HAUNTED HOUSE: LEGEND OR TRUTH?

BY EB MILLS-ROBERTSON
Arkways News Editor

Everyone would agree that a good horror movie should have a spooky, malevolent character and more than an eerie, nightmarish setting. The idea of "zombies" may be a little far fetched but the combination of a zombie and a chainsaw serial killer at the box office is sure to be a hit irrespective of reality. Bryant supposedly has its own fair share of movie making legends. Or are they more than just legends?

According to local narratives, the Amy Mowry House, which is now inhabited by Dr. Eakin and his family is haunted. The house was built in 1828 and was a typical Rhode Island farmhouse consisting of a large brick chimney and as entry with a full embattlement and side lights common to Greek Revival buildings.

It was one of two farmhouses connected to the Joseph Mowry House, which was built in 1708 and now serves as Bryant's Alumni House. Captain Joseph Mowry's House has served as the first Smithfield town house. Records are not sure about his time of death. However, the property passed through several descendants till it became the property of Earl S. Tupper. Earl Tupper donated the 220 acres that land to Bryant College and the houses were preserved in accordance with the Historical Society of Rhode Island.

The home has however been redeone in order to make it habitable for the Eakin family. Renovations started in May 1998 and in January 2000, the Eakin family moved in. The first thing you notice when you walk into the house is an imposing brick fireplace. The house still has an 18th century colonial farm house theme- the original floor panels have been kept and new floor panels brought in where the original panels had rolled out.

There are thick, rough beams supporting the ceilings and a winding, compact stair case leading to the upper floor and the attic.

The furnace, which was used to make food, has been preserved but serves as their wine cellar in a sense. Above the kitchen door is a bar and from this hangs Mrs. Eakin's dried flowers and herbs.

The attic and the basement still spoke volumes of the house's past. Even with the light on and in the company of Mrs. Eakin, I could not help but feel the hairs on my neck stand up straight.

The cellar was not different and I really made no attempt to walk down those stairs even though I toured the whole house.

In a sense, this sounds like a story of horror movie. All it needs are the necessary elements to make it complete. First of all, we need an ancient house and the Amy Mowry House is 174 years approximately. Secondly, we need a house with an uncertain history.

The house fits this exact description. There are no detailed records of who lived there and when they lived there.

The house is named Amy Mowry House and thus, seems to be named after someone. However, after extensive research, I came up with several people who fit this profile. There was Amandra

This is the grave stone head of Thomas Mowry, who was a former resident of the Eakin's home.

Willard Mowry who was dated as between 2nd Feb 1828-18 Sept 1895. The house was built in 1828 and it is possible that it was named after her. Amanda Mowry was a former resident of the house and her grave stone was found on the property of Earl S. Tupper. She remained unmarried and was the daughter of Daniel J. (son of judge Daniel) and Alice Mowry. Intuition as well as the fact that this information was written in the corner of the Building Data sheet seems to dictate that this Ammy is the right Ammy we are looking for.

Also behind physical plant, there is a tombstone in it.

Thirdly, we need a story that fits the motive of the ghost.

According to local legend, the ghost of a female and lives between the fireplace and the kitchen.

I would hazard a guess that the latter Ammy would be a adequate ghost because she was unmarried and her motive is thus loneliness.

"Especially, we would need disturbing occurrences and verifiable sightings."

The present inhabitants, the Eakin family has had its fair share of eerie, nightmarish setting.

The Mowry house built in 1828 is now called "Bryant's haunted house." Dr. Eakin and his wife Marge currently reside there.

Accident Leaves Student Paralyzed, Plans to Return in January

By Danielle Dunham

Bryant College senior, Keith Anderson, who last June suffered a spinal cord injury that left him paralyzed from the chest down, has a goal for this January: to return to his classes in finance at Bryant College.

He is undergoing intense physical therapy near his home in Boston, Maine to build strength in his upper body and to regain the use of his legs.

Keith was injured on the night of June 6, 2002, two weeks after his 21st birthday. He was riding in the front seat of a friend's truck in Buxton when it was stuck by a van which ran a stop sign.

