Will students pay for printing in the future?

By Laura Wiederhold

Campus News Editor

If you have used the Koffler Center within the past week, then you have been introduced to the new procedure to print documents. Users are now prompted to a screen that requires a username or ID along with appropriate password to be entered in order to forward the documents to the printers.

This process, according to Phoebe Butlin, Technology Lab Manager, is "to familiarize students" with the new printing procedure. This will provide students exposure for a new printing policy that could possibly be implemented next semester. Butlin stressed that students are currently not charged for printing, but some students are waiting for final approval to change anything.

Last year the Bello Center, print controllers, printed pages that approximately cost $2.20 for the paper and toner needed to print those pages. That amount does not include the price for maintenance or personnel, which are required to maintain the machines and labor hours. Mary Moroney, Director of Library Services, feels that is a high cost Bryant incurs which can easily be avoided. Moroney hopes for students to "think before they print" then the excess amounts of unnecessary waste produced on a bi-weekly basis.

The construction of Janikies Auditorium has affected many students and groups on campus. Will it be going on? When will it be finished? These are a few of the questions being asked by most campus groups which use the facility.

The renovations inside the auditorium include new, separate dressing rooms with sinks and mirrors for both sexes. This is a vast improvement from what it used to be according to Meghan Regimbald, President of the Bryant Players. On the technology side, new sound and lighting systems have been installed.

In the past, only one section of the stage could be lit. The Bryant Players believed that the construction would be completed by September 30th, so that they can restructure their schedule. If it is not finished, they will be forced to change the way they do their shows. According to the Bryant Players, it is important to know when the Janikies construction will be completed.

The Bryant Players, it is important to know when the Janikies construction will be completed. In the planning stages for the renovation of Janikies, there was a collaborative effort between the Bryant Players and administration. The president and vice-president of the Players, along with the technical director, met twice with Brian Britton, the Director of Physical Plant, to exchange ideas and suggestions about the lighting and sound system.

When asked if it was worth it, Meghan Regimbald, said, "It was a real honor to work with the Physical Plant. It was nice to be asked for our input in the renovations." Overall, the Bryant Players are "very excited about having professional facilities to work with." Chris Compaizik, President of the Student Programming Board (SPB) on the other hand was not enthusiastic about having to show SPI's monthly movies in South Dining Hall. According to him, it was just "alright". However, he believes that once everything is in working condition, it will be like "the real movies, with surround sound." According to him, SPI has planned to hold the Homecoming concert in Samson Dining Hall since it is the only facility currently with a workable, sizable stage.

Approval however, has not been forthcoming considering the fact that this facility also has just been recently renovated. Compaizik believes that Sodexho does not want any wear and tear to occur to its new facility. Some events planned by SPB for this semester remain hanging in the balance, seeking suitable locations.

Bush Appeals to Other Nations for Aid for Iraq Development

By Ron Hutchinson
Knight Ridder Newspapers

President Bush appealed to other countries Sunday for war relief in Iraq and told Americans that he intends to do and spend whatever it takes to transform Iraq's broken country into a democracy.

"The Middle East will take time and require sacrifice," Bush said in an evening address to the nation from the East Room of the White House, according to prepared remarks released in advance. "Yet we will do whatever it takes, no matter how hard, to win this war of peace and to win the war on terror." He warned that his administration was an acknowledgment that rebuilding Iraq has been far more difficult than administration officials had anticipated.

In addition to seeking financial and technical support from the international community, Bush will ask Congress to commit another $60 billion to $80 billion to help feed the war-torn country.

The terrorists have a strategic advantage because they want to "leave Iraq before our work is done," Bush said. "They want to create a civil war in the civilized world." Top administration officials acknowledged earlier Sunday that the mission in Iraq has been far more difficult than Bush and his aids had anticipated a year ago.

"The terror war is not over," Bush said, "and we will not let up until the job is done." But Bush also expressed confidence that a " Sonia's life changed, a day before her wedding. The young woman, who was engaged to be married in September, decided to delay the ceremony to dedicate herself to the relief efforts in New York. She was one of the first volunteers to arrive at the World Trade Center site, where she worked for several days. Her courage and dedication inspired others to join in the efforts to help those affected by the terrorist attacks. She became a symbol of hope and resilience in the face of tragedy.

Americans Struggle to Move On

By Dave Montgomery
Knight Ridder Newspapers

Saddam Hussein is still fighting in the heart of Manama, evident in the sporadic combat that continues long after the second anniversary of 9/11. Americans have seen signs of moving beyond that horrible day, but they haven't forgotten and they will never forget the "unprecedented" losses of that day. The shadow of terrorism has become a part of daily life. Americans are precocious, managing worries over the economy, rising gasoline prices and rising costs. The patriotic fervor that bonded the country just before Labor Day has given way to the aftermath of the disaster that has saddened and cooled.

"The country still remains very patriotic. We remember the people. But the idea of rallying around the president and national institutions is not the same as the fall of 2001," that's faded," one veteran stated. After watching U.S. troops go into combat in two theaters, Afghanistan and Iraq, Americans have become weary of reading about their priorities. Theirs. National priorities have come to define life in many ways. Every American has become accustomed to life in a world of color-coded terror alerts, monitored by a "month-old bureaucracy" created solely to fend off terrorism. The 170,000-employee Homeland Security Department.

Those directly affected by the tragedy, have followed divergent paths since the tragedy. Some have found new direction in volunteer work; others are struggling to cope and are unable to contain their emotions as they prepare for the second anniversary.

"Life hasn't resumed to a new normal," they said.

Open Sesame: The password to Bryant's portal

By Ed Millo-Roberts
Editor-in-Chief

Usename: Ali Baba

Behind the portal is a store of wealth not exactly of the monetary kind but of the literary and academic kind. With the introduction of the Bryant portal, referred to commonly as the Campus Intranet or iBryant (IB), students were allowed access to a variety of services after a single sign-on process.

All they have to do is 'shout' Open Sesame and be transported to a world that Ali Baba and the forty thieves might even fear.

The campus intranet is a centralized, secure, internal, communication site. According to A. J. Kim, in the Office of College Relations, this site was put together to make sure that students and faculty were aware of announcements which were internal to the campus. The project pulled resources from several departments.

going to be very hard switching up the venues," was Compass's last statement to this day.

When questioned about the state of Janjiés, Peter Brissette, the campus architect and -Brian Britton said the reason that Janjiés was not on duty cur- rently was because "the seats are coming in a little bit late." The seats were due in mid-October.

Both Britton and Brissette have worked on many projects, including the Ronalda and Salamanon Dining Halls. This is also the first time Janjiés has had the chance to mold his Stone into a "more workable theater" than before. The seating is comfortable and the auditorium will be easily heated and ventilated with better circulation. According to them, there is more room for props and even the entrance has been changed.

A good part of the design work was done by Peter Northrop and has been worked on other colleges. Other work was completed by the company Vision III and Shaw's Construction.

Within the first 150 workers to get the work squeezed into the last week, including planning to pot television on the rotonda for students to advertise their activities.

Peter Molkowski, the senior project manager for the "evolutionary design" of the auditorium and Janjiés was responsible for all the construction after the design was complete.

He took the plans and specifications out to competit- ible bids and finally worked with the project team. According to him, "Janjiés is in what we call the substantively complete phase tracked the use of campus printers and then billed the students according to the end of the year.

However, Providence College does not charge students for printing at any campus facility. "They strongly encourage students to provide recycling receptacles near printers to contain paper waste" expressed Jonathan Leighton, a senior at Providence College.

Paper and toner conservation is a trend on campuses, but is charging students for printing not the right solution? For now there is no solution, but it is apparent that there is an issue of excessive printing on our campus according to the Bello Center study.

