The neon sign was unveiled. The plaque, bearing a photo of Cain, is located in the window of the WJMF suite in the center of the radio station, said, “You know how real radio stations have neon signs, well, maybe if we got one, we’d be taken seriously.” The sign was prominently displayed, and it caused a stir when it was first unveiled. The sign was to be visible during daylight hours and be a positive benefit for the campus.

WJMF, the on-campus, student-run radio station dedicated an on-air neon sign in ceremonies held last night.

The sign was dedicated to the memory of Michael T. Cain, the station’s general manager who died tragically in an accidental fall from the Cliff Walk in Newport, RI in August 1991.

The neon sign, a project of late station general manager "Magic Man" Kaplan, will be visible during daylight hours and illuminated from 8 a.m. to 1 a.m., the normal on-air hours.

Assuming the duties of general manager in September 1991, Cyndy Tartabell and Kaplan, then Program Director, decided to continue where Cