Fashions Take Center Stage

Julia Arouchef
Archway Staff Writer

The Student Senate sponsored their second annual Spring Fashion Show Wednesday, April 1, as part of their major fundraiser for the year.

All clothes were modeled by fifty Bryan students, with members from the following organizations: the Kappa Club, Student Senate, Alpha Phi, Phi Sigma Sigma, Theta Phi Alpha, Delta Zeta, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Tau Epsilon Phi, Tau Kappa Epsilon, the Baseball Team, the International Student Organization, the Student Programming Board, and several Resident Assistants and Orientation Leaders.

The spring and summer outfits were loaned by stores in the Lincoln and Emerald Square Malls. Clothes from the Lincoln Mall came from stores such as Up’s and Down’s, Hit or Miss, Brooks, and Rave.

The participating stores from the Emerald Square Mall included: Aeropostale, Eddie Bauer, Orleans, Empire, Structure, The Lodge, and the County Seat.

The Student Senate, Images, the Office of Student Activities, Bryant Center Operations, and the participating stores and models all helped organize the fashion show. The Student Senate will distribute the money raised to organizations throughout the year. This is one of the many Student Senate fundraisers this year.

Senior Julayne Lazar takes the stage during the second annual Spring Fashion Show, held in Janikas Auditorium last night.

Law School to Open in Rhode Island

Julia Arouchef and Bill Becker
Archway Staff Writers

In September of 1993, Roger Williams College will open the doors to the first law school in Rhode Island’s history.

The law school will be located at Roger Williams’ Bristol campus. However, in an attempt to be more accessible, officials also plan to hold classes in Providence for third-year students.

According to Roger Williams’ public relations office, the tuition for students is expected to be around $14,000/year for full-time students and approximately $9,000 for part-time students.

Other schools, including Bryant College, have considered the possibility of opening a law school over the last two decades. However, the high costs of opening the school as well as the cost and access to out of state law schools have always outweighed the benefits of opening the law school.

The law school will apply for accreditation after its first year of existence, which will be in 1993. The school is projected to have 350 full-time students, 175 part-time students, and a faculty of 60 professors within its first five years.

Dean Anthony Santoro, originally from Widener University, was selected to head up the new law school. Santoro has been instrumental in the founding of four other law schools across the country.

Alvarez, a college alumnus, is one kind of law school that the college should be envisioning. He is the kind of law school that the college should be envisioning. He is the kind of law school that the college should be envisioning. He is the kind of law school that the college should be envisioning.

The alum, who was a student at Roger Williams asked, “Why does Rhode Island need a law school when some of the best law schools in the country are less than an hour away?”

However, Craig Tiedemann, a recent paralegal graduate of Roger Williams, suggested that “the presence of law students in the metropolitan parts of the Island county can mean less of the shoddy justice that occurs from time to time due to the small population.”

Students aren’t the only people who have experienced concerns. For example, some of the faculty at Roger Williams have voiced concerns about whether the college is financially secure enough to absorb the extraordinarily high costs of starting a law firm.

The fear is that the strain during the start-up years will effect the existing departments. According to estimates by Roger Williams College, the law school will cost approximately $12 million.

Bryant Grad Returns as Administrator

Lisa Lucchesi and Andy Hershenow
Archway Staff Writers

Juan Alvarez, has returned to Bryant College after graduating in 1989, to serve as the Assistant Director of Admissions. Alvarez took over Donna Cuddy’s job after the left to raise a family.

The 25-year-old lived in Colombia until he was about nine years old. He then moved to Rhode Island with his parents. He feels that since there aren’t many Hispanics in higher education, his background may help him serve as a minority role model.

Alvarez attended the Community College of Rhode Island before transferring to Bryant in his junior year.

He remembers his best experience at Bryant as being graduation. He referred to it as a “bittersweet moment.” He adds, “It was sad to say goodbye but at least you know that you’ve come a long way and accomplished something.”

Alvarez serves as the admissions continued, Administrator, page 3
Honors Program Change May Hurt Students

The Bryant College Honors Program was first offered in 1991 "to meet the educational needs of highly motivated students" according to the program brochure. The Honors Program is for students with an overall GPA of 3.1 or higher, who "are oriented toward achievement, take pride in work of superior quality, wish a broad general education as well as a professionally specialized one, and have strong reasoning skills and writing ability."

The greatest benefit of the program is its intellectual challenge. Another benefit is small class size, which results in greater participation and interaction. Also, Honors Program students can successfully complete a designated number of courses will be awarded the designation "Honors Program Graduate" on their diploma. But how much does this really matter to students? No one sees it unless you sport your diploma at the interview.

When the program began, there was another built-in benefit for the participants. The grading procedure was designed to add one quality point to the final grade. For example, a "B" grade would be equal to a 4.0 instead of a 3.0, and an "A" would count as 4.0, rather than the usual 4.0. The quality point was to be added by the Registrar's Office to the grade assigned by the professor. However, that policy has now been changed. According to a recent letter to Honors Program Participants, "Beginning in fall 1992, instructors, recognizing that honors courses are especially challenging and that honors students are among Bryant's highest academic achievers, will assign grades that they feel are appropriate. Those grades might be modified by the Registrar's Office."

The co-directors should be applauded for notifying students of the change as quickly as they could after it was finally passed. And their rationale for changing the policy makes sense...to a point. The grading procedure was changed because the administration was not satisfied with it, and because the professors felt they had to grade differently than they wanted.

That's where the point falls short. The instructors should be assigning grades as they are earned based on the course criteria, not based on the extra quality point. For example, if a student does work that merits an A/B, the instructor should not give the student a B/C because an honors B/C is expected by a regular A/B.

The change in grading policy may prove to have a negligible effect on students, but students seem to feel that something is being taken away from them. One sophomore commented, "They shouldn't change the policy once it's in place...They're basically admitting the teachers didn't follow the set grading procedure."

Others are concerned the program will die because students won't think they're getting enough for the effort they put in. "An honors course requires a greater time commitment than most non-honors courses," added a senior who has taken honors courses. "The additional incentive (of the added quality point) is a major factor of the honors courses that compensate for the time commitment."

There is now little incentive to take new courses. Students are going to wonder why they should subject themselves to the extra work load and the extra effort these classes take if they are not being rewarded for it. The question is: are the benefits from honors courses (small class size, extra perspective, special events) worth it when the recognition you receive is slight, and somewhat hidden?

Unfortunately, without any extra incentive, many people are going to answer no.

