No longer a student, not just a soldier in ROTC

By Chris Hamilton

"Wars may be fought with weapons but they are won by men," explained General George Patton Jr. But war has changed a great deal since Patton’s time. Not only are brave men answering the call to serve in the United States Army, but today so are America’s sisters, daughters, mothers, and wives. Lt. Dana Scott is an example of a woman who puts her life on the line for her country.

Lt. Scott is a 2003 graduate of Bryant University and is currently deployed in Mosul, Iraq. She is the PAO (public affairs officer) for her unit after originally branching into the Chemical Corp for the army where she served her first three years. Next she transferred to the army Signal Corp that is in charge of communication for the armed forces. Lt. Scott is in the First Infantry Division also known as "The Big Red One.

While at Bryant University, Lt. Scott was not just a student but also an athlete. She played on the varsity women’s lacrosse team for her first three years until she decided to focus on ROTC in her senior year. Before leaving Bryant University to fight for America, Lt. Scott left her mark on the ROTC program and the cadets following in her footsteps.

Student-warriors John Boyle, Michael Thomas, and Robert Jacavone were sophomores when Lt. Scott graduated. Now they are seniors about to graduate and receive their commission, enrolling them into the United States Army as officers. Boyle explains how Lt. Scott has influenced him, "I was undecided as a freshman and it was Lt. Scott and Lt. Rodriguez (another Bryant University graduate) that assisted and inspired me to become the officer that I will soon be."

Thomas is a management major that transferred to Bryant University from Norwich University his sophomore year. After transferring, he applied and received a ROTC scholarship that paid for his expenses at Bryant University. Thomas will be in the army’s Aviation Branch to become a helicopter pilot. He

Battle of the Bands with Slik Willy, Zox, and State Radio

By Bethany Thornton
Editor-in-Chief

The Battle of the Bands won’t be quite the same grudge match this Spring Weekend. The event is still being called the Battle of the Bands, but this year Bryant will host three well-known bands from the local area, Slik Willy, Zox, and State Radio. The bands will play on Saturday, April 30 from 1-5 p.m. during the field events.

Adam Muccino ’07, general manager of WMBF, is in charge of putting the bands together, working with contracts, and scheduling for the day’s event. He chose these bands particularly because their music styles fit well together. When the Archway asked Muccino why the Battle of the Bands is no longer a battle he explained, "In

Universities are finding themselves in a bitter battle over bandwidth—caught between the entertainment industry and copyright and tech-savvy students trading sharing of songs and movies.

The competing interests converge at Washington University, where everything from computer science to foreign languages and psychology is given access to a campus-wide internet. Wagner, a sophomore with a focus on political science, is the main campus spokesperson for downloading movies and music. "I've got this massive library of stuff, and all my friends have it too, so it's been great," he said. "But downloading is illegal, and I pay for my bandwidth, so I feel guilty about it.

"I don't want to pay to download copyrighted music. That sounds like a thing I should just do, but I don't. I'm not sure if I want to support the entertainment industry, but I don't want to pay for something that I can't legally download." Wagner said he pays $240 a year for unlimited internet access.

Many universities are finding themselves in a similar situation, with students downloading music and movies on a regular basis. At Washington University, the problem is exacerbated by the fact that the university is located in a city with a high concentration of technology companies, such as Microsoft and Intel.

"We're in a unique position here," said Willard, the university's director of technology. "We have a lot of tech companies in town, and they're all dependent on having a skilled workforce. If we don't attract and retain top talent, they'll go to another city."

But the university is not alone in its struggle. Other universities, such as Stanford and MIT, have also grappled with the issue of student downloading.

"We've had to adapt to the changing landscape," said Willard. "We've had to find new ways to attract and retain students, and one of those ways is by offering them the latest technology."

"But we also have to be mindful of the impact of downloading on our bottom line," he added. "We're not in the business of losing money, and we have to find a way to balance the needs of our students with those of our university."

Explain's his love for the military and aviation began "When I was 17 years old. I saw a movie that was about the war and since then I've always wanted to be in the military and serve my country. No other organization in the world gives you as much responsibility as the military. On the first day they will hand me millions of dollars in equipment and put me in charge of lives. The best part of it all was that they've prepared me to handle it."

When asked how he would feel about being deployed, Thomas responded, "It's not that I want to be deployed, but I feel that I have been prepared for it. Thomas continued, "It's not about where I am, but in what area I am in charge of.”

Another student-warrior from Bryant University's senior class is Robert Jacavone. Jacavone is working to become a Second Lt. MP (military police) Officer and explain's his reason for participating as, "I joined ROTC because I believe in the things the army stands for, the tradition it upholds, and its long history, but I wasn’t sure if I wanted to be a part of it."