Keith's friend, who was driving, suffered minor scrapes and bruises. According to police, the blood alcohol content of the woman driving the van was .28, three times the legal limit.

Keith was rushed to the trauma center at Maine Medical Center in Portland, Maine. There he underwent surgery to save his life.

Dr. Thibodeau, the surgeon, told Keith's parents that the surgery was a success in that he would survive. However, the doctor said, Keith would be paralyzed from the neck down.

On July 2, Keith, accompanied by his parents, was transported by air ambulance to the Shepherd Center in Atlanta, Georgia, a facility which specializes in treating spinal cord injury.

Keith said he was not eager to leave Maine Med., "I was anxious, scared and did not know what to expect," he explained. "I had grown so close to the doctors and nurses that saved my life, it was hard for me to leave them."

At the Shepherd Center, Keith underwent a rigorous schedule of physical and occupational therapy. He also took classes to learn about his injury and how to deal with it.

Overall, he says, he has done well. The staff at Shepherd, Keith says, nicknamed him "skunk-down," because of his positive attitude and determination. Richard, a physical therapist at the Center, said Keith is one of the hardest working patients he had ever seen.

After three months of therapy, Keith regained partial movement of his upper body. This means that he can move his arms, but the muscles in his triceps, forearm and hands are immobile. His arm motion is not fluid, he said.

Keith left the Shepherd Center on October 11th and is continuing therapy at home in Buxton.

Keith's father is certain Keith will meet his goal of returning to Bryant for the spring semester.

" Keith is a fighter and always has been," says his father, Ken Anderson, who quit his career of being a paramedic to be Keith's primary caretaker.

When he returns to Bryant, Keith says, he knows it won't be totally business. The support from family and friends has helped him achieve as much as I have," says Keith.

A fund has been established to help Keith and his family deal with the expenses of continued therapy, his care taking, and the remodeling of his home to fit his needs. Donations can be sent to:

Two top weapons inspectors told United Nations Security Council on Monday that a draft U.S. resolution on confronting Iraq would allow a strong disapproval of inspectors, although they said some points need to be clarified.

The briefing from Hans Blix and Mohamed el Baradei seemed to bolster efforts to push the U.S. resolution through the divided 15-nation council. It is expected to be a final week of intense negotiations. Several diplomats on the council had said they would weigh the inspectors' views in deciding how to vote.

After the meeting, U.S. and British co-sponsors of the draft resolution seemed full of renewed enthusiasm. Though the pace of further U.N. negotiations remains uncertain after six days of talks, U.S. officials said they hope for a vote later this week.

Politicians Remember Welleston; Speculation Focuses on Mondaoui as Successor

By John McCorzack
Chicago Tribune, courtesy of Angel Ridder Newspapers

Mourned Sen. Paul Welleston, the Senate seat amid the political chaos triggered by his death 11 days before the election.

Speculation continues to focus on Vice President Walter Mondau, 74, who the state's party chairman said is the choice of the Welleston family.

Mondau has remained out of the public spotlight since Friday, but party insiders encouraged greater cooperation from him, both stressed that they did not want to be put in the position of excusing a ship's crossing the line of noncompliance.

"We will report objectively on the facts for the council to determine" is how Blix put it.

"For those who want a strong resolution, this reaffirms our belief," Valdiesco said.

Blix and ElBaradei told reporters that if the Security Council is divided behind a final resolution, that would give them greater chances of success.

The two inspectors stressed, both of us, that just as important as clarity in the text and certainty in the mandate is the readiness of the council to uphold the resolution and the prerogatives of the inspectors, that there be no sort of fatigue in the mandate and that the council's authority will go down," Blix said.

The inspectors also added that the threat of consequences for Iraq obstruction was likely to discourage further U.S. negotiations in a resolution, the more chance we are going to have more of those kind of blowups, Mr. Blix said today, but we're not there yet.

Survivors of Moscow Siege Tell Their Stories

By Mark McDonald
Knight Ridder Newspapers

The haggard survivors, the luckiest of the hostiles and refugees from Moscow's hospitals with their stories harrowing tales of blood and "black widow" guns and prayers and even laughing.