---

Students Care About Electives

If all work and no play make Jack a dull boy and Jill a dull girl, what does all work and no art or music or theater make the students at Bryant? Bryant means work, but that should not mean business and nothing else.

But we think that may in fact be the case. For example, we were looking for a performance one day last week and found only one, off in a corner in Jameson and Thorne. We looked through the Student Activities Calendar for the week and found nothing that would qualify as a cultural event.

Now we are looking at the course selection at pre-registration. The selection is better than it was our freshman year, but still very limited. For example, there is only one course in music and one in art, and there are no classes in theater.

Bryant College is a specialty business school, but does this mean the students should be offered such limited elective courses and limited extracurricular activities? Any executive will tell you that a successful business person is a well rounded person, one who knows how to take care of himself and management.

Often Bryant students feel restricted when selecting their academic schedule and are dissatisfied in the available course selection. "I think because Bryant is a business school, many people do not think the students care about other electives, but in fact we do care," said Katrina Sugihara, a junior majoring in finance. She added, "I am appalled that the one Black History course they finally offered here was an honors course." This causes a problem because honors courses at Bryant have limited enrollments.

The college should show some sensitivity towards the need of an arts program. A year ago, Bryant announced a co-op arrangement between Rhode Island School of Design and Bryant College. Bryant students were going to be offered the opportunity to take courses at R.I.S.D. and students there would take courses at Bryant. However, this great idea apparently has not been followed through.

Tracy Newcombe, a sophomore accounting major, said she was disappointed. "I would have loved the opportunity to take courses at another school like R.I.S.D."

In order for the curriculum at Bryant to improve, the administration must not be so pessimistic about "it will never go" or "we already tried that once."

It is the students who must voice their concerns about the college's curriculum and their interest in cultural activities. As one student said, "Putting money towards programs involving art and music should be as equally important as the money put into sports.

Therefore, we challenge the administration to give the students at Bryant a chance to "broaden their educational horizons." To start, the college should take a look at the extracurricular activities of students, and offer some cultural events. Establishing new programs and courses dealing with areas in music, art, photography, and drama could make a more diverse student body and would make a Bryant College graduate a well rounded business leader.

In the meantime, is there another piano out there?
Confirmation Ceremony Held

Julia Arrachon
Archway Staff Writer

Seven Bryant students were confirmed last Sunday in the Papito Dining Room by Bishop Kenneth A. Angell, D.D., Auxiliary Bishop of Providence.

The ceremony concluded the last stage of initiation into the Catholic Faith. Diane M. Barsky, John Monison, John B. Barsky, John T. Bruce, Susan C. Cohen, Jr., Alison F. Falcone, Carollyn Kleeby, Brooke A. Miller and Michelle A. Murphy.

In most cases, confirmation takes place at an earlier age than college but Catholic Chaplain Reverend Douglas J. Spini, who teaches the classes, said that ideally the confirmation should take place at a time when the individual is more mature and responsible.

This year’s program has more than doubled from last year’s three-member class.

Bryant students after confirmation ceremonies last Sunday

Hunger Clean-Up Day Scheduled

Julia Arrachon
Archway Staff Writer

The second annual Hunger Clean-Up day, when raised money for people and organizations in need, is planned for Saturday April 11. Currently sixty Bryant volunteers are raising funds by asking friends to sponsor them in efforts of cleaning four work sites in the surrounding area.

The sites already confirmed include: Johnson Memorial Park, North Providence Governor Nette Park, East Providence Pierce Athletic club and the Cranston Brayton Little League field. Fifty percent of the earnings go to the national organization and the other fifty percent will be split between the St. George’s Soup Kitchen and the Amos House.

Last year, Bryant raised over $3,000 in their first attempt at the fund raiser.

According to BHC Vice President, Caroline Piercy, “It is important for students to voluntarily give back to the community.”

“The money goes to a good cause because needy organizations need help, especially in these tough times,” said Piercy.

All funds will support the hunger and homeless groups across the country and world. Approximately 450 schools nationwide already contribute to the event annually.

Morrison Receives Leadership Award

SPG Vice-President John Morrison receives the Student-Leader-of-the-Month award for February from Dean of Student Life, F.D. Taylor during yesterday’s Senate meeting. Morrison is selected for the award after planning the 1992 Winter Weekend, the first Winter Weekend in four years.

Executives, continued from page 1

the business industries.

“Marketing is a huge issue in the sense that there are major international company competitions among insurance companies,” said David Patterson, the chief operating officer for the Properties of Washington Group insurance company.

The PW Group, a $300 million company, deals with casualty and property insurance.

Robert McCabe, president of the Narragansett Electric Company, deals with environmental concerns. He explores ways of getting people to conserve electrical power. McCabe is also a member of the Business School Advisory Committee.

Administrator, continued from page 1

counselor at Alfred University before coming to Bryant.

Alvarez adds, “My experience at Alfred University has helped me a great deal, not only in seeing what institutions are like but also what it’s like working with people.”

He claims he came back to Bryant because of the people.

“I think our students are unique. They have their niche, I hope Bryant will have the same student quality in the future,” stated Alvarez.

Alvarez has the advantage of seeing the students and the administration in the&Bryant, “I have never had the pleasure of working with a student he believes that the two really work together well.

Alvarez is eager to work his way up the ladder in admissions. His job is to travel back and forth to New England, New Jersey, meet with alumni, act as a representative for the college, and to interview students.

His main objective when interviewing applicants, is to look for people that he thinks have the quality to survive at Bryant and are responsible.

His advice to the present and incoming students is to use extracurricular activities, career services, and to volunteer or other resources as a means of getting involved.

“Volunteerism is a big part of college,” he says. “It is the responsibility of each student to decide what to do with their time.”
Drowning in a Sea of Waste

Off the Cuff
Mark Milhich
Archway Staff Writer

Even as this is written, we're busy buying up hundreds of thousands of surgical smocks to stock in our warehouse on top of the surgical smocks we bought during the Korean War.

And that's just the tip of the iceberg! Of course, we were heavily involved in that check-bouncing thing - as a matter of fact, we created the House bank for the express purpose of wasting your money and increasing the deficit. We didn't count on a few bad apples abusing the privilege of writing bad checks though. If it hadn't been for those guys, we could've kept this scam going on for years!

Millions of excuses wasted!

Oh well, no sense crying about spilled milk. We think our latest effort has extraordinary potential to waste money, and we're really excited about it. It has come to our attention that there is an overly large amount of really bulky lint being produced by the American People.