To continue, Jacavone explains that ROTC provides a great combination of serving his country and getting a college education simultaneously. After graduating, Jacavone will go to OBC (officer basic course) then enter into the National Guard. Jacavone will enter the 119th MP Company that has recently returned from a deployment in Iraq.

In the past, Jacavone was serving in the army, Jacavone plans to serve America as a police officer or state trooper here in Rhode Island. Jacavone realizes the army helps him in his civilian life, "I like leadership and hard work. I know that the army can teach me these things and I can use them in my civilian life."

Commissioned John Boyle will enter the army Chemical Corps as his inspiration, Lt. Scott. Boyle considers the army a career possibility but is comforted with his preparation, "ROTIC is a great opportunity which compliments business management as well as higher education. The opportunities as an army officer are unparalleled, and I can take the leadership and discipline and use it in any professional field."

Through former Bryant University graduates Lt. Scott and Rodriguez, Boyle is further attracted to ROTIC. "I joined Army ROTC because I wanted to give back to my country. For what it’s given me all my life. Also, 9.11 occurred while I was a freshman here at Bryant and that strengthened my resolve to serve."

As these brave Bryant University student-warriors for ROTIC. Soldiers like Lt. Scott and the country need you.”

Bryant hosts the 11th Annual New England Peer Tutors Association

By Emilie Lavoie
Assistant Campus News Editor

Bryant University hosted 23 different sessions for the 11th Annual New England Peer Tutoring Association on Saturday, April 16 from 8:45 a.m. until 5 p.m. in the Bello Center Grand Hall. NEPTA was created to support an extended community of peer tutors while providing them with networking opportunities for fellow tutors for their future professional development. Tutors at Bryant were responsible for planning, organizing, and carrying out all plans for the forum.

This conference was designed for tutors from different colleges and universities to work together and present their work to one another. This particular conference is part of a Regional Association for students from the 23 associated schools. It is here, at the Regional conference, that tutor to tutor interaction is the most important. The National conference is designed more for conference directors and coordinators to attend and share their work for conference preparation assistance, as opposed to tutoring advancement.

In order to participate in this forum, student tutors must have achieved a Level 1 certification in the College Reading and Learning Association (CRLA).

Junior peer tutor and conference planning committee leader, Mikayla Truckey, giving her remarks at the closing ceremony.

The organization's goal is to enhance and develop peer tutors and programs. There are three levels of achievement in the CRLA: Level 1-Basic, Level 2-Advanced, and Level 3-Masters. Before this conference, Bryant's peer tutors and writing consultants qualified for Level 1 certification. Advanced to Level 2 requires a minimum of ten hours of tutor training and two hours of actual tutoring. Both ACE and the Writing Center require tutors to attend a conference throughout the year to maintain a Level 2 qualification. Attending this NEPTA forum is what advanced Bryant tutors to the Advanced level.

This gathering was new not only Bryant, but also NEPTA, as it is the first student planned conference in a pamphlet prepared by the conference planning committee, consisting of Melissa Kociszkici, Mikayla Truckey, Benjamin Legere, and Samantha Carroll, each session and workshop is explained in detail. Among the three sessions were 17 different workshops such as Conference Planning 1, 2, and 3. This workshop, presented by four members of the committee, was designed to encourage students to get involved and provide students with mini planning sessions. An electronic copy of the materials was presented for all in attendance.

Academic Fear Factor, another session, was designed to identify academic fears that students may have and deal with how to assist students in overcoming these fears.

Another first, the Keynote Speaker for the conference was Jennifer Sahady, a senior at Bryant. She works as a writing consultant at Bryant and is the first student Keynote speaker at such a conference. Before Sahady's keynote speech, there were opening remarks with contributions from Laurie Hazard, Director of ACE and the Writing Center, Jo Berger, Assistant Director of ACE and The Writing Center, and David Lux, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. The closing remarks were delivered by Writing Center Consultant, Bryant Senior, Bryan Sergeant.

According to Conference Manager, Mikayla Truckey, the conference was overall a great success, after being nervous when it began, but everything began and continued to go smoothly. NEPTA conferences plan to continue to spread the word about peer tutoring successfully through these annual conferences. Conference planning will be held at Providence College.

Students volunteer in Washington D.C.

over Spring Break

By Symphonne Willoughby
Staff Writer

While many students go off and spend a week in Cancun, partying on a cruise, or drinking with friends in Florida, six students and four staff members from Bryant spent their Spring Break in Washington, D.C. doing volunteer work. Waking at 8:00 AM and working until the late afternoon, the group helped feed hundreds of people through an organization called Food and Friends and also helped make the lives of many elderly men and women a little brighter at the Little Sisters of the Poor Home. These are the words of the six students that took the opportunity to serve through the alternative Spring Break program.