While students are facing next semester, or they will be allowed certain print amounts before being charged (in SRU was last year), or not be charged at all has not been decided. The solution will inevitably lie in a collaborative effort on the part of students as well as administration if this problem persists. Not a moment, students are not being charged for use of printing facilities on campus.

According to Dr. Talon, the Student Senate meeting last week "nothing has yet been determined."

The final solution will come from students, but it is unknown when this decision will be made.

Students needed to be able to access their classrooms and as such that project was moved up 1 day in order to facilitate completion. However, it was not nearly completed in time for the re-opening of the semester.

The re-opening of the facilities is likely to remove the stress on some of the student groups such as the Bryant Players and SPG who are mostly affected. Until the project is completed, student groups will have to make do with what they have.

The Rules of Engagement: The Challenging Female?

By Tara Whalley
Opinion Editor

Is there such a thing as the challenging female? In my opinion, every female has her own style as to how she approaches men. All women and men alike play a role in the dynamics of the game. If you are quiet, non-aggressive, too aggressive, persistent etc., you can go on and on about the different tactics females use and the fact that guys still remain clueless once the game starts.

During summer, it’s official over and it’s now time to rest our minds that have been shut off for the past three months. It’s also a time to put away the numbers of our summer flings and move on to a new year with new relationships, new friendships and most of all new beginning.

It all started at brunch on Sunday at Smagin when the conversation shifted gears to whether guys like the challenging female or not. Of course, the table consisted of four women and seven men (considering the Bryant male to female ratio), but what better way to get a male opinion. “Do men really like a woman who is a challenge?”

A few men said that a challenge is a waste of time and if she is really interested into him then she should just show her interest. However, one man said that a challenge is good, but to an extent. A woman shouldn’t be overwhelming into the man and vice versa.

It is too much when a woman starts calling her crush on his cell during a guy’s night out (especially when he never gave her the number) or waiting outside of Saimo all day hoping he will call her on his three month show. However, there has got to be a happy medium where there is give and take. My mother always told me it’s the little things that count and I guess you could apply that to relationships as well.

Women should keep it simple, but stimulating. A smile and hello can be the best way to start off your flirting abilities. A piece of advice I can give from experience is, men like compliments that accent one of that abilities or features. For example, all a guy that you loved the free throw he made at the end of the first half of the basketball game. By showing that you paid attention and you have some knowledge of what went on at the game shows you are interested.

Men, remember that details are important. You need to step up to the plate. If you want something, go for it and take action. It’s funny how quickly men will jump at the opportunity to play it all when she makes the first move. However, today women are much more sophisticated and it is definitely a two-way street now. Men and women should both be able to ask one another out, but it seems now the ladies do it all. Men for the most part have been lacking flätzlich skills as well as manners.

In both aspects it seems there is no man that really holds the door for a woman or simply telling her she looks nice is a better move than giving her a few beers to get her drunk and then over her black signature Victory Secret bra that ends up next to your Sponge Bob square pants boxer shorts in the AM.

From a woman’s perspective there is certain Do’s and Don’ts that a man should know prior to approaching a female. A good looking athletic blonde just walked by so I have no choice but to make myself approachable.

Sports for Dummies - A Recap on Summer Sports

By Eddy Brady

Assessment: Sports Editor

Yeahhh... Anna Kournikova was there, and will always be... but no news of her playing tennis and making it past the 1st round has emerged this summer. In the world of tennis, Pete Sampras was arguably one of the best players in tennis history but he recently retired because he caught the Kournikova (Get it?! He just wasn’t cutting it on the courts). Andre Agassi still seems to be playing tennis quite well and is currently the number two ranked player in the world; he also skis, he’s bald very well and allows the world to see it on television commercials. In other headlines, a relatively new name in tennis is tennis player Andy Roddick. Fans see him as the new guy because he’s an up and coming star. In fact, for that he just won the US Open, but because he has a definite ace for a girlfriend, Mandy Moore. Mandy Moore could probably beat Anna Kournikova in a tennis match but I would still give Anna the slight edge in the looks category.