So we're working on a research project to determine a feasible method of collecting all of this lint and finding somewhere to drop it, such as on Pat Buchanan.

This project is actually an extension of that bovine emission research we were working on. Remember that one? That's where we had you people convinced that cows emit roughly two pounds of methane per day, and these emissions were having a significant effect on Global Warming (I swear, I am not making this up).

That was a really expensive project. Why salary alone took up more than 50 percent of the money we budgeted. Why is that, you ask? Well, would you want to stand out in the middle of a pasture all day, waiting for some stupid animal to pass gas? And then sweaters or Boy, we had you snowed but good this time!

So anyway, this bulky button lint idea came out of the bovine emissions project. What happened was this. One of those over-paid scientists out in the pasture got really, really bored one day (he probably had too much sun and methane gas, too) and noticed that his belly button collected approximately 1.64 grams of lint every 12 hours.

And that got us to thinking. If we collected the belly button lint of every American on a weekly basis, we'd end up with a really disgusting, huge ball of lint, roughly the size of Los Angeles.

And then we got to thinking, "What could we do with a ball of lint roughly the size of Los Angeles?"

Well, we couldn't think of anything. This was enough to swing our agency into action, planning and budgeting a research project in study and finding somewhere to drop it, such as on Pat Buchanan.

The project is actually an extension of that bovine emission research we were working on. Remember that one? That's where we had you people convinced that cows emit roughly two pounds of methane per day, and these emissions were having a significant effect on Global Warming (I swear, I am not making this up).

That was a really expensive project. Why salary alone took up more than 50 percent of the money we budgeted. Why is that, you ask? Well, would you want to stand out in the middle of a pasture all day, waiting for some stupid animal to pass gas? And then sweaters or Boy, we had you snowed but good this time!

So anyway, this bulky button lint idea came out of the bovine emissions project. What happened was this. One of those over-paid scientists out in the pasture got really, really bored one day (he probably had too much sun and methane gas, too) and noticed that his belly button collected approximately 1.64 grams of lint every 12 hours.

And that got us to thinking. If we collected the belly button lint of every American on a weekly basis, we'd end up with a really disgusting, huge ball of lint, roughly the size of Los Angeles.

And then we got to thinking, "What could we do with a ball of lint roughly the size of Los Angeles?"

Well, we couldn't think of anything. This was enough to swing our agency into action, planning and budgeting a research project in study and finding somewhere to drop it, such as on Pat Buchanan.

The project is actually an extension of that bovine emission research we were working on. Remember that one? That's where we had you people convinced that cows emit roughly two pounds of methane per day, and these emissions were having a significant effect on Global Warming (I swear, I am not making this up).

That was a really expensive project. Why salary alone took up more than 50 percent of the money we budgeted. Why is that, you ask? Well, would you want to stand out in the middle of a pasture all day, waiting for some stupid animal to pass gas? And then sweaters or Boy, we had you snowed but good this time!

So anyway, this bulky button lint idea came out of the bovine emissions project. What happened was this. One of those over-paid scientists out in the pasture got really, really bored one day (he probably had too much sun and methane gas, too) and noticed that his belly button collected approximately 1.64 grams of lint every 12 hours.

And that got us to thinking. If we collected the belly button lint of every American on a weekly basis, we'd end up with a really disgusting, huge ball of lint, roughly the size of Los Angeles.

And then we got to thinking, "What could we do with a ball of lint roughly the size of Los Angeles?"

Well, we couldn't think of anything. This was enough to swing our agency into action, planning and budgeting a research project in study and finding somewhere to drop it, such as on Pat Buchanan.

The project is actually an extension of that bovine emission research we were working on. Remember that one? That's where we had you people convinced that cows emit roughly two pounds of methane per day, and these emissions were having a significant effect on Global Warming (I swear, I am not making this up).

That was a really expensive project. Why salary alone took up more than 50 percent of the money we budgeted. Why is that, you ask? Well, would you want to stand out in the middle of a pasture all day, waiting for some stupid animal to pass gas? And then sweaters or Boy, we had you snowed but good this time!

So anyway, this bulky button lint idea came out of the bovine emissions project. What happened was this. One of those over-paid scientists out in the pasture got really, really bored one day (he probably had too much sun and methane gas, too) and noticed that his belly button collected approximately 1.64 grams of lint every 12 hours.

And that got us to thinking. If we collected the belly button lint of every American on a weekly basis, we'd end up with a really disgusting, huge ball of lint, roughly the size of Los Angeles.

And then we got to thinking, "What could we do with a ball of lint roughly the size of Los Angeles?"

Well, we couldn't think of anything. This was enough to swing our agency into action, planning and budgeting a research project in study and finding somewhere to drop it, such as on Pat Buchanan.
For Seniors, the Job Search Continues

by Lisa Ronca
and Annie Vallucenti
Journalism Students

The Class of 1992 graduates from across the nation are realizing that finding a job in a recession may be like finding a needle in a haystack. Jobs are at a minimum and the number of skilled workers is ever rising. As the recession continues, many companies are downsizing their workforce and hiring fewer inexperienced workers.

Furthermore, recruiters are more meticulous in their choosing of interviewees. According to the editor of Career Futures, Jeremy Schlosberg, business students are the ones most affected by the dramatic decrease in on-campus corporate recruiters being experienced nationwide.

To make matters worse, Schlosberg says, many graduates are looking for jobs where they feel they can make a difference and achieve self-satisfaction. They’re not searching for the high-paying jobs the students of the 1980’s sought.

There is some good news, however.

Much of the frustration and anxiety that graduates felt last year has led to the growing awareness that job hunting is going to be a great challenge. This years’ graduates, therefore, are beginning to look realistically at the challenges that face them and form strategies to set themselves apart from the crowd.

To help graduates form these strategies, companies and publishers are producing brochures and reading materials on job-hunting and interviewing. Reading these pamphlets and using their advice will ensure that students don’t waste their parents money by going to college. Experts advise students to do extensive research and be optimistic about finding the right job.

Even in a tight job market, the right information and the right attitude may lead to the right job.

---

Recycling
It’s our only chance.

This campaign provided in a public service.

---

Cheating 101: What It’s All About

by Christopher Hinkle
and Jason Hall
Journalism Students

It happens every day. A little peek onto a neighbor’s test, a note tucked into a calculator case, or a basic cheat sheet. Just about everyone has cheated, or at least someone you know has cheated, at some time, in some way, shape, or form.

