it seems Europe will be able to profit most from supplying the technology needed for modernization. Due to its geography, Europe is naturally taking advantage of the opening up of the markets, primarily through extensive aid programs, and later through export of commodities.

If the creation of new jobs due to export with the east block outweigh the jobs lost due to a decreased military spending is yet to be seen, however, many workers in New England will feel the effects of the liberation of those east European countries.

What Television Will Mean to Bryant

by Rodney C. Riley
Student Senator

Last semester there was a lot of discussion regarding the appropriateness of a senior class gift tradition at the University. Several letters were both written and replied to in The Archway and there was quite a bit of discussion sparked in classes, the Bryant Center and even at the Comfort. Well I just wanted to take a moment to let everyone know exactly what progress is being made on the gift.

Last semester the senior class gift committee asked the senior class to vote on what they wanted to leave to Bryant at Commencement. It turned out that the Class of '90 said that we wanted to leave a TV network system to our alma mater. Now I know that many of you are probably asking yourselves okay that sounds great but what does it mean? Well this network system would consist of television monitors located in the main academic center and the Unistructure that would provide up-to-date information on world events. There would be a cable hook up that would not only broadcast cable stations such as C-SPAN, CNN or MTV, but local television programming and campus programming as well.

As we begin the '90s, we must realize that we cannot limit ourselves to just a regional or even national scope, but to an international view. In choosing this gift, the class of '90 hopes that students will now be able to experience world events as they happen, while also enabling Bryant to remain at the cutting edge of technology.

If anyone has any questions or concerns regarding this gift feel free to approach me or any of the other committee members. The other committee members are: Rich Bauer, Stone Carravone, Jill Cappellotti, Brad Cikula, Bill Douglas, Michael Eise, Tracie Murs, Kevin Thibeault, Lisa Thibodeau, Loni Uddhock, Laura Williams, Kristen Robinson.

Please ask any of us if you have any questions. Also remember every Wednesday is senior class gift night at the Comfort so keep up the support!

Candies From the Heart

by Craig Wilson

What fruitcake is to Christmas, heart candies are to Valentine’s Day. And Feb. 14 just wouldn’t be the same without a handful of pink and white heart-shaped lumps of sugar with goofy sayings like “Kiss Me,” “Cute Pie” and “Dream Boat.”

Dozens of companies churn out billions of the conversational hearts every year, but the New England Confectionery Co. in Cambridge, Mass., has been doing it for 80 years.

The company produces 1.7 billion hearts—five calories each—with 25 sayings in all. If all the hearts sold in a year were laid side by side they would stretch from Boston to San Francisco and back to New York.

“We’re a couple hundred miles short of doing the round trip back to Boston,” says Walter Marshall, of the New England Confectionery Co.

The company, which pumps out hearts all year for the annual two-week sale period (their shelf life is almost forever), occasionally changes the sayings at the suggestion of employees.

“The Old World War II sayings have been dumped, of course,” says Marshall. We used to use “solid,” like music used to be described as “solid.”

The sayings might change, but the ingredients don’t. Sugar, corn syrup and dextrose are blended into huge sheets then cut into heart shapes. But what are those flavors, you ask? The purple is grape, pink is wintergreen, green is lime, yellow is lemon, orange is orange and white is mint.

VIPS Encourage Student Involvement

by Jeffrey Wacker
Archway Staff Writer

Volunteers In Providence Schools (VIPS) is a program run in thirty-three Providence public schools allowing college students, professors, and staff from every course of study to tutor. Tutors assist students on the elementary, middle, and high school levels, working on a one-to-one basis, in small groups, as classroom assistants or in after school study centers. According to Dorothy Grenelle, executive director, VIPS aims to provide supplementary educational services for children in grades Kindergarten through 12 with a strong emphasis on self-esteem and self-confidence.