The number one pick in the NBA draft, Lebron “The Phenom” James was drafted right out of high school. Some basketball critics are calling him the next Michael Jordan. I’m not going to deny this kids ability to play basketball but let’s be honest, how long will it be until Lebron has to retire? He is the oldest looking 18 year old I have even seen. When Lebron “I look like I’m 20” James goes to see a movie they mistakenly give him the senior citizen discount. It’s hard to believe this kid graduated high school a year after I did.

Lebron “The Grandpa” James immediately after being drafted number one in the NBA. Take a guess at how old he was when this photo was taken, 30, 40...80?

However, I guess him making 90 million dollars in endorsements without even have played an actual game makes up for all the tabs he has received about his age. Carmelo Anthony, who was drafted two spots behind James, out of Syracuse University has already won an NCAA championship and he will be the Rookie of the Year. Kudos to him.

Knock, Knock, who’s there? Ben Curtis, Ben Curtis, who...? Exactly! In golf news this summer all those names have been playing in all the off season tournaments. Ben Curtis was ranked 396 and somehow was able to win the British Open. So did no name, Shaun Micheel, who ranked 169 win the PGA Championship. Phil Mickelson recently stated that Tiger Woods is the only player who is “good enough to overcome the equipment he’s stuck with.”

Phil Mickelson is referring to Tiger Woods having to play with Nike golf clubs in comparison to previously playing with Titleist. Phil might be right this could be why Tiger hasn’t been winning. But critics are curious, Phil was when was the last time you won a major championship? Oh that’s right, David Duval, yeah, he’s like Elvis, alive but dead.

In NBA news, the Lakers have turned into the Yankees by acquiring Gary Payton and Karl Malone in the off season. The Lakers did not win a championship last year, but they figure they have at least 300 million dollars to spend. The Red Sox’s make the play-offs the Yankees better weather but because the Yankees have not been able to stay within ten runs of the Red Sox the last few times they have played each other. But don’t worry Yankee fans, Yankee management seems to know how to fix that. Next year, they are just going to buy Manny Ramirez.

In college football news Miami and Virginia Tech will be leaving the Big East and joining the ACC next year. Basically, this will be the last year to see people that drafted him in fantasy football (Sorry). The Patriots went 4-6 in preseason; but then lost the first game of the season by 31, close one. Good call on trading Belche... no! On a side note, even though Tom Brady could not produce a touchdown he still has the best last name in the league.

In College basketball news a University player from St. John’s was allegedly drunk when he shot and killed his own roommate Patrick. Devlinne. These guys were reportedly good friends before the incident and I know friends don’t like to fight so instead this dummy shot him... (oops forgot to say it was in self-defense according to St. John’s). What is this world coming to when teammates are shooting each other and Kobe Bryant is guilty of adultery. Here’s my prediction behind the Kobe Bryant Case. Naughty, Naughty Kobe!!

A Peek into Fall Bryant Varsity Sports

By Meghan Lovell

This past weekend in Little Rock, Arkansas, the bulldog track team competed against several other schools. The team performed exceptionally well, achieving several personal bests. In the 100-meter dash, two team members broke the school record.

The track and field team has been working hard throughout the season to prepare for upcoming meets. The team is looking forward to competing in the state championships later this month.

Men's Soccer

Men's Soccer defeated St. Rose with a final score of 4-0. The Bulldogs' defense was solid, allowing no goals. The team's offense was led by senior striker Alex Garcia, who scored two goals. Garcia has been a key player for the team this season.

Men's Soccer also played against a tough opponent in their final home game of the season. The team put on a strong performance, winning the game 2-1. Garcia scored the first goal of the game, followed by a penalty kick from junior midfielder Diego Mendez.