Some students cheat a little, some cheat a lot, and some cheat all the time. Some students say they could write a book on how to cheat.

Well, someone has. Michael Moore, a 24-year-old junior journalism major at Rutgers University, has capitalized on the fine art of cheating and has written Cheating 101: The Benefits and Fundamentals of Earning the Easy “A.”

Cheating 101 is a serious, yet satiric, approach to how to survive by cheating.

The satiric side is obvious from the start. The book is dedicated to St. Francis College, in Loreto, PA where Moore learned “cheating is part of a college ‘education.’”

As you read through the eighty-six pages, you can see the book is as much about the values and systems that encourage and reward cheating as it is about specific techniques. Moore believes, for example, that cheating begins in elementary school. According to the book, a 1987 survey of California sixth graders found that 38 percent of the students admitted to copying another’s exam. And a May 1991 study conducted by Rutgers University found that nearly 67 percent of all college students cheat.

Business students lead the collegiate list of most avid cheaters, according to the Rutgers survey. Next are engineering majors, followed by science, economics, communication, history, psychology, and English students.

Moore says, tongue in cheek (or perhaps not?), students should not feel guilty about cheating. He states cheating is very much a part of the real world. “Cheating prepares you, perhaps more than anything for the working world,” he says.

Moore goes on to say cheating is just a way of outsmarting professors and a way to graduate with good grades.

Cheating on an exam seems like a minor offense compared to how much cheating goes on in real life. Moore says, “Self-employed professionals like doctors, lawyers, and building contractors cheat the government out of $24 billion dollars annually.”

Moore continues, “Scientific researchers have been known to cheat and falsify supposed breakthroughs in order to maintain or gain federal and state funding grants... so as you can see, cheating in college is a pale comparison.”

Cheating 101 also full of helpful hints or warnings, if you happen to be a professor. It lists everything from writing on the hill of a basketball hat to just bringing extra notes into the exam.

It gets into the more difficult logistics of cheating as well. For instance, Moore suggests you have someone else take the exam for you, or even better, tell the professor you are sick, set up a meet, go to the original test day, get the exam, leave, then go to the makeup exam.

The last few ideas, however, would only work in large, lecture hall type classes. Moore warns.

Besides identifying methods of cheating, Moore also lists some of the tools of the trade. He names as essentials, extra blue books, copies of old exams, and a pen with a remarkable scroll. Moore even goes as far as to give the company and address where a cheater’s pen can be ordered.

You may pay a high price for cheating in the future, the moralists say, but for now, Moore’s raking in huge profits from Cheating 101. He is publishing and marketing thousands of copies of the book himself and is selling them for $10 each, up from the original price of $7 each.
Bryant College
Oxford Union Society
Debate

"This house believes the ends always justify the means."

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 8
PAPITTO DINING ROOM
7:30PM
FREE ADMISSION
RECEPTION TO FOLLOW

In memory of Michael T. Cain

Sponsored by SPB and the Debate Society of Bryant College
Are There Really Jobs Out There in Retail Sales?

The bureau of Labor Statistics has identified retail sales as the field offering the most new jobs between now and 2005, yet 17,000 retail stores are expected to fold this year and the problems of such stores as Korvettes, Barns and Teller, and Ames are well known.

Even long-time merchants, such as Macy's and Sears, are in a slump, and many aggressive discount merchandisers (like New York's Crazy Eddie's) are in serious trouble.

How can a field with so many problems offer opportunities to those planning careers? For starters, assume that people are going to feed, cloth, and house themselves and stores are going to play the major role in meeting those needs. But which stores? That is the key.

The secret to planning successful careers in the retail field lies in matching your wagon to a successful marketing team. Some think that big stores (Marshall Field, Burlington's, Wanamaker's) have had their day.

But Wal-Mart stores are going strong in non metropolitan areas and even Montgomery Ward seems on the road back.

Smaller specialty stores, close to consumer tastes and able to adjust more quickly, may also offer attractive futures.

The successful Gap offers clothes for the whole family that are durable, attractive and moderately priced.

Stores that cater to particular markets may do well: busy women executives or older women, sports enthusiasts, specialty retail, popular home products, and so on.

Success in a retail sales career will be related to the success of the enterprise with which one is affiliated. Candidates for jobs in the field should spend more time reviewing the advertisements of a retail firm than researching literature and, once hired, should be prepared to leave at any time for a store more/smarter to tomorrow's markets.

Career Savvy

by Father Doug Spina
Catholic Charities

Easter: New Life & New Joy

This semester is just flying by! I can’t believe that the Caldeby Bunny commercials are back on the old tube. Easter is just around the corner. And, folks, this is my favorite time of the year. New Life is springing from the earth. And, our friends the geese are back, the trees are budding, term papers are due, flowers are blooming, and the winds of winter are giving way to the gentle warm breezes of spring.

Yes! It is the season of Easter — our Lord’s resurrection as we stand before the tomb empty.

Christ is risen! He is not here! He is risen! He is risen, indeed! It is so easy to get weighted down by our lives and the problems of living: work, school, relationships, family matters, finances, and so forth. It is easy for us to turn inward and selfishly think that the world revolves around us — and what did we do to deserve the pains and little tragedies that life met out along the way. Easter pulls us up from our boat steps and helps us to put life and the ultimate challenges that life poses, into a new, Christian perspective. The gift of life finds its highest realization in the faith we breathe. You are no longer alone in life; all is grace, all is holy, all is redeemed through the Easter perspective. Even those little tragedies life may have in store for us.

During this Holy Week 2002, join us for services. Come celebrate around the table of the Lord. Jesus walks with us. He lives with us and we with him. HAPPY EASTER!

Chaplain’s Corner

by Father Doug Spina
Catholic Charities

How to Kill the Person Who Has Been Making Your Life A Living Hell

The Real Scoop

Cindy Gale
Archway Staff Writer

Have you ever known someone, who in the wake of a loss, one can make an eye can make you so mad you want to try? Then you can do the integer, thing, always unintentional of course, and the person is a self appointed gardened ascendant Chinese tutors come to mind. How do you go about getting rid of that person. They won’t cause you anymore problems read on and discover what many people have gone to prison for.

Let me set the scene for you. You go out, in a brief moment of weakness, you look sharp and you know it. Upon arrival at your destination, you see your arch enemy across the room, they are wearing something that resembles something you can’t even describe.