There is no doubt the need for such a program exists. Statistics show the Providence public school system is in dire need of volunteers. About 45% of students drop out before completing high school, 30% come from non-English speaking families, and nearly 60% are minorities. By supporting a motivational and enrichment service, VIPS hopes to give students a new outlook and turn the statistics in its favor. Volunteers are asked to serve a minimum of 1-2 hours a week after their orientation and training program. Those with special interests or hobbies may become a leader or adviser for the middle school club program. Short-term projects, demonstrations, and presentations are other activities that volunteers are accepted for. After training participants are placed in schools throughout Providence.

One benefit of the VIPS program is that it offers participants the opportunity to gain insight into diverse cultural and ethnic populations. It is also a good opportunity to gain an understanding of the workings of an urban educational system. This is especially valuable for college students wishing to enter the fields of teaching or education. As an added bonus, VIPS provides follow-up, scheduled workshops and resource materials to volunteers.

Last year over 300 volunteers participated in the program, more than 300 of them students. So far this year over 200 volunteers have been recruited and placed in 29 schools, nine study centers, and two club programs. VIPS hopes to increase the volunteer base even further this year.

Brown University students have so far shown the most enthusiasm in supporting the program, with 24 students so far. Providence College, Johnson and Wales, and Rhode Island College have also given the program strong support. Potential volunteers are urged to camped and use public transportation.

If We Can Help It, Here’s One Four Letter Word Your Kid Won’t Bring Home From School.

Before a child can excel at school, he has to master a few elementary skills. And for some Providence youngsters, that’s a tough assignment.

Last year, Volunteers In Providence Schools worked with over 3,000 students who were having difficulty with their fundamental learning skills. Statistically, 66% of these children live at or below the poverty level, while 35% come from homes where English is a second language. But teachers report that we’re making a difference. Over 500 of our volunteers, from college students to retirees, worked one-on-one to increase the knowledge and self-esteem of students who might otherwise fail. And our Reading Is Fundamental Program put free books in the hands of an additional 4,000 pupils.

However, if we’re to continue to achieve these results, we need your help. Whether you’d like to become a tutor, a classroom assistant, or support us in other ways, call 274-3210. Because there is one word we’d like to instill in all our students. Success.

An Airborne Winter Break

by Jill Frazelholm
ROTC Cadet

Being an ROTC cadet has provided me with a multitude of opportunities. The most exciting of which occurred this past winter break when I was presented with the chance to attend Airborne school at Fort Benning, Georgia for three weeks. Many people wondered what would possess me to jump from a perfectly good aircraft, in flight, from 1,250 feet, and until I actually did, I sometimes wondered myself. It wasn't until the completion of my fifth and final jump that I knew the answer to that question.

The training at the U.S. Army Airborne school is broken down into three branches, each consisting of five days of training: 1) ground week, 2) tower week and 3) jump week. Each class consists of approximately 500 students who are a combination of officers, cadets, non-commissioned officers and enlisted members of all branches of the armed forces of the U.S. and it's Allied counties. The instructors are highly qualified and experienced Army Sergeants known as "black hats." Black hats have completed enough training to successfully train almost any soldier. Since the students lives are more or less on their shoulders, the black hats will tolerate no fooling around. Each training day usually begins at 5:30 a.m. with a vigorous physical training workout conducted in a saw dust pit, followed by a moderate run to tend the student's strength and endurance. Training for the remainder of the day consists of learning and mastering the use of the equipment that pertains to the branch of training of the week.

Ground week is designed to reach parachute jumps. Three of these are regular jumps, two are jumps where the student dons a full combat equipment load, much like the load worn if the soldier were to jump into actual combat and one night dropped on each pass of the drop zone which is an open field approximately 1,500 feet in length. The actual descent takes less than one minute, but the jump is not complete with that. Once the jumper has safely reached the ground, he or she must gather all equipment and run off the drop zone, which could be over 1/2 mile in distance. Once this is complete, the jumper is allowed to go on to the next jump until all five have been completed.