The team's success this year can be attributed to their hard work and dedication. With several key players returning next year, the team is looking forward to building on their accomplishments.

Women's Field Hockey

The women's field hockey team played against rival St. Mary's on Saturday. The game was closely contested, but the Bulldogs emerged victorious with a final score of 2-1. The team's defense was crucial in the victory, holding St. Mary's to only one goal.

The team's offensive performance was also noteworthy, with senior striker Kate Miller scoring the goal that sealed the win. Miller has been a consistent scorer for the team this season.

Coach Johnson praised the team's performance, stating, "The girls played with heart and determination, and it showed in their victory." The team is looking forward to their next game against another strong opponent.

Northest-10 Conference, according to the preseason coaches poll. The Bulldogs begin the season this weekend on Sunday at ECAC Division II Championships. The conference's schedule is set to start in the spring officially this weekend.

With the switch to spring season for women's tennis, die-hard fans for tennis will have to wait till spring rolls around and it's warmer. As for the forecast, the Bulldogs are predicted to take a huge bite out of the conference.

Bryant Field Hockey bedside table

The Bulldogs extended the season-opening undefeated streak to three with a 5-0 win against C.W Post Monday at Bulldog Stadium.

Continuing with its impressive performance, the volleyball team is returning from its fifth consecutive NCAA Division II tournament. With new co-captains Brita Beckman and Eli Kim, the team aims to accumulate more victories.

André McLeod

Name: André McLeod
Class: Senior
Age: 22
Hometown: Monroe, NY
High School: Monroe-Woodbury
Bryant Team: Men's Field Hockey
Position: Forward
Nickname: Dree
Biggest accomplishment in your sport: Being awarded New York State player of the year. Interesting fact about yourself: André also actively competed for his high school on the wrestling team, but he took senior year off so that he would be in top shape to play football at Bryant.

Superstition: The night before a game he warms his high school highlight tape to get prepared and pumped up for the next day!

André McLeod raw for 703 yards, including a touchdown to lead the Bulldogs to a 31-24 victory over Pace, a conference rival. This is his second time in his career where he has rushed for over 200 yards. The first time was against Mount Ida in 2000.

Heidi Chirigotis

Name: Heidi Chirigotis
Class: Senior
Age: 21
Hometown: Westport, MA
High School: Westport
Bryant Team: Women's Field Hockey
Position: Forward
Biggest accomplishment in your sport: In a state tournament in high school, she scored 3 goals in under 6 minutes for her team! Memorable sports moment: Last season, the team made it to the NCAAs Final Four for the first time in the program's history. Intersting fact about yourself: Heidi played the piano for 12 years.

Superstition: "I am no longer taping my ankle because we beat St. Mike's for the first time with me not having my ankle taped.

Senior forward Heidi Chirigotis scored all three goals against St. Michael's on Saturday. This is the first time in the program's history to beat their last year's NE-10 regular season co-champions. Another notch in history making is Chirigotis who recorded her first career hat trick.

Do you know someone who deserves to be the next "Bull Dog's Best"? Nominate someone who has done something exceptional in their sport, and we will feature them here in The Archway. If your athlete is chosen, you will receive a Coca-Cola Prize Pack courtesy of Bryant College Athletics.

Great Bands You (Probably) Haven't Heard Of (Until Now) Pt. 1: OM Trio - "instru-metal jazz rock"

By Christian Collard

Variety

The assortment of jazz-based live dance bands has been growing rapidly over the past several years. Some well-known names that come to mind are the OM Trio, the New Deal, and genre pioneers Medeski, Martin and Wood. Now you can add a new name to that list in OM Trio. The dance-floor trio hail-from the San Francisco Bay Area, is currently touring to support their latest album titled "OM TRIO-PUNCTINGORECORD," a track electronic/jazz opus. OM Trio, comprised of Brian Felix (keyboards/or), Paige Norman (bass), and Ilya Stetskovsky (drums), is a very unique in the way they blend genres together, much like a stew that sets them apart from the aforementioned bands. Their songs are crafted in such a way that may start off with a tight drum-and-bass groove, wander off into jazzy meanderings, only to bring it all close with a boot-stomping, knee-deep pile of funk.