Their accounts reveal what actually happened last week in the biggest massacre in Minskovka Street when a gang of Chechen rebels stormed the hotel and killed it for hours. Their stories also answer distinctive questions about the devastating gas attack that freed some 600 hostages but also killed 166. The siege began at 9 p.m. (11:10 EDT) on the second act of the musical "Nord-Ost." The hotel was a Nord-Ost about 800. The 36 men dressed in camouflage; the 18 women with their weapons in black; and most with explosives stripped to their chests.

Later, some of the Chechen women said they were the ones who fired first at the fighters black widows. Sergei Ignat'chenko, spokesman for the Federal Security Service, said the gas and the road began when troops heard that they had began excising people.

According to all hostage accounts, this did not happen. When the gas started, "The road was already hailed as a success, but the reality was that it was revealed that the death toll 17 hostages 116 of them due to the gas.

Halo-juhaj! AngelsWin World Series

By Bob Brokaw
Knight Ridder Newspapers

Somewhere in heaven, an Angel in a cowboy hat was singing Sunday night.

Perhaps Gene Autry, the late owner of the Anaheim Angels, even got together with Queen's Freddie Mercury and belted out that hit song to sing during his days on Earth.

"You know the Champions! That's what the Anaheim Angels are for the first time since Autry made the team an expansion reality in 1961. After losing a remarkable rally in Game 6 on Saturday night, the Angels received brilliant work from a trio of rookie pitchers and a three-run double from Garrett Anderson in Game 7 on Sunday night to claim the World Series with a 4-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

"The Angels are the Champions!"

The Giants, who 24 hours earlier had watched a 4-0 lead disappear, remained winless in three trips to the World Series since moving to San Francisco in 1958.

Brian Giles, whose two-run double in the ninth night before had completed the Angels' rally, was named the World Series MVP.

Barry Bonds, despite putting together one of the greatest postseason and World Series performances in history, still does not have a World Series ring. Bonds, 38, has been to the playoffs six times.

Bonds, who went 1 for 3 in Sunday night, batted .156 in 17 postseason games, and set a postseason record with 27 home runs.

The Angels walk 11 intentional and eight home runs in the World Series, he batted 47 with four home runs and 14 RBIs.

He set a record with 13 walks seven intentional and posted an incredible .700 on-base percent.

The Economics of Having a Girlfriend: Birthday Presents Part 3

By Tom Fischetti

As promised in last issue's column, this week we will conclude our discussion of the potential loss minimization equation.

Through our understanding of the equation applied by the Seminester Beverage Fund, we can see that the value of money spent on presents for others decreases as the amount of presents received by the recipient increases.

The second component employed in the equation is the equation's sensitivity to changes in the amount of money spent. For every $1 increase in the amount of money spent, the value of the present decreases by $0.50.

The first apparent similarity between the equations used by each gender manifests itself as the percent of funds allocated towards the purchase of presents.

Although discrepancies in the Seminester Beverage Fund and the Seminester Shopping Fund will distort this part of the outline, let us assume that the social classes of each member of the relationship are relatively similar.

The lack of trust and respect that students receive on this campus is disheartening to many. However, as everyone has been told by DPS that we are not allowed to socialize in the gator rooms of the new townhouses late in the evening, despite the fact that we have every right to be there as students, and the fact that we are not in possession of alcohol. If I wanted constant supervision, or if I wanted to get yelled at, I would have stayed at home and lived with my parents.

Colleges need to have rules and policies, but lately I have felt that things are being taken too far. We are being thrown back in time, and it is extremely frustrating to not have the ability to offer trips for students.

My view is that all students should have equal access to student trips, and that the only reason trips are being taken at all is because the university wants to keep students interested in attending.

For me, this seems not only extreme, but also completely unfair. How can the school tell me that I am not a student because I cannot afford to go on trips? It is neither prison nor re-lab. And the more fact that this is even being considered is ridiculous.