I had many doubts and fears of my own before I began my training. Being a female, I wasn't sure if I had the strength of the men and I thought I would fall behind. However, I surprised myself when two weeks later, I found myself donning a parachute and boarding the aircraft for the first time, knowing that once in the air there was only one way down. I had imagined how nervous I would be. However, I was shocked to find out that as I stood up for my pass, I wasn't very nervous at all. I had gained a great amount of trust in my equipment and myself which are two key aspects in successful jumping. When my turn came, I confidently exited the aircraft and felt the greatest rush of my life when my body hit the jet blast and was swept away. When I felt the shock of my parachute inflating, I was more than relieved and I enjoyed the ride until it was time to prepare for my PLF. When I hit the ground, everything that followed was instinctive. I had been trained so well that I didn't even have time to think about what I was doing. It all came naturally. After two weeks of hard work, I was finally AIRBORNE and now jumping out of a perfectly good aircraft didn't seem quite so crazy. I knew what it was that possessed me to do it, but this is a question that can't be verbally answered. It has to be experienced firsthand.
Women Bosses Program

by Melissa Barnes
Career Services

Do men still resist having to work for a woman boss? Are women’s management styles different from those of men? These are the kinds of questions that will be debated at an upcoming panel discussion called “Women Bosses.” The program is being co-sponsored by the Bryant Professional Women’s Association and the Career Services Office. It will be held February 26 at 4 p.m. in the Faculty Dining Room. All interested students of both genders are welcome.

A panel of five women managers will share their experience as bosses and will debate questions such as whether a manager’s behavior is perceived differently because she is a woman, and whether women bosses are changing the character of the workplace.

Panelists will be Sheryl Casinelli, Vice President of Michelson and Assoc.; Patricia Farley, Director of Executive Relocation, Residential Properties Ltd.; Claire Jacobucci, Audit Manager for Ernst and Young; Lois Gartner, Manager of Corporate Training and Development for Blue Cross/Blue Shield; and Melody Pompal, Director, Tools Business Unit for McCormack & Dodge.

Chaplain's Corner:

A Look At Rabbi Silverman

The first articles of Chaplain's Corner this semester will serve as an introduction to the clergy to the students of Bryant College.

Rabbi Lawrence M. Silverman became a chaplain at Bryant College and advisor to the Hellil organization in September. He is the rabbi of Congregation Beth Jacob in Plymouth, Massachusetts, and has many ties to southeastern New England.

Born and educated in the Boston area, Rabbi Silverman is a graduate of Brown University. He has been in programs of special study at Harvard Divinity School and the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He holds a master's degree in philosophy from the University of Toronto, as well as an earned doctorate from Hebrew Union College.

After completing his rabbinical studies in 1973, also at Hebrew Union College, Rabbi Silverman went to the Plymouth congregation, which he served until 1994. From 1984-1988, our new chaplain was Associate Rabbi and Director of Education at Temple Beth-El, in Providence. During this period, he became involved in many institutions and programs in the Rhode Island community, including the Jewish Home for the Aged, the Bureau of Jewish Education, and the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

In the Plymouth-area, Rabbi Silverman is noted as a speaker on the Holocaust, especially in the public schools. He also has taught numerous workshops for teachers on this subject. Other personal interests include a variety of social concerns, preservation of natural habitat, Biblical scholarship, and finding ways of applying traditional values to the life-styles and problems of our time. Rabbi Silverman already has become a visible figure on campus, where he may be reached personally (every Wednesday afternoon) or by telephone, in care of the Office of Campus Ministries (232-6119 or 232-6045).

Public Safety Beat

Compiled by Travis Nite Gray
Archway Staff Writer

Editor's Note: This is the beginning of a weekly column covering Public Safety. Each week, a few major incidents will be highlighted, followed by a listing of violations and their frequencies. The purpose of the column is to make the Bryant Community more aware of incidents, in hopes that such awareness will aid in lowering the frequency of incidents.