"The alternative spring break trip was only an eye opening experience. Not only did I get to meet and build relationships with people outside of the Bryant community, but I was able to build bonds with fellow students and faculty that I see everyday, but whom I would not have otherwise met."CAT

Caitlin Sullivan, 07

"I met a 101 year old woman named Haiti who taught me so much about life. For her life was as full of life, it really gives me hope for the future, knowing that not all people grow up and slowly break off from society." Dan Raposo, 06

"The trip gave me the chance to do something different with my time and actually made a difference in D.C. helped feed hundreds of people and added some smiles to the faces at Little Sister's of the Poor."

Lea Parente, 08

"From the conversations held with people, to the bonds formed with the other group members and people we met, this will be one of the most influential vacations I've ever taken. You finish with so much respect for all you have, whether it be rags or riches, and you appreciate everyone around you. To truly live life and not take your blessings for granted, it's important for everyone to volunteer somewhere, either locally or on a larger scale. Only then, will you find the essence of how you live on all levels.

Symphonne Willoughby, 08

"What you gain from volunteering in worth more than a few drinks, a tan, and a few endearing photos of you flashing some central piece of your body on the beach. You live, you learn, and you gain a new whole perspective on life. I'm glad I went on this trip, and I'll continue doing it for the years to come, and if anyone's interested next year when you get the advertisement for alternative spring break, instead of throwing it away or skimming over it: stop, read it, and sign up. You'll be amazed at the feelings you obtain when you think of what you can do for others, instead of what others can do for you."

Ms. Bryant Crowned

On Friday, April 15, 2005, Greek Life with the assistance of the Student Programming Board (SPB) sponsored the first ever Ms. Bryant competition in the Janikles Auditorium. The winner of the first Ms. Bryant competition was Alicia Robbins. SPB annually holds the Mr. Bryant competition which exploits fifteen of Bryant’s male, nominated by the Bryant community. AnthoIy Furnari, president of the ISE, decided the main event for Greek Week was to be the Ms. Bryant competition followed by a carnival. Furnari stated, “Ms. Bryant came about because we know how the Mr. Bryant show is such a big hit and Greek Life wanted to do something similar. Plus the Greek Life Board wanted an event to bring all organizations similar to the Mr. Bryant competition, the contestants had several segments they would participate in. The segments consisted of casual wear, formal wear, a question and answer session and every ones favorite, the talent portion. Some of the talents included lyrical dancing by Panetta and Thurber, a poetry reading by Krakue, and a song and piano number by Hayes. There were five judges for the competition. Those judges included Kathryn Corey, Mike Thomas, Mike DiPietro, David Vara, Schools, and Amy Neiven, who was a random audience member chosen to judge. One Phipps really enjoyed being a judge for the competition. When asked how he felt he stated, “It was a very tough decision. All the judges truly believed that all the women were overly qualified to be Ms. Bryant. Congratulations go out to Alicia for being our first Ms. Bryant and to Nino and the Greek Leadership Council for putting on such an entertaining event.”

Mike Thorp was one of the only non-students to help with bringing the event to life. When asked about his judging experience, he stated, “Judging the competition was not an easy task. The talent portion of the competition was impressive and the women all really did a good job throughout the event.” Mike went onto talk about the hard work and planning saying, “This was a great first time event for Greek Life. The months of work they put into it and the time and effort really paid off. It was a nice ending to Greek Week.”

After the formal wear segment, the Final 6 were announced by the two Emcees, Kellee Gruci and John Cullen. The Final 6 were quickly made the Final 3 consisting of Thais Schullman in 3rd place, Ashley Lenz in 2nd place, and Alicia Robbins took home the crown for the first ever Ms. Bryant competition.

Daley's Weekly: Hockey playoffs, the AHL alternative

By Ryan Daley
Staff Columnist

There may be no NHL this season, but that does not stop many Bryant students from enjoying intense playoff hockey. The American Hockey League (AHL) playoffs offer an inexpensive, exciting alternative to the National Hockey League (NHL). Bryant sophomores, Nick Rodrigues, a very passionate fan who has only missed 10 Providence Bruins home games in the last five years, is excited about what is in store for the P-Bruins. Rodrigues explains, "Playing hockey is unmatched by anything. The guys get to play and the same team seven times in the first round and I already know the other guys they don’t like. They don’t want to be penalized for stupid fights, so the intensity is amplified when you see open ice and full-on body checks into the boards."

With the regular season over, the Providence Bruins advance to the best-of-seven Atlantic Division Semi-finals series against the Manchester Monarchs. The Monarchs are ahead in the division with a record of 51-21-4-4 for the regular season, while the P-Bruins finished with a record of 40-30-3-7.

In the AHL, the top four in each division advance to the playoffs. The top seed plays the teams in last, and the two middle teams play each other. The winners advance to division championships, and then to the championships. The winners of the championship then advance to the national Calder Cup champions. The Providence Bruins lost their Calder cup in 1999 when Jay Henderson was still on the team.

Henderson has much Calder Cup experience with many different teams, and can be counted on for great performances and to rally the team when necessary in the upcoming games. Other names to watch during the playoffs are young players such as Patrice Bergeron and Milan Lucic, who would be NHL regulars had there not been a lockout, as well as other stars Brad Boyes and Andy Hilbert. Another player to watch is 30-year-old Brendan Walsh, from Dorchester, MA. Walsh is listed at 5’10”, but that’s a stretch," jokes Nick Rodrigues, "and nobody told him he was short. I’ve seen him knock guys down with one punch, and take on players almost a foot taller than him and 50 pounds heavier.”

This season, there is a lockout in the NHL because players and owners could not reach an agreement over the issue of a salary-cap. "This is a sad, regrettable day that all of us wish could have been avoided," comments NHL commissioner Gary Bettman, as he officially declared the lockout on February 16, 2005; it’s the first time in North America that a sports league lost an entire season because of a labor dispute. "Bryant senior, Mike Pezzullo, expressed his concern about the lockout; “I’ve always been a huge hockey fan. I just hope that next year the players and owners can work something out that is in each of their interests. I love going to AHL games, but nothing compares to the NHL.”

The lockout forces many hockey fans to focus on the AHL and forces the players to try harder to make a name for themselves. Nick Rodrigues explains, "30 games is what it takes just to compete in the playoffs, and when the Calder Cup in sight, they grind through the playoffs with determination. When things are clicking and the team is playing well, it makes the game more enjoyable because during the playoffs, emotions are heightened, adrenaline is rushing, and miraculous things can happen.”

March 11, 2005 the Bruins faced the Portland Pirates; currently the Bruins have a 40 win, 30 loss record this season.

Even for non-hockey fans, hockey is an interesting sport even more exciting during the playoffs. Providence Bruins home games this week are Monday, April 25 and Tuesday, April 26 at 7:05 and are only a short ride from campus. Tickets start at just $17 and can be purchased from www.providencebruins.com or www.cardeycup.com.

David Falucci opened the two-day tournament with a round of 65, setting not only a new course record but setting a new all-time school low for a single round in Bryant history. Bryant's score of 283 on day 1 also marked the lowest one-day total in the history of Bryant golf under coach Archie Boulet who's now in his 41st year coaching the Bulldogs. Bryant wouldn't let up on the second day, winning the overall tournament five strokes ahead of second-place St. Thomas Aquinas College 583. Dave Falucci carded a 69 on Sunday, topping off the round by sinking a 50-foot eagle putt on the final hole. The shot gave him a two-day score of 134, breaking the school record of 135 for a two-day total held by All-American Gary Young, Brendan Smith. The Hangover: Random thoughts for mid-April

I'm man enough to admit that I had a lapse of judgment a few weeks ago in the Mr. Bryant controversy. I wouldn't dare do anything that I tried to do stand up comedy. If you weren't there, let's just say that there was no movie at the Pope's funeral.

My failed comedy moment quickly hopped to number one on the list of my most embarrassing college moments, just ahead of missing the kickoff of an Air Force game where I thought I should stand up comedy. The Taco Bell fiancé came to a head when I was in the Bello 20% of the prorated balance for the disco. It was a simple matter when I was in the Bell.

There are no printed at the discretion of the publisher. The best compliment I received this past week was "I used to read that book when I was younger. I don't like to buy one anymore."

You've been a great audience; I have to go now to see if I can stalk my tickets for Less than Jake. I'm bad at reading.

So a little back. I was putting away the local CVS killing some time, there really aren't so many things to occupy yourself with in stores like this. I move to the shopping aisle. One of these make me look any better, (you're not supposed to hide eyes like mine...right?). I pause for a moment to play with cards, and realize that none of me is ever a true one ever a true me. I am more interesting. They make me chuckle and wish that I could be 80 for a day so everyone can give me these cards. The other half of me sees the Transformer and He-Man cards. They don't say much because they are section by section. Birthday cards! Sweet! These are always funny. Part of me likes them. Don't answer that to that point out that growing older means losing memory, wearing dumpy clothes, losing my looks, and repeating yourself. They make me chuckle and wish that I could be 80 for a day so everyone can give me these cards. Then the other half of me sees the Transformer and He-Man cards. They don't say much because they are those who like such cards can't really read too well. But I like them, what does that say about me? September and November. If I get them now I'll have plenty of time to spare, and plenty of time to lose of this section. I also grab three. One has a dog on the front with big google eyes. He's the romance section. Great choice Bryan! The other two are somewhat crude jokes about sex or lack thereof.

Then I recall a card once given to me by my older sister. It read, "Forget about the past because it's over. Forget about the present...I didn't get you one." Funny, but unfortunately true. All these cards are probably returned to the shelf.

Cool, Bar Mittzvah cards. Too bad I haven't seen any of these. A few old Jewish kids. I also pass over the Passover cards (Get it? Hahana). I also pass over Patrick's 13th birthday card, but later (much later) realize that St. Patty's was like 3 weeks ago. I return those cards to the shelf as all my Irish ancestors are still with me. What is there a New Years card? Are we supposed to have either really early or really late. Either way, fire whoever is in charge of these cards.

All of a sudden I am overwhelmed with pink and red. It's Valentine's Day.

Simon Says: Let's be careful out there

April is Sexual Assault Awareness Month. I guess I’m not a fan of “awareness months” because I think that most of the issues we pay attention to during these months are hopefully being addressed throughout the year. On our campus we often acknowledge various awareness weeks and months but there are a variety of groups, organizations, and departments who focus considerable energy throughout the year on the issues often given awareness weeks/months—i.e. alcohol, eating disorders, and depression.

Clearly this is the case for sexual assault. Bryant’s Peer Educators do a moving performance several times a year entitled “Drawing the Shade” in which the complexities of sexual violence are addressed through an artistic piece. In my opinion there are other opportunities to talk dating violence and sexual assault through other programs and offices. And these programs get started in the fall and generally continue throughout the year.

However, that being said, and this is really because Sexual Assault Awareness Month. I’d like to use this column to talk about sexual assault. There are numerous studies that cite the incidence and prevalence of sexual assault. It’s estimated that one in four women and one in six men will be victims of sexual abuse during their lifetime.

This means that for some women and men who arrive on the Bryant campus, they already have experienced some form of sexual abuse or assault. Whatever the case may be, there is a need to talk to large or small groups of students about sexual assault and date rape, always ask the group if they know someone who has been sexually assaulted. Usually three quarters of the people in the room raise their hands.

It is important to know how to respond to someone who tells you he/she has been sexually assaulted because you may be the first person they are telling. It’s also important because your response will either help the person to heal and hopefully seek counseling or, may hinder the person’s ability to get help. Because the incidence of sexual assault is far too common in our culture, it’s worth the space in this column to talk about the best way to respond to a disclosure.

The best thing you can do is listen. Just listen. When someone tells you he/she has been sexually assaulted, because you may be the first person they are telling. It’s also important because your response will either help the person to heal and hopefully seek counseling or, may hinder the person’s ability to get help. Because the incidence of sexual assault is far too common in our culture, it’s worth the space in this column to talk about the best way to respond to a disclosure.

And that’s often what sexual assault comes down to. Someone who has been sexually assaulted has had that highly personal and intimate decision taken away from them. In addition, they may have lost all sense of control over their own body and their decisions. As people move from being a victim to becoming a survivor of sexual assault, they often work on the issues of how to regain a sense of self as well as power and control in their lives.

The other piece of information that’s worth mentioning is that we know that women and men who get professional help after a sexual assault do much better than those people who think they can manage this crisis on their own. So gently encouraging your friend to seek help could be important. This is often very difficult for victims and there are a variety of reasons that people are afraid to seek help. But ultimately this is what will help people begin to heal and move forward.

Bryant has resources to help people who are dealing with a prior or recent sexual assault. In addition to the Peer Educators, there are professional staff at the Counseling Center, Health Services, Health Education and the Women’s Center who are available to meet with students and if necessary make referrals to appropriate offices. And if you are concerned about a friend who has told you he/she was sexually assaulted, know that you can come see any of the staff in the above mentioned offices.

As we head into Spring Weekend, I hope that everyone has a terrific time, I hope the weather is great, the comedians and bands entertaining, and it will be a weekend to remember. I hope everyone is treated with respect and dignity and that we won’t contribute to national sexual assault statistics. Simply put and to quote a great police drama from years ago “Let’s roll and let’s be careful out there.”

that we now know and that we want to help with.

To Whom it May Concern:

Recently vandalism occurred to vehicles parked on campus. One of the vehicles belonged to my family and was being used by my daughter, a Junior at Bryant.

A moment of recklessness “fun” for a few disrespectful students leaves hours and weeks of financial and personal loss to the victims.