On "GLOBAL-

TIMEWIRE," the Trio tends to refrain from pushing any of its songs into a lengthy jam, always leaving the listener craving more. Luckily, the need for more of the same is satisfied seconds later when the next track kicks in and gives one more jazz fix.

A prime example of their genre-bending music is "Demarcation." The four-minute musical rollercoaster ride starts off with fussy chops, soon escalating into a space-out triphop bliss, then careening into sheer amibence, only to have the funk rise up and dominate the ending.

Woven between tracks is the deep groove of "Shant," which is a solid drum and bass groove accented with glitchy keyboard. Despite ruffling throughout the album, it never gets tedious, but manages to get you even deeper in the funk.

No matter which style or genre you prefer, OM Trio is able to satisfy every one's musical taste.

Another level of becoming a top MC is being able to bring life to the words you're using, such as Joe Budden's verse, "wearing two pairs of jeans when mom's gave me a beating," you can picture your mom swinging hard with the beat and you jumping around like it hurts so she will stop. When we think of the originators of Hip Hop's rap 10 names come to mind only because there are so many stories of who the originators are but there is not a single originator.

Therefore, the names of these pioneers are Pete DJ Jones, Kool DJ Herc, DJ Hollywood, Eddie Cheeba, "Love Bug," Starski, Grand Master Flash, Afrika Bambatta, Kurtis Blow, The Sugarhill Gang, and Run-DMC.

Pete DJ Jones was one of the most notable DJ during these early days. Kool DJ Herc, the godfather of hip hop was a Jamaican-born DJ who moved to the Bronx in 1966, with his unique play of R&B, soul, funk, and obscure disco. DJ Hollywood was the first rhythmic disc jockey as well as the Grand Master Flash (Joseph Saddler) earned his name with his speed on the turntables. He rose to legendary status in the world of hip-hop right as Kool Herc's reign was ending. Afrika Bambaata is a bona fide hip-hop legend. He is affectionately known as the grandfather of hip-hop, having been a part of the movement since 1972.

They all brought their own place to the table. It is important for people to understand that Rap is Hip Hop, but Hip Hop is not Rap. These forefathers understood that and created all aspects of the genre through drums, keyboards, synthesizers, etc. Not too many of the artists out today are taking music to the next level. You have 'The Roots' who have taken MCing back to Africa with their drums and the live shows so that they can bring back that essence of what music is or Nas recreating the storytelling rap and personifying a bullet with the life of a human. Or 2Pac who brings Rap into his poetry so eloquently and DMX who brings his rap skills into his prayers.

MCing is about creativity, building off of what someone else has created. This is why the Top Five MCs are always 2Pac, Nas, Jay-Z, Eminem, and Notorious B (in no specific order). These are the ones who have taken what the pioneers have done and created their own style or own level of rap.

Too many rappers are no longer living out the legacy, they are just making a quick buck and it's destroying the Rap Movement. But it is not all in the style of the Hip Hop Culture. I believe Jay-Z said it best: 'There's so many little lyrics and they not identical, they try to live in your presence but they can't in the physical (paraphrased.) A piece of homework, find the track "Give It Up Or Turn It Loose On The Jungle Groove Remix" by James Brown. This was the jam back in the day. You want to learn about the present well, everyone was getting down with this jam in the club back in the day. "Every B-Boy, MC, Rapper, DJ, Rap Group, Dancer, Aerosol Artist group, break-dancers, and A-list knew this song, and when it was played at a party or club," Kurtis Blow... You're dismissed.