Breaking and Entering, Assault:

During the early morning hours of February 10, a male student entered a female's room while she was asleep. The doors (suite and bedroom) had been left unlocked. The male placed a pillow over the female's face saying he wouldn't hurt her. She asked him to wait in the suite while she got something on. Once the male had left the room, she locked the door and called Public Safety. When Public Safety responded, the male fled on foot towards dorm 15. Public Safety chased the male and was able to stop him. The Smithfield Police were notified and the male was arrested. The female was not harmed. He had been charged with breaking and entering, and assault.

Dorm 11 Vandalized:

On February 11, Public Safety was notified of vandalism in dorm 11. Upon inspection, three doors were found to be vandalized, including one to the electrical room. Public Safety spoke with several residents who said they heard pounding the night before but thought someone was locked out. There were no witnesses. Public Safety notified physical plant so that the door to the electrical room could be fixed in order to secure the room.

College Official Assaulted:

On the evening of February 10, patrons noticed a car zigzagging up Jacobs Drive. After stopping and proceeding through the gate, Public Safety pursued the vehicle and stopped it. The male driver argued with the officer for stopping him. The driver used profanity, then tried to push the officer. The officer backed up to avoid being pushed. Additional officers were called in, meanwhile the driver attempted to punch the officer. A bystander (not a Bryant student) got out of the vehicle and using profanity, tried to jump the officer. The female was detained. Public Safety Officers used tear gas and were acting after the threat from the driver and the passenger was made.

Jump into an entry-level career that will take you places at EDS.

In an EDS developmental program your career potential can reach new heights. You'll gain the rewards of a job experience you need to move your career years ahead — experience you can only gain from a world leader in the management of information technology.

EDS is looking for achievers — people who make things happen. If you are interested in applying your talents in the information management services industry, you won't find a better place to grow than EDS. Our highly respected developmental programs are nationally recognized as models for the industry. They provide technical challenges, professional expertise and the business savvy you'll need to become one of the industry's best-prepared professionals.

Systems Engineering Development (SED) Program

The objective of the SED Program is to develop individuals into EDS systems engineers capable of producing information management solutions for EDS customers. EDS will be recruiting on campus Tuesday, February 17th for the SED Program.

In order to qualify, we ask for the following:

- A 4-year college degree (any major) with a minimum 3.0 GPA preferred
- Demonstrated technical aptitude
- Excellent communication skills
- A proven track record of achievement
- Willingness to relocate nationwide

To take the first step toward achieving your highest career potential, EDS will be conducting an information session on the SED Program Monday, February 9th at 4:00 p.m. in the Lecture Room 225. Five recent Bryant College graduates are now in the SED Program.

The Media Factor

by Andy Rooney

It always seems to me that doctors shouldn't get sick and die. They do, of course.

It seems to me, too, that people in the news business shouldn't make news. They do, of course, and recently I've been one of them.

For those of you who haven't read — if there is anyone who hasn't — I was suspended for three months by CBS News for remarks I was accused of making that suggested I held racist opinions. It makes almost no difference whatsoever that I did not, and would not ever, have made the remarks.

I was in my office with the two people I've worked alongside for 18 years when the announcement of my suspension was issued. The phones started ringing. We have four extensions and a HOLD button and they were all lit up until we left the office eight hours later.

The three of us answered each call as soon as we could get the previous one off the line. I ate a container of yogurt and a Diet Coke, tried to answer questions and call back the people who had first got through to Bob or Jane. I did not want to read the next day that "Mr. Rooney refused to comment" or "M. Rooney could no be reached."

If I couldn't be reached it was because I had ten calls coming in at the same time. In between the calls from News organizations, Benjamin Hooks, Executive Director of the NAACP, called. He could hardly have been better about his acceptance of my assurance that I did not say what I was quoted as having said.