You leave the room this person in because you don’t want to breathe the same air they are. You are immediately aggrieved this person is there, but you become determined not to let them destroy your evening, at any cost. You go about your evening, mingling with the people there, having a wonderful time.

Then, they walk into the room you were trying to hide in and you feel your entire night is destined to be ruined. How do you go about getting rid of this person so they do not cause you any more pain, aggravation, or anguish? Murder, Murder the first degree.

Now, let’s get one thing straight right off the bat. The police may or may not have done anything to you. There is just something about them don’t like, for the rest of the day.

You may not like the way they eat their ice cream, or the way they talk, or even the way they put up part of their corn muffins. Remember, nothing has been done to you by them and you want to cause them bodily harm. But then again, if you want to kill them for reasons such as these you want to clean up.

Now, when I think of murder, the first things that come to my mind is blood, fun and bother. What better way to brighten your day than by doing one thing that would make your life so much easier — killing the one person you would like to see die. Sorry, I’m a horror movie fan but, in reality, would doing that actually make your life easier? Wouldn’t it actually make things more difficult since you would be behind bars and you wouldn’t be able to see their horrible face again anyway? This would ultimately defeat your purpose, and make you miss fun years of your life.

But, if you do want to waste twenty to thirty years of your life, there are many ways to bump off that individual who no longer

There are hundreds of questions on the GMAT, GRE and LSAT.

This checklist will help you answer all of them.

- Kaplan test prep convenient.
- With 150 centers and thousands of class schedules, the odds are you’re ready to study when and where.
- Kaplan helps you manage your time.
- Diagnostic tests and personalized counseling help you recognize stumbling blocks early on, before they hurt your performance.
- Kaplan offers the best value.
- Our courses are competitively priced and offer the complete preparation that has helped more students get into the school of their choice than anyone else.
- Kaplan is the industry leader.
- 55 years of experience and 2 million grad students prove we’ve got the expertise and resources to help students succeed.

1-800-KAP-TEST

Kaplan Test Prep

The Answer

© 1993 Stanley H. Kaplan Educational Center Ltd.
A Cool Evening With LUSH
by Pete Mancuso

Just who is Lush anyway? What is Lush? Well, they’re an indie band from London for starters. What the hell does indie mean? These are all plausible questions for the average Bryant student. Indie is simply short for Independent Record Label, in other words alternative or progressive music. An indie label usually lacks the radio airplay for that group.

Lush has only been around since 1988. The members formed out of a desire to be in bands. As students of North London Polytechnic, Lush has had one change in their line-up; a new bassist, no big deal.

Three EP import releases on British label 4AD at the close of the last decade established Lush as “up and coming.” This year brings Lush a decade since released album, Deströyr, produced by the Cocteau Twins’ Robin Guthrie.

SPOOKY is currently atop the college and the band has been enjoying an incredible amount of press in every possible publication from Rolling Stone to the Nice Paper. On Tuesday night, the city of Providence was lucky enough to have Lush play downtown.

The venue was the Campus Club—“Lush only 56, with special guests Babes in Toyland and The Laurels.” Subsidizing through the open act was grueling. Lush was greeted with great enthusiasm. Lead singer and guitarist Miki Berenyi wasted no time with a hello, not even a smile...maybe she’s just sore from the Revolution.

They began with a trakc off the new album, “Who’s [sic] Knew.” While the group’s sound is not too sure, Lush’s songs are very similar, so similar many tunes were indistinguishable. You have to look at their faces while listening. Their sound is like a mellow groove, much like the Cocteau Twins in sound (although Miki’s vocals are much better than that comparison, Guthrie’s influence is evident). Their latest single “For Love” was a maybe the forth song of the set.

Miki’s voice was barely audible, yet impressive. The crowd was, maybe it was Miki’s fire-red hair or maybe it was that black ribbed sweater she was sporting, which is just so vogue. The crowd at Campus Club was used to the popularity that Britain gives them.

Quickly Lush finished things off, but not without a decent encore. The sound was good, but the excitement of the evening would come later.

As the crowd diffused into the cold streets of Providence, I found myself unsatisfied with a mere performance. I realized the fun was going on behind closed doors. It attempted to convince security that I needed to get backstage, telling him I was a WMF disc-jockey, concert reviewer, anything I could think of...he was not impressed.

At this point I realized I needed to make a detour move. I brought my record store information. I was the chosen one. He had sold me the Lush tickets earlier and we established some rapport. Bob is a great guy.

The next thing I knew, I was brought into the realms of backstage land. Leaving behind my fellow Bryant concert goers, Greg and Jason, I was no longer a common spectator. I was chillin’ backstage with Lush. Happy as kid in a candy store, I quickly realized I knew nobody. That didn’t matter; I made friends quickly. The next task to act as cool as possible, I struck up a conversation with a few people. Sure it was a phony conversation. It was simply a political move to make myself feel at home, but the conversation turned out to be excellent. And the best part about it was that Bill Clinton’s name never came up.

At this point I was ready to confront Miki. As I approached her, I helped myself to a celery stick in order to appear more relaxed. Miki was real down to earth. Of course I told her I was a big fan and that I even saw her in her hometown in London.

We talked about music, drugs, and the youth culture of today. We both agreed that the Madchester scene in the U.K. was definitely dead and the kids needed to mellow out. She was not afraid to express her opinion.

I asked Miki what she thought about the concert fans in America. “They suck!” she replied without hesitation. I guess she’s still afraid of offending anyone. Judging from the crowd that evening at Campus Club, she’s probably right. Miki, feeling guilty maybe, did express an appreciation for the city of Chicago and the band’s fans. She’s not so harsh on America after all.

The evening had ended on a definite high. The whole night was an excellent experience. Since the show, I haven’t stopped listening to SPOOKY and it seems to only get better each time. It’s definitely worth your time and money.

As far as Lush live, well, it would probably only be worth it if you are as lucky as I was to hang backstage and hang out with Miki. But of course this is only my opinion, which I am free to express in this great country of ours...

Editor’s Note: The writer is a WMF disc-jockey. His show, Massive Rhetoric, can be heard every Monday from 6pm to 9pm & Wednesday 10pm-Late on FM 90.7 American Heart Association

Call Us for all of Your Spring Formal Needs
Special Bryant Discount

10% Off
All Floral Products with this Ad or Current Bryant Student ID
925 Victory Highway (Route 102) Stateville, IL 60476
708-734-0150
1-800-734-0150 w/ Only
Call Ahead so Your Order Will Be Ready

ATTENTION ACCOUNTING MAJORS
The Becker CPA Review Course is offering a scholarship in the form of a FREE review course.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS:
Must have a cumulative GPA of at least 3.5 and be a member of the Accounting Association.
A resume and transcript must be submitted to Box 2295 by Monday, April 20 to be eligible.

If you have any questions regarding the scholarship contact Tracy Noga at 232-8188.

ATTENTION ACCOUNTING MAJORS
The Becker CPA Review Course is offering a scholarship in the form of a FREE review course.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS:
Must have a cumulative GPA of at least 3.5 and be a member of the Accounting Association.
A resume and transcript must be submitted to Box 2295 by Monday, April 20 to be eligible.

If you have any questions regarding the scholarship contact Tracy Noga at 232-8188.
Another of Heidi's lifelong friends is Peter Patrone, whom she meets at a high school dance. Peter becomes a caring pediatrican with acquisitive success. He and Heidi remain very close friends, however, nothing else can come of their relationship. Peter admits his homosexual attraction to Heidi at a feminist protest.

Heidi attends consciousness raising rap sessions in order to make sense of her values and ideas. Scoop is a conservative married woman who does not love. At the wedding reception, Heidi confronts Scoop. Scoop admits his love for Heidi, but says this has been a matter of priorities. If the married Heidi, they would constantly be competing with each other for fulfillment, he reasoned.

In the 80s, Heidi's friendships give into the male dominated area of sitcom writing in Hollywood. Their thinking becomes very superficial and Heidi feels alone. Sitting in a bright pink Los Angeles restaurant, she thinks that often "what makes you a person keeps you from becoming a person." Heidi questions the changing roles of women and niticiles the superwoman of the 1960s. There were excellent performances by Cynthia Strickland, who played Heidi, Fred Sullivan the sensitive Peter Patrone, and Andrew Blumick, the intelligent calculating Scoop Rosenbaum.

The scenes of the play are tied together by a slide show depicting American prostitutes, presidents, and icons of our recent history. The Heidi Chronicles has been called "an enlightening portrayal of generations." Although all viewers may not have lived through this era, the underlying themes appeal to all generations. This excellent play runs through May. 2 Call Trinity at 521-1100 for ticket information.

The Heidi Chronicles, as the Trinity Repertory Company, is an excellent portrayal of American values. This contemporary play, written by Wendy Wasserstein, has been performed on Broadway, as well as gaining Tony and Pulitzer acclaim.

The story follows the fears and dreams of an optimistic American woman, Heidi Holland, as she lives through the 60s, 70s, 80s, and 90s. Heidi is a feminist art historian, who believes that "all people deserve to fulfill their potential."

When she takes a political campaign in the 60s, she meets Scoop Rosenbaum, a liberal journalist. Scoop questions Heidi about her goals and doubts her self-confidence. "Do you know what you are, Heidi? You are a serious, good person. And that is an unfortunate contradiction," Scoop said.
Alpha Phi

by Ann Picone

Hey everyone, hope you had yet another great weekend of events! The weekend started off with Friday eveningeguarding the floor, it was great to see everyone!! The formal was a blast. They seem to get better and better each year!! We sure had fun.

A big CONGRATULATIONS goes to Sororities for winning the best sister award and to all the other sisters who received awards, Congrats!! A thanks to Liz and Wendy for planning the memorable time!!

A thanks to Gem and Puebco for a job well done!! In awards last week: S15 - Krunch, S.O.T.W. - 2 - Actio... Clubs: S.O.T.W. - Chumlcy.

The weekend sister Award goes to Snees, and better blast.

Happy Birthday goes to Alpha Phi at Bryant. Ail!!!

We wish Delta Kappa Epsilon (Kappa Sigma) to Bryant a Happy Birthday! They seem to be doing great! And in the one thing is for sure: This is the show!!

We hope that all sisters going to formals this weekend will have a good time.

The most reusable piece of plastic on campus.

The AT&T Calling Card will never go to waste. You can use it to make a call from almost anywhere to anywhere. Once you have one, you'll never need to apply for another. It's the least expensive way to call state-to-state on AT&T when you can't dial direct. 11 And now you could also get 50% back on all the long distance calls you make with your card.

Of course when you use your Calling Card, you'll always be connected to the reliable service you've come to expect from AT&T. 12 So, as you see, there's only one way to describe the AT&T Calling Card in today's college environment. Indispensable.

Get an AT&T Calling Card today. Call 1 800 654-0471 Ext. 9728.

Delt a Kappa

by Sean Leone

Congratulations to all election winners and our new E-Board: President Welch, Executive V.P. L-ski, Social V.P. Aaron, Secretary Mam, Treasurer Hector, Pledgemaster A.J., and Sergeant at Arms. The Alpha soccer team is now at 500 with a shocking 1-0 win over Sigma. Jazz scored the game's only goal late in the first half and the defense held on strong the rest of the way. Also, the B-league basketball team brought out its secret weapon, Jeff Vlach, in its win over KDR.

Congratulations to Dan and Denis, for their awards at the pledge formal this weekend, for a job well done. The formal was a great success.

On a sad note, Opie is leaving Campus Scene. Happy birthday wishes to Aaron.

Delta Zeta

by Audrey Rodrigues and Jenna Lopez

The beautiful weather this weekend seemed to give everyone a touch of spring fever.

We hope that all sisters going to formals this weekend will have a good time.

On Sunday afternoon we gave a warm welcome to our Province Collegiate Director, Fran Carmos. She was full of energy and person­ ality and left our chapter with a very positive feeling. We are all looking forward to seeing her again at our Province Weekend on April 10th.

But certainly not least, a be­ lated Happy Birthday goes out to Blaze!!
Phi Sigma Sigma

by Traczy Keller

Greetings! This past weekend, several sisters attended formals and everyone had a great time. This weekend we are all looking forward to formal at Mt. Snow. So sisters are prepared, and new sisters, don’t forget.

Congratulations on everyone’s new positions. President-Melissa, VP-Mary, Rush-Dwarf, Burst-Lauren, Pledge Mistress-Lara, Scholar-Janice, Tribune-Cynthia, MAL-Megan, Paulie-Michael, and congrats goes out to Kelly and Woody for being co-townhouse managers. We know you will do a great job girls!

That’s all for now! Later KT top dog! Phi Sig Sig top cat! One of you can’t be without the you one you love, love the one you’re with you.