The Economics of Being a Girlfriend

By Alicie Kurtz, Melissa Hermans, Mary Kelley, Samanta Radak, and the girls of A-Block

Like most of the female population here at Bryant, we have been reading the articles submitted to The Archway about "The Economics of Having a Girlfriend." And like everyone else, we too get a little chucked out of it. But in speaking to the author, and other males involved in relationships on this campus, we came to realize that it's supposed to in part be based on truth.

Keeping this in mind, we decided that perhaps the boyfriends out there who are turning to Mr. Fischetti for help in shopping for their girlfriend, may want to consider: some other on awariables that be should be added into the equation.

We feel that perhaps the men out there should be made aware of: "The

The Economics of Being a Girlfriend. This article is aimed at proving that whatever the monetary value that is eventually concluded by using whatever equation Mr. Fischetti is going to reveal, it will pale in comparison to the number we plan on revealing.

So first things first: The Economics of Being a Girlfriend. It may seem like a strange concept at first, but think about it, its true, and as the other article points out, guys have to shell out some cash on major holidays and birthdays.

But what isn't pointed out, is that girls too shell out for said occasions. Differences being: 1) We do it because we want to, not because we have to; 2) We don't complain and write怨言s about it; 3) We don't need a mathematical equation to figure out the financially responsible amount to spend.

We buy presents that come from our hearts and they know we love them. But it is beyond the gifts where the real issue lies. You see, the majority of females involved in relationships have to allocate: time, money, and effort on a daily basis, not just special occasions. These are the things we would like to open your eyes too. We have broken this down in an accounting-like fashion.

Next issue we will reveal the "Operating Costs" involved in being a girlfriend. And just one more thing for the gentlemen to think about in the mean-time: if your currently dating a girl that: 1) You have to put that much time in to figure out how much money to spend, you just don't know something she would love; 2) You are in the possibility of a random Friday night hook-up; and 3) You consider what benefits you will reap on your birthday while looking for her present, perhaps you should reevaluate whether or not this is a girl you should even be in a relationship, never mind what your planning on getting her for her birthday.

Bryant Cross Country Still Tearin' Up the Trails

By Chris Ludwiczak

Both the Men's and Women's Cross Country teams at Bryant have been running hard this season and are getting ready to compete in the NCAA Regional Championships next week.

The top seven runners from each team were determined last weekend at the conference championship meet, and will participate in the upcoming regional championship.

The men's team did exceptionally well at the Northeast-10 Championships, placing fifth out of 10 teams. This year's squad is one of the best in what has been a recent rise in the college.

The team consists of five senior, talented freshmen, four returning sophomores, and six experienced juniors. The Bulldogs are lead by senior co-captains Andrew Meffie and Nick Ward.

Coach Amy Laughlin was unsure how the team would perform this season. "We are a young team, with a good core of the men being freshman."

"Coming into the season, we didn't know what to expect," said Ward. As the season went on, it was evident that every member was able to contribute significantly to the success of the team.

"We saw how impressive the freshmen were," explained Ward, "and we sat down as a team and set goals for the remainder of the season."

Freshman Caleb Paul led the way in the conference championships last week, as he finished 19th overall, which earned him third team All-conference honors.

Paul was pleased with his time, and is looking ahead to next week's meet. The course for Regionals will be slightly different, adding distance. "It is a longer race, hopefully I'll be able to do better with the extra mile."

The Bulldogs are expected to have a good showing in the Regional Championships on November 9th. Running for Bryant in this race will be two juniors; Nick Ward and Paul Corbosiero, and five freshmen; Steve Barone, Jeff Britton, Steve Carr, Jason Mirsky, and Caleb Paul.

Corbosiero had this to say about the newest additions to the team, "I know we have a very talented team this year. A lot has to do with the freshmen class who have come in and built the team to be very competitive."

The men's team surpassed any and all expectations placed on them for the season. "I was very pleased with their performance this year," stated coach Laughlin.

"We will not be graduating any seniors. "We have a lot of potential for the coming years," stated Paul.