Outside the front door, as we answered calls upstairs, camera crews were lined upon the sidewalk, waiting for me to poke my head out the door so they could pounce on me. I felt like Salman Rushdie. I chose not to go out and talk to them because it would have been difficult to say what I meant in the 30 seconds they'd have given me on their evening news broadcasts. I had given one brief statement to Entertainment Tonight early in the day because I had seen their show the previous night and felt obliged to answer it. I do not want to live the rest of my life being known as a racist bigot.

It's my natural inclinations to answer anyone who asks a question. I do not say "no comment" because there's nothing I think or believe that I'm ashamed of or would try to hide. If you write a column, you inevitably blab everything that comes into your head at one time or another. Anyone who reads this column knows me as well as my closest friends.

In the position I'm in now, you become intensely aware of the slant a story takes and whether the slant is favorable or unfavorable to the person's written about. Last Friday morning's papers varied. The stories most harmful to me carried all the accusations and the quotation, which sounds nothing like the way I talk, up front. Down toward the bottom of the story was the line, "Mr. Rooney denies the allegations." If print could indicate a wink, there'd be one after that.

I not only deny the quote attributed to me, I say the quotation was made up by a young reporter who couldn't take notes.

My daughter Emily, who is in the news business herself, says that "news is the new McCarthy." She suggests that it is new organizations, hungry for any story that will sell papers attract audiences, that destroy people with innuendo.

It is not clear yet to me whether I have been destroyed or not, but I know that a denial from anyone does not carry anywhere near the same weight as an accusation. The accusation against me came from an angry gay organization which had decided that, while the media might be relatively indifferent to the complaint of gays that they had been wronged, it is difficult for any news organization to stand up against a charge of racism. So, in their organized campaign against me — hundreds of letters were addressed to CBS National News — gays decided to charge me with racism.

Now they're angry because the race issue got me and the homosexual issue did not.

For all the hurt to me, I am ever sorrier for the hurt to gays, blacks, and CBS News. None of them needs more trouble.

ACCOUNTING SCHOLARSHIP

To: All Interested Accounting Students - Accounting Majors Pursuing a Career in Public Accounting.

From: Rhode Island Society of CPA's RE: THE CARL W. CHRISTIANSEN SCHOLARSHIP

The late Carl W. Christiansen, CPA established a scholarship fund in 1974. The purpose of this fund was to assist students who hope to join the accounting profession by granting scholarships to help defray the cost of a college education.

Over the past several years, total annual distributions from the fund have ranged from $4,200 to $6,400. The number of scholarships awarded and the dollar amount of each scholarship is determined by a Scholarship Committee. In the past, it has been the practice of the Committee to award not less than $1,000 to each successful recipient. Students are invited to make an application by complying with the criteria and guidelines listed below.

CRITERIA FOR APPLICANTS

1. Applicant must be a legal resident of Rhode Island.
2. Applicant must be a citizen of the United States.
3. Applicant must have expressed an interest in accounting during any of his/her undergraduate years.
4. Applicant must obtain an overall academic average of 3.0 on a scale of 4.0 or its equivalent in the opinion of the Accounting Department faculty.

* Interested applicants should obtain an application at the Financial Aid Office located in the Financial Aid Building.

ROGER WILLIAMS COLLEGE
Ivana - Another Leona?

by Mindy Peternman

Now that Donald and Ivana are separating, we all hope that Trump doesn't lose the executive skills of the woman Vanity Fair dubbed "Power Bitch." But if he does, even his most loyal advisors will keep an eye out for the next biggest business opportunity.

Right now, no comment from either Trump on that. Yet speculation on future positions may prove a sticky point. A pre-nuptial agreement entitles her to $55 million and a mansion, but Mrs. Trump may argue for more because she's been Trump's business partner during 13 years of marriage.

As executive vice president of interior design for all Trump properties, she's the one you blame—or praise—for the glitzy Trump look. She spent 2-1/2 years as chief executive of Trump Casino in Atlantic City. Now she's president of New York's Plaza Hotel, overseeing a $50 million renovation.