---

Rugby

by John Conover

Welcome back all rugby supporters! Bryant Rugby made its overdue return on the weekend in a clash against Babson College. It was great to be out on the field again even if it was frozen and muddy.

The 2xV looked good from the word go and played a rugged eighty minutes of intense rugby. The backs were running on to the ball well and the forwards were playing a much more supportive game than last year – practice certainly has paid off.

Outstanding individual performances by Will, Spoon, and Zona must be acknowledged as must Rusty’s leadership on the field. The excellent calibre of refereeing should also not go unnoticed!

Unfortunately, however, our worst nightmare came true when Babson scored in the last minute of the game to win the game 4-0. The 2xV played well and also managed to win their first game of the season 4-0. Strong debuts were made by Bill, Jay, and Mat. Thanks must go to all our supporters who stood in the cold (especially those who stayed for both games) – your support is never unappreciated. Thanks also to Coach Reid for fixing the practice field. This weekend we go on the road to play Trinity College so if you are a rugger don’t forget to wish them good luck! Until next time then, au revoir!

---

Student Senate

by Jill Kuzevitzky

Congratulations to Jennie Lynn Rice for being named Senator of the Month, and also Senator of the Year, and congratulations to Jason Fremer and his Housing Committee for being named Committee of the Month.

Jennie Rice, now the Student Senate Treasurer, served her Freshman and Sophomore years on Senate as the Fundraising Chairman. She was responsible for the fashion show we held last year, as well as last night’s fashion show.

This job took a lot of work. Jennie had to find stores who wanted to participate, book rooms, get models and commentaries, make flyers and programs, and get the list going on and out. In addition to her work, on fundraising, Jennie has helped with Unhomecoming Weekend, and various other committees. You can easily see why she was voted Senator of the Year.

Jason Fremer, as well as the rest of the Housing Committee, did a lot of work to make sure everyone got a new place to live next year! He and his committee worked with Residence Life to modify the House kangaroo process, as well as overseeing the drawings, making sure they are “Fair and equitable.”

Congratulations to Jennie, Jason, and the Housing Committee for a job well done!

---

SHRM

by Sharie Poulson

American SHRM Members!! At last week’s meeting, we were pleased to have Barbara Gregory from Career Services in attendance. She spoke about career options in the HRM field as well as many other interesting areas of business.

Our next meeting will be held on Wednesday, April 8, at 6pm. 2A of the Bryant Center at 7:00 PM. Any new members as well as old members are always welcome!!

Hope to see you there!!

---

Sigma Phi Epsilon

by Derek Fairfield

The Brothers of Sigma Phi Epsi lon had an outstanding weekend! Sunday, we were bound for Mt. Snow. The formal was a blast again this year. Congratulations to the Brothers on their awards.

In Sig Ep sports the weekend definitely took its toll. The Sigma Epsilon A-team suffered its first defeat to DKE. The B hoops team, which is 3-2, also lost to KD. The A hoops team has yet to play since break.

---

Sigma Sigma Sigma

by Mo Mabelle

Well, we hope everyone had fun at the formals this weekend: Delta Chi, TEP, DKE, and Sig Ep. The juniors who are moving into old, new townhouses M4 and H5, along with the seniors who picked an old townhouse for the weekend, deserve to be congratulated for going through that hellish procedure. We’re all looking forward to frequent get-togethers.

This week, we’d like to make a very special introduction. Please help us in congratulating our new sister Tricy. We decided not to put her last week’s Campus Scene because she really deserves her own day in the spotlight.

---

Special Olympics

by Heather K. Calderone and Tracy Markiewicz

Four weeks to go and you still have a chance to volunteer!!

Remember the informational meeting on April 6th in the lobby of ball 15 at 8:00 pm. There will be tables for sign-up on April 7th and 8th at Salomons and the Bryant Center during dinner hours.

The deadline for the softball and tennis tournament sign-ups are April 6th in the lunch room. As of April 6th, we ask all residents to please leave your empty cans outside of your dorms and townhouses for our Can Recycling Fundraiser.

"Just For the Fun of It," Special Olympics has planned a week of exciting activities. The count is still on four to look out for further details! Be sure to see Frank Santos this Saturday in Janikies Auditorium at 6:30 pm. Also, on Wednesday, April 8th, Graffiti will be playing at the Comfort from 9-1.

Special Olympics would like to thank all those who participated in the program. We would also like to thank Seniors for sponsoring Johnny Groove and GPC for sponsoring Frank Santos. And last but not least we’d like to thank Phi Sig Sig and Tri Sigma for their generous donations.

---

Tau Epsilon Phi

by Brian Queen

First off I’d like to introduce myself. I’m Brian “Scooby” Queen. Over the next year, I will keep you well informed of all the news surrounding our house. This past weekend was TEP’s pledge formal. A special thanks to Daft for making the arrangements and the whole formal weekend a huge success. A job well done!

At the awards banquet, Justin was the proud recipient of the Robert Lee Eilems Memorial Brotherhood Award. He also received the coveted “B” award. Thanks for all the help G-Man. Other award winners were: Vice President – Andy best pledge. Slick worst pledge. Scott McKay was the well deserved winner of the Varsity Unity Award. Our next prize goes to Scoops. Congratulations to all the award winners.

This year in Sydney, TEP’s A team defeated DKE in a close hard fought battle with TEP’s Purple. Hoon scoring the only goal of the game. TEP’s B teams were also victorious. The B team posted two “W”s with impressive victories over Phi Psi and Phi Kappa. For the scores of 7-1 and 8-3. In basketball, TEP’s B team dismantled Pi Kappa by the score of 34-15. TEP started the game on a 18-0 run. It was a great team effort. Keep up the winning tradition guys.

---

Tau Kappa Epsilon

by John Niterakio

Ladies and gentlemen, the tickets for TKE’s second annual Ph Roast will soon be on sale!! Psci has stated all the arrangements have been made and all we do now is hope for an excellent day.

TKE-a soccer team has improved its record to 0-2 with a 3-1 victory over Phi Kappa Phi Monday night. Chico was the man once again with two goals. Colin, who was not to be outdone, scored the most talked about goal of the season. Disco has played great goal with only one goal scored against him in two games.

At this time, I would like to wish our two Paris runway models the best of luck in the Bryant College fashion show. That is correct TKE has two famous models: Matt “Grippio” Picciolli and E. Michael “Ricky Schroeder” Somba. Good Luck men. Finally, I would like to thank Me and Kevin for his effort in finding a less expensive formal for the brothers.