My husband is a hard working firefighter who never in his life was able to own a new vehicle. Three years ago he bought a bare bones (no fuel, no power windows) vehicle. He was proud owner and took very good care of his purchase. A few months later, my daughter accepted to Bryant and needed safe transportation. My husband gave her his pride and joy to use. I have not yet had the heart to tell him, but he will have to know soon enough. The scars on the vehicle won’t match the scar that is left in my heart every time I have to face with him.

Over the weekend this vehicle sustained over $500 worth of vandalism. It was not the only vehicle that was damaged, and I’m sure there are more families that are looking to repair the damage done by the thoughtless acts of a few.

When you (whoever you are that did this) graduate from Bryant with a great education, and get your first job and your first new car I hope you recall the memory of that evening at Bryant when you had so much fun damaging the vehicles of people who had to work a second job to be able to buy your new car. I hope you’ll have to to attain your cars and think how you would feel if it happens to your shiny new car.

The right, ethical and moral thing to do would be to move forward and take responsibility for your actions. Also to any who saw this happen, let DPS know the culprit or culprits.

Sincerely,
A Bryant Parent

Cards, cards everywhere

(All together now: Awwwwww.) Admittedly, some are cute and I’m tempted to make a purchase, but then I move down the rack. The tabs that signify what each card is about are very helpful because no man wants to read all these long cards to figure out if it is what he wants. The tabs start out cute and simple.

“Love,” “Missing you with all of me,” “You’ll always be the one” are all very sweet. But then it gets a little sissy. Cards under the heading “I care about you despite our arguments” and “I know we argue, but I still care” seem a tad bit depressing. (And I swear I’m not making these titles up) I decide to read one or two. Allow me to paraphrase what I read.

“Dear honey, Yes, I’m a jerk, but you pick me off. I am also very lazy and unwilling to change. I could tell you how I actually feel but then you’d yell at me. I am hoping these cute words written by someone who doesn’t even know me enough to take the place of my own words. So instead, write something on my own but as you probably already know I am hard to figure. Find me a letter out of the dog house or if I should come across a place where I’m stuck with me, see you tomorrow.”

Where would we be without cards to say what we don’t mean or just can’t say ourselves? Finally, I think that I don’t actually need a card. So just like that I’m gone.

Students Speak

“See, and hear about it all the time, though it has personally never happened to me. I woke up this morning to physical plant putting in a new window on the fourth floor.”

Austin Rice ’06

“She sucks that innocent people get charged for vandalism that drunk people commit.”

Matt Dova ’07

“I see vandalism in the halls all the time. There are always broken windows, broken downs or something.”

Kendall Lensing ’07

“Overall I think vandalism is an issue on campus, but not as big as a problem as the inability of DPS to properly handle the cases themselves.”

Laura Vaudrain ’05

“I second Laura’s notion. I would further like to find that we actually keep placing dents in my doors in C-4.”

Survivor: Realizing the reality of cancer, one story at a time

By Andrew Bagaglia
Staff Writer

My name is Andrew Bagaglia. I am a junior (Class of 2006) CIS major. I am a member of the Commuter Connection, where I am the president, and WMMF, as the music director. I am involved with Relay for Life by being a Team Captain for Commuter Connection. Here is my story.

Webster's dictionary defines cancer as "an invasive tumor of pathological malignant growth that expands locally by invasion and sometimes by metastasis." The American Cancer Society is dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives, and diminishing suffering from cancer. I'm proud to be a supporter of Relay for Life, an 18 hour event in the near back yard at Bryant this year.

My reason for being a part of Relay for Life is that I have had relatives who have had cancer, two have died, and one has survived. Most recently, my uncle passed away this past month from metastatic melanoma, which is an extremely aggressive brain tumor. My aunt passed away right before Memorial Day in 2003 from lung cancer, and on a more positive note, my grandfather recently has overcome cancer. All of these people had one thing in common: smoking. We will not, however, dwell on that, as I'm sure that many of you know the dangers of smoking.

My uncle was diagnosed with a melanoma in May of 2003, the same month that my aunt died. Shortly after he was diagnosed, he had surgery, where the surgeon was able to remove all of the tumor, but because it was so aggressive, even radiation could not destroy the remainder, and he was given a year to live. He completely surprised all expectations, and our family was able to be with him for an extra 8 months. During those 8 months, we saw an extreme downturn in his gradual deterioration, to the point where he was unable to talk, unable to use motor functions (such as being able to feed himself and use his hands), and eventually his respirator system failed on his death night. My family has seen firsthand how extremely soon it can be. Day after day, over that agonizing time, we watched him succumb to cancer.