From all accounts, Ivana Trump isn't just a bored rich wife dabling in business. "She's a businesswoman herself," says Tom McGrath, editor of Atlantic City magazine.

Shades of Leona Helmsley! Like that self-styled "Hotel Queen of New York," Ivana is known for fighting for what she wants. She takes over a property and pays close attention to details. In his 1987 best-seller, Trump: The Art of the Deal, husband Donald tells of one hotel executive saying, "she manager is going nuts. You won't like her at all. She's mean. She'll see right through the corner of the lobby and call over a porter to clean it up." In better days, Trump called her "a great manager.

While in charge of Trump Casino, Ivana spent four days a week in Atlantic City, going through receipts, signing checks, redesigning bell boys' uniforms. Naturally, she was criticized. "It was a question of priorities," says Ben Baroewsky, editor of Casino Chronicle, a weekly newsletter. "Do you want to spend money to get those gamblers in from Toronto? Or for new bedrooms?"

Don't ever call Ivana another Leona, though. She once said Helmsley, who's been convicted of tax evasion, "brought businesswomen 20 years backward." Ivana calls herself tough, but says, "I'm a lady."

Just what every college student needs: A roommate that cooks.

Introducing the new B.M.D.C.—the biggest Macintosh on campus.

The Macintosh II computer. It's the perfect roommate for power hungry students who do high speed computing, video processing, engineering or graphic design.

Made with an open configuration that allows for special purpose boards, the Mac II is the fastest, best performing Macintosh ever built. Yet with all its sophistication, it still has the same point-and-click simplicity that Macintosh has become famous for.

Which means, of course, the Macintosh II and you will be the perfect roommates. It cooks. And you clean up.

Marital Bliss Abound

by Nancy Hellmich

Many people have found marital bliss—but they think something is amiss in other marriages, a Gallup survey finds.

The survey of 657 adults over 18 mirrors the married population. Results, in the March Psychology Today, out today:

— 92 percent say they've had no financial problems.
— 83 percent would marry the same person again even if they had known the chances.
— 76 percent say their spouse is physically attractive.
— 41 percent say they are very playful when they're alone together.
— 44 percent believe their spouse has a high sex drive.
— 43 percent say they want to have another child.
— 42 percent report that they wish they had more time for sex.
— 38 percent say their spouse is not as committed to sex as they are.
— 29 percent say they want to have more sex.
— 26 percent say their spouse is physically unattractive.
— 25 percent say they have a more dim view of their marriage than they had at the beginning.
— 24 percent say their spouse is not as committed to the marriage as they are.
— 17 percent say their spouse is unfaithful.
— 17 percent say their spouse is unfaithful.
— 14 percent say their spouse is unfaithful.

A recent study by Psychology Today found that women are more likely to cheat than men. The study was sponsored by Psychology Today and the National Council on Alcoholism.

Greatness Does Not Come Easy

by Bryan Burwell

No matter what manner of vocabulary or hocus pocus King or any of his stooges in the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association try to conjure up to make last Saturday night go away, it will never happen.

History does not vanish simply because of standouts dealt out in backrooms.

So nothing that King or any of his acolytes manufacture will ever erase the most startling upset in sports history from the minds of all those who witnessed Mike Tyson tumbling to the canvas cold as a mackerel from a thunderstorm.

Mike Tyson is no longer the undisputed heavyweight champion of the world. James “Buster” Douglas, a most unlikely soul, is the new king. For all but eight or 12 seconds (depending on who you listen to) of this scheduled 12-round bout that ended with Douglas knocking out Tyson in the 10th round, Tyson was completely outclassed.

Tyson was confused and frustrated. His left eye was a puffy, discolored slit. Douglas was confident, aggressive and unmarked.

“I whipped his ass,” Douglas said.

The only heads that refused to accept the obvious were one adorned with a haywire Afro and a couple more with all those potent but lost million-dollar signs dancing inside them.