Next Tuesday marks Opening Day and may it be a brand new year for the RED HOT SOX!!

---

Theta Phi Alpha

by Crizzy Tatorino

Hi! The count is still on four weeks left to Theta!! Comfort night was a great success, thanks to everyone. We’d also like to give a final thank you to everyone who supported the American Cancer Society.

Happy Charter Birthday Alpha Phi.

Questions of the week: Maggs, “We should write deep thoughts,” Spyros, “Did you go to the wrong suite?” Latta Thetab!!
Softball Wins Home Opener

Angelo Corsidino
Archway Sports Writer

The softball team opened their home season this week winning three games, improving their record to 5-8.

The lady Indians swept Salve Regina yesterday in a doubleheader, starting pitchers were Jen Flistigan and Bree Chanasyk both pitched two hitters as the team won 3-1, 7-0.

Junior centerfielder Wendy Powell went five for six with four runs and three RBI's to lead the Bryan offense for the day. In game one, Bridget Casey had a triple and drove in a run to secure the victory. Game two was called after four innings due to darkness.

The team won their first home game of the season 7-0 over Maine on Tuesday.

The team jumped out to a two run lead in the first inning and never looked back.

"Very good, we made a few errors but they didn't hurt," coach Bob Reali said when asked about team's performance.

Captain Cindy Stone lead the team at the plate, she had three hits and drove in a run. Wendy Powell and Jayna Fontaine also collected two hits and one RBI to lead the team to victory.

"This was our best offensive performance of the year," Reali said. "We hit with runners on base and we hit solid every time."

"We were also aggressive on the base path. We stole bases and took advantage of their mistakes. We have to keep this up all year, it will be key. But, we still could tighten up on defense."

On the mound for the lady Indians was Britt Chanasyk, who led the team to victory, threw a one-hitter and struck out seven batters on route to the victory.

Game two of this double header was cancelled due to inclement weather.

The team will travel to Merrimack on Saturday and Assumption on Sunday. Before returning home Monday, for a make-up game, against St. Anselm at 2:00.

Wendy Powell at bat during a Sweep of Salve Regina in Doubleheader yesterday.

Men's Golf Tees Off for Spring Season

Angelo Corsidino
Archway Sports Writer

The men's golf team began their Spring season with two tournaments at Fripp Island and Daytona Beach over the past two weekends.

In the Palm Coast Invitational at Daytona Beach, Florida, the team finished seventh out of 24 teams. They missed fifth place by only two strokes.

High finishers for the Indians were Chris Congdon who tied for eighth with a 11 over par 227, Bob Bigoncette who tied for 12th with a 12 over par 228, and Brian Baker who tied for 30th with a 18 over par 234.

Baker also had the team's lowest round of the tournament with a 71. The tournament consisted of many Division I schools including: the University of Louisville, Morehead State and Southern Illinois, URI and Providence College also competed but finished near the bottom.

The final standings, in order of finish, were Louisville 902, Bryant Community College 909, Morehead State 913, Methodist College 917, Lynn University 924, Southern Illinois 925, Bryant 926, Georgia State 927, Eastern Kentucky 933, and Hartford University 953.

In a Division I tournament at Fripp Island, South Carolina, Bryan finished eighth out of twelve.

Top finishers in this tournament were Bigoncette with a 22 over par 238, and Congdon with a 23 over par 239.

The team stats were not available at press time.

The Indians will travel to West Point, New York this weekend to play in the West Point Invitational.

Tribe Scalded by Bad Weather

Scott Gara
Archway Sports Writer

The Bryant Baseball team has only played nine innings since returning from Florida.

So far, the Indians have had seven games postponed due to inclement conditions. The weather has been victorious, 7-1, Throne loss, a peak of sunshine, enabled Bryant to beat Rhode Island College yesterday, 6-0.

Coming back from Florida, the Tribe was red hot. They continued their winning ways, posting their ninth victory of the season, Wednesday.

It was the first time in three weeks Bryant played baseball. The layoff did not seem to hurt. The team led by Dave Carey, who went 2-5, with two runs scored, and David Doyle, making seven eight sensational defensive stops, Bryant's winning streak reached eight games.

DIAMOND DUST: Last week the players were outside shoveling snow off the field, trying desperately to get it into shape for the game.

The team must now play 29 games in the next 30 days-a tough road for anyone. The Tribe has been waiting for Mother Nature to be kind and some early spring sun to appear. Soon, the players will be doing their own version of a "sun dance" to bring better weather.

Bryan's Keith Walloris.

Men's Tennis Begins Season

Angelo Corsidino
Archway Sports Writer

The men's tennis team opened their season this weekend by splitting two NE-10 matches.

On Sunday, the team faced Springfield College, losing 2-7. The only highlight for Bryant was freshman Roman Pavlik who defeated Springfield's Chris O'Brien 6-2, 6-2. Pavlik, teamed with Zinck, also won the doubles, by defeating Scott Kelly/Eric Martinez 6-4, 7-6(7-4).

The third set was played as a single tie breaker game to determine the winner.

Despite the bitter cold wind and snow, the Indians won their first match of the season Saturday against Assumption.

Leading the team to victory was Pavlik, who defeated Glenn Lavalle 6-2, 6-0. Lars Plass topped Sean Hussey 6-0, 6-1 and Chris Fantas over Mark Sirius 6-0, 6-1.

Doubles teams also helped Bryant secure the win. Pavlik/Steve Zinck teamed up once again to defeat Hussey/Sirius 6-1, 6-1. Fantas and Paul Francis, in the snow, defeated Lavalle/Abreu 6-4, 6-4.

The team faced Lowell Tuesday and Bentley yesterday. The results of these matches were not available at time of publication. The Lowell match was eventually rained out and will be played at a later date.

The Indians will be home today at 2:00 pm to face Rhode Island at 1:30 pm against Stonehill and Sunday at 10:00 am to face St. Michael's. They will then travel to Quinnipiac on Tuesday.

Athlete of the Week

This week's athlete of the week is Roman Pavlik of the men's tennis team. Pavlik, a freshman, helped the team by going undefeated this weekend.

He won his singles matches 6-2, 6-2 on Sunday and 6-2, 6-0 on Saturday. Pavlik also won both doubles matches 6-4, 7-6(7-4) and 6-1, 6-1, as the team split matches against Springfield and Assumption.

Archway photo by Cindy Gade

Roman Pavlik