The other two people in my family that have experienced cancer are my aunt and my grandfather. Unfortunately, I was not able to be close to them during their struggles because of the distance between our homes. My aunt had lung cancer that spread very quickly, and after a remarkable battle, she succumbed to cancer shortly before Memorial Day in 2003. My family and I were able to be there to comfort our family in Michigan, but it was not the same as being there for a visit. My grandfather had jaw cancer, and was diagnosed a little over a month ago. Unfortunately, he has, he has survived it and has now been cancer free for over a month. He is doing well now and has just been taken to hospital to be helped to get back to normal.

One similarity with both my uncle and aunt was that they were helped and cared for by hospice. Hospice sends nurses to stay with patients at their homes. My uncle received care from hospice beginning in March of 2003 and ending with his death last January. My aunt received care at home for many months before her death. Hospice is a godsend to be able to care for these patients, as I was able to witness firsthand the type of care they provide for patients.

Cancer is truly a deadly disease, and now I have seen how quickly it can be. Why argue? Even if you don't know quite how you'll do it, yet, be brave. Step up to the plate, intending to hit a home run.

A Thai restaurant owner in Peru, Florida, set off 36 cockroach fogging devices inside his restaurant to turn off the pilot light. The chemicals came in contact with the fog, the massive explosion that resulted actually lifted the roof off the place.

HEY, MONEY IS MONEY, AM I RIGHT?

A man tried to bail his brother-in-law out of jail in Greenmiss, Ind., finding cash that reeked of marijuana. The police, who had no idea what to do with these things, noticed. They searched the house, found his car and locked him up for possession of weed.

Someone else came down and told the police about the weed law, who came back later and hauled marijuana away.

HEALTHY PLEASURE DERIVED FROM FRESH FRUIT IS IMMENSELY EXPENSIVE.

When considering the amount of fruit that you consume each day, you may begin to wonder exactly how much you are spending on a fruit. Here are some tips to help you save money on fruit.

1. BUY IN SEASON: Fruits are cheapest when they are in season because they are more abundant and therefore do not have to be transported as far to reach the market. This means you can enjoy fresh fruit while it is at its peak, which will make your fruit taste better and be more nutritious.

2. BUY BULK: Buying fruit in bulk is usually cheaper than buying it separately. This is especially true if you are buying a variety of smaller fruits like berries or grapes.

3. BUY LOCAL: Buying local fruits means you are buying fruit that is grown closer to home, which reduces transportation costs. It also means you are supporting local farmers, who often use more sustainable and environmentally friendly practices.

4. BUY IMPERFECT: Imperfect fruits are often cheaper than perfect ones. This is because imperfect fruits may be rejected by grocery stores, which means they may end up in the produce department at a discount price.

5. STORE PROPERLY: Fruits need to be stored properly in order to stay fresh for as long as possible. Be sure to read the packaging instructions, which will tell you how to store the fruit to keep it fresh.

By following these tips, you can save money on fruit while still enjoying a healthy, nutritious diet. Remember, eating fresh fruit is not only good for you, but it can also be a fun and delicious way to incorporate more fruits into your diet.

The students from the Florida A&M-University-Florida State University College of Engineering were finishing a skyscraper they’ve spent hundreds of hours working from concept to reality. And they’re not done yet. They’re still working on the stairs, which they hope to complete soon.

The project, funded by the Student Programming Board, is a part of a competition organized by the American Society of Civil Engineers. The goal is to build a model of a skyscraper that can withstand an earthquake. The students have been working on their model for several months, and they’re hoping to win the competition.

The building consists of a wooden frame covered in plastic sheeting. The students have been taking care to ensure that the building is strong enough to withstand the force of an earthquake. They’ve been using a variety of materials, including plastic and wood, to ensure that the building is stable.

The competition is judged on a variety of factors, including the design of the building and its ability to withstand an earthquake. The students have been working hard to ensure that their building is as strong as possible.

The competition will take place in May, and the students are hoping to win the prize for their efforts. They’re working hard to ensure that their building is as strong as possible, and they’re hoping to win the competition.

The building is currently under construction, and the students are working hard to ensure that it is as strong as possible. They’re hoping to win the competition and prove that their building is capable of withstanding an earthquake.

Bryant Ultimate hucks it deep

"Have you ever laid out for a floating hammer?" If not, then you haven't played Frisbee at its most competitive level. As recommended by Salaman's table tents, Frisbee ranked among Yoga, Running, Initiation, and Vegetarianism as a means of improving your lifestyle. Often the most disagreed club sports on campus, Ultimate Frisbee, is gaining momentum as one of the fastest growing sports among college students.

Three teams of seven play on a 70x40 yard field, with 25-yard deep end zones. The player with the disc is allowed to move, and is given 10 seconds ("straits") to toss the disc to a teammate. The sport stresses good sportsmanship, having fun, and playing fair. It also calls for teams to self-officiate, where faults are called by anyone on the field and can be contested, in which the disc goes back to the thrower.