We are hearing a lot about this mysterious “long count” that King benoms robbed Tyson of the championship.

After getting past for seven previous rounds, with his left eye swollen nearly shut, Tyson landed his only effective punch of the night—a roaring uppercut that sent Douglas to the floor near the end of the eighth round. But Douglas was up by the count of eight, and before Tyson could land another blow, the bell sounded to end the round.

Douglas and King protested that referee Octavio Meyran took too long to count Douglas out.

Meyran, an experienced championship veteran, acknowledged he didn’t pick up the timerkeeper’s count at four, but went with his own count at one.

Douglas appeared fresh enough to get up whenever he wanted and claimed later he was waiting until he was sure Tyson was down.

Tyson was down slowly and visibly, his leg splayed awkwardly against the ropes. Tyson finally rose after 104 seconds. Heights in the ring?

Tyson’s corner asked for a ruling and referee Meyran said Tyson was down too late—something like 109 to 105.

Douglas said it was 107 to 97, with two judges giving him the decision and the other one for the champ.

Douglas said he was confident, planning to knock Tyson out in the 10th round.

Tyson had shown in two earlier fights how frustrated he became when tall fighters constantly stood up when he waded in too close. But most of all, he repeatedly showed how bored he was by this steady stream of French pastries who purported to be challengers to his throne, yet always left the ring, dull, unconscious and very, very early.

After his 93-second destruction of Carl “The Truth” Williams last July, Tyson’s face bore the sad, unsatisfied expression of a starving man who just finished weeping down a mammoth cotton candy ball.

“Is that all there is?” his sad eyes seemed to say. “Is THIS the best anyone can do?”

He brought that same attitude into his preparation for the Douglas fight, and for the first time in his professional career, Tyson paid for it.

Of course he is not the first of the Sweet Science’s luminaries to take that indifference into the ring. Muhammad Ali, the sweetest scientist of them all, climbed into the ring on Feb. 16, 1978, a jigging mass of flesh as he readied to face a character named Leon Spinks in Las Vegas. Bookmakers refused bets on this one, too. No one took Spinks seriously, most of all Ali, who then proceeded to lose a split decision in a fight previously considered the greatest upset in boxing history.

Twelve years later, Buster Douglas has nudged Leon Spinks out of his place in boxing history.

Tyson, a noted boxing historian, should have noticed the similarities between Ali-Spinks and Tyson-Douglas. Those who know history are supposed to be able to avoid repeating its mistakes.

Still, there is one troublesome difference between the Ali who lost his title to Spinks and the Tyson who surrendered his championship belt to Douglas. Ali was 36 years old when he became so bored, Ali was at the end of his wondrous career.

Tyson is only 23.

Presumably, Tyson is still young enough to learn, still young enough to rewrite his own history lessons. Greatness does not come to those too bored to care.
Fritz Overcoming The Obstacles

by James Bruston

The loyal Bryant crowd cheers as the London Express — a four-piece band from Nissan, Connecticut, number 32, Rob Fritz! As Rob jogs out to the sunken court, the cheer brings a feeling to Rob that he thought he would never feel again.

Being a former All-League selection at East Lyme High School in Connecticut, Rob is quite familiar with the gratification of hearing cheers of appreciation for his efforts. "I can't believe that Bryan College Indians, a 6-4 team, bring a feeling to Rob that he might not ever feel again."

Rob's determination and talents, along with the attention of the coaching staff, has molded him into a solid player who would always be remembered.

That following summer, Rob decided himself by attending the Holy Cross basketball camp, a summer league, and the Nutmeg Games in Connecticut. In turn with all his basketball experience, Rob also developed a defensive conditioning schedule involving running to build up his endurance and stamina.

Rob then came back this year and tried out for the team. He was once a part of, but not under a new coach, Mr. Ed Reilly.