Four Bryant Players Named to Northeast-10 All-Conference Teams
By Chuck Sullivan
Bryant College Athletics

The Northeast-10 Conference has announced that Bryant College freshman Alex Spencer (Greenfield, Mass.) has been named the 2020 Northeast-10 Women's Tennis freshman of the year, as voted by the league's 13 head coaches.

In addition, Spencer was one of four Bryant players to be named to the league's all-conference teams. Freshman Alanna Santanello (North Providence, R.I.) and sophomore Ashleigh McLean (Providence, R.I.) were named to the league's first team in singles play, while Spencer was a second-team selection in singles.

Notre Dame is earning their way to the Bowl Championship Series rankings. By climbing to No. 4 in The Associated Press poll following Saturday's 34-24 win over Florida State, the Fighting Irish (6-0) closed the gap on Miami (AP's No. 1) to three-thirds of a point for the No. 2 spot in the BCS behind Oklahoma, which was idle last week.

Notre Dame, one of eight remaining undefeated Division I teams, could have been even closer to Miami, but the Fighting Irish lost some ground by falling to No. 2 in a few computer rankings.

Miami coach Larry Coker said he didn't exactly find himself rooting for the Seminoles last Saturday, but he did acknowledge it would have been advantageous for Miami to have the work on the formula and realize what it takes to get to where you need to be," Coker said. "But the bottom line is we need to win." The BCS formula

Alex Spencer - Second Team All Conference, first singles
Alanna Santanello - First Team All Conference, second singles
Ashleigh McLean - First Team All Conference, fifth singles

All in all, a tremendous improvement on last year's record, on track for even better year next year.

Notre Dame is gaining on Miami as the Bowl Championship Series rankings. By climbing to No. 4 in The Associated Press poll following Saturday's 34-24 win over Florida State, the Fighting Irish (6-0) closed the gap on Miami (AP's No. 1) to three-thirds of a point for the No. 2 spot in the BCS behind Oklahoma, which was idle last week.

and a bonus-point system for big wins.

Notre Dame has one of the top-rated schedules in the nation, which gives them a big advantage over UM in the BCS's strength of schedule column.
What does it all mean? The Fighting Irish, who have a 6.99 BCS rating to Miami's 6.69, are close enough that they could jump the Hurricanes in next week's BCS poll with a win over Boston College this Saturday, even if Miami beats Rutgers.

Fortunately for the Hurricanes, Notre Dame has a remaining schedule, which features a game against Rutgers (9-7) and Navy (1-7), the weakest of the eight remaining undefeated teams, and that should be enough to allow the Fighting Irish to slide in the BCS until they visit Southern California in the season finale on Nov. 30. Coker doesn't seem too concerned that there are so many undefeated programs and believes the system will work itself out.

"We know as it all transpire those losses come in," he said. "The last two years we've only had one undefeated team at the end of the year, and I think it's going to be very tough for a lot of us to do that."
Archway Profile: Dean Elizabeth Powers

Position at Bryant: Assistant Dean of Undergraduate Studies & Director of Undergraduate Programs

What is your biggest challenge?

"Dealing with my shyness. It has been a challenge for as long as I can remember."

If you were not at Bryant where would you be, or what would you like to do?

"I am an educator at heart. I would be teaching. I would prefer to be some place warm and sunny on the Pacific Coast."

Do you have any advice for Bryant students?

"Take education seriously! Education changes lives, is more than a job line. Education has changed my life and it will change yours too."

Do you have any involvement with organizations or interests outside of Bryant?

"I have a passion for orchestral music, especially the Boston Pops Orchestra. Symphony Hall is one of my favorite places to be. I also enjoy cooking and baking, especially making gourmet cookies. For me, cooking is therapeutic."

What is your Greatest Strength?

"I believe my greatest strength is the philosophy I bring to my work. I believe we are all teachers and we are all learners. I approach every student situation and every administrative task with this in mind."

What is Your Most Important Life Influence?

"My family is my most important life influence. I have a husband, two daughters and a son. They have opened my world up to art, music, culture and diversity. They have taught me the true meaning of love and friendship."