The Ultimate Players Association (UPA), the major nationally recognized ultimate organization, recognizes college, club, and high school teams. As of Tuesday, April 19, Bryant's ranking is 368 nationally on the UPA website (www.upa.org).

Bryant's Frisbee team began in 1976 known as the Bryant Messengers but became the Bryant Hammerheads in 1994. After returning to their original name in 1998, the team dropped the title again to become Bryant Ultimate. At the start of the 2004 season, headed by senior Bryan Sergeant, a plethora of freshmen signed up, allowing the team to play more tournaments and have more successful practices than previous years.

Bryant's Ultimate team has progressed significantly in recent years; their last win in particular has evolved tremendously since beginning of the year. Coach and actuaria! math professor, Dr. Jim Bishop has been with the team eight years and has never seen a more successful year of ultimate at Bryant. Current team president, Mike 'Crazy' O'Gara said after this past weekend's tournament, "Our team shows great promise. Over the next few years we expect to advance significantly in the national rankings since the team is comprised mainly of sophomores and freshmen.

For the first time in over a decade, the team went to the UPA sectional tournament at URI on April 16 and 17. Although they came out of the tournament 2-4, former Vice President, Alex Laccetti, '05 recognized that "we played some of the best ultimate I've seen in the last four years. I've been on the team." The winners of this past weekend's UPA tournament receive an invitation to the regional tournament during May.

Bryant golfers go for gold

By Stavros Andreopulos

In the sports world, the word "break" is usually synonymous with bad news or injury. Well, then Dave Falcucci must be an extreme optimist. The senior captain broke plenty of records yesterday, paving the road for the Bryant University Golf team to secure the Le Moyne College Springtime Invitational tournament title.

Falcucci broke the course record as well as the Bryant school record held by former All-American Gary Young on route to his first place finish. Winning by four strokes, Falcucci shot a 10-under 134 in Marcellus, NY.

"I don't think I've ever been 10 under for two rounds," admitted Falcucci. "I hit it awesome the first day and [Sunday] I just did what I needed to do [to win]. Mentally, it's the most focused I've ever been, it was a great weekend.

Not to be outdone was fellow Den Falcucci, also a captain, who dazzled everyone with his hole-in-one on the 150-yard third hole. Dan finished tied for eighth overall (149). Other Bryant notables were Brendan Smith (tied for fifth, 145), Jim O'Connell (9th, 150) and Mike Phillips (tied for 11th, 151). While the team enjoys their latest victory, they know the road only gets harder now.

"We have regions in two weeks, so we are hoping to win that and make it to nationals," Dave Falcucci stressed. However, blocking the road at nationals is rival St. Thomas Aquinas who has proven to be a worthy opponent for the Bulldogs in recent history. Added Falcucci, "St. Thomas Aquinas has been tough competition, so we just need to play good at regions and go from there."

On the personal level, the graduating senior plans to link the hits and work on his game. "I'm going to try and play as much amateur golf as I can in the summer and then go from there," said Falcucci. He also hasn't ruled out competing in nationwide or international qualifiers down the road. "Not right yet, maybe down the road, but right now [I'm] just trying to take it slowly with golf and see where it goes from there. So, who knows where I'll be 3 or 4 years down the line." Hopefully for Dave, his life will still be "breaking" records.

The team also participated in tournaments during the first two weekends of March, on April 2 and 3 at URI, and on April 9 and 10, at the Lenny Fresh Springtime Invitational in Warren. With a record of 2-6 in Warren, Bryant had wins against Yale and Wentworth, and losses against Bridgewater, Colby, and Holy Cross.

"HUCK IT DEEP... then wait for friends."

-Bryant Ultimate motto

Current Vice President, Tony Goretti remarked, "They may have beaten us, but we had a fun time, and when you go out on the field, knowing there are six of your friends having just as much fun as you are, it makes it all worth it.

Senior Alex Lacasse looks upfield to make a pass while sophomore Mike "Crazy" O'Gara runs toward the endzone.

Bryan won against Wesleyan but lost to Connecticut College, St. Thomas, and Roger Williams. All games were close however, and in some the winner was determined by only a few points. Against WPI, who Bryant had previously lost to, Bryant was ahead at halftime but failed to score on a few passes, and WPI came out the victor.

The team plans to compete in numerous weekend tournaments throughout their fall and spring seasons next year and will practice regularly Monday-Fridays at the intramurals field. You can learn more about the team by visiting http://web.bryant.edu/ultimate, contacting President Mike "Crazy" O'Gara at mog@bryant.edu, or by coming to practices; all are welcome.