Coach Reilly was here to try and rebuild the tradition, and he was giving everyone a clean shot at showing him their capabilities. Rob Fritz did just that. As Coach Reilly stated, "Robbie took full advantage of his opportunity. From day one, Rob showed determination and talent." Coach Reilly rewarded Rob's talent and work ethic with a starting job as the

by Dan Quarrelle, Intraumals

GFC - Returned to the court with a hungry look in their eyes. The 1988 A league champions have started off this season with the Rebels and BMOC. Still Smokin' has been the surprise team in the league so far. Their string of solid wins including a stunning victory over Parente's Wildcats last week. The 'Cats did manage to bounce back with a convincing win over the Rebels earlier in the week.

Meanwhile, KDR has stalked their claim to the Fraternity A league title, playing a tough early schedule to a flawless record. The blue and orange handout was well overall and are the odds on favorites. But 15 games is a long season!

The East Can't Be Beet: The 40th annual all-star game was held Sunday in Miami, but Saturday's dunk contest and shootout had more excitement. The game was over in the first quarter, and the West went on for an easy 130-113 victory. The East, with less team patience, scored on double figures, opened up a 46-23 first quarter lead and never looked back. The Four Horsemen of the West for the Magic Johnson, who led the West with a record-setting performance on a four-point game MVP. Charles Barkley and Michael Jordan led the East with 15 points each.

Other star game MVPs: Ralph Wilkins and Lynn Head with 17 points each.

In Saturday's pre-game festivities, Dominc Wilkins soared over them all in the slam dunk contest. The Atlanta forward and outstomiled Kenny Smith of Sacramento in the final round. Last year's winner, Kenny Walker came in third, and Shawn Kemp finished fourth. Wilkins seemed to rely on power over finesse, using several two-handed "thunder dunks" to trave the judges. After all, says Dominic, "How many dunks can you do?

In the three-point shootout, the two favorites were out early. In the first round, Jordan shot a poor 5 out of 25 from "threeville", while Bird put in 13. Both were out, leaving fellow Chicago Bull Craig Hodges and Indiana's Reggie Miller to shine. Hodges defeated Miller in the final round, 19-18, with Miller missing his last shot to tie. Hodges received his home-invested $20,000 for his efforts.

Elvin Hayes had 10 points and 4 rebounds, giving him the MVP in this year's Legends All-Star game on Saturday. Cazzie Russell hit a baseline jumper with 17 seconds left to give the East a 37-36 win over the West.

Baseball already? Spring is almost here, and its time for baseball, hot dogs, and arborization. Everyone wants money. Oakland's Jose Canseco agreed Monday to a one-year, $2 million dollar salary, giving him a $500,000 raise from last year. Blue Jays pitcher Tom Henke agreed to $7.5 million for three years. Red Sox first baseman Mike Hargriff signed for $395,000 for one year. Other one-year contracts settled: Toronto's John Correnti-$762,500; Milwaukee's Glenn Strange-$575,000; Atlanta's Outfielder, McCowell-$690,000.

In College baseball news, Texas (+1 already) was voted the number one ranked team in the nation. Stanford (-1) takes second, and Wichita State (20), defending national champions, are third.

Top 25 News: Bryant moves into the poll at number 23 this week...only kidding, Kansas moves back up to number one after Missouri lost to Kansas State 65-58 earlier in the season, Missouri lost Kansas State 77-71, New Mexico State makes the top 25 for the first time in 20 years. Who's Hot: Georgia Tech, up 3 spots from 16 to 13. Who's Not: Arkansas, down from six to eight, and UCLA, down 19 to 7. NHL Report:

NHL Surprises

by Patrick Maha

Since the beginning of the winter vacation there have been many surprises such as the surge that has put the New York Islanders on top of the Patrick division. This dramatic turnaround was totally unexpected along with a scoring coach shown by all-star forward Pat LaFontaine. His 47 goals place him second in the league behind Brett Hull of St. Louis who has netted 50.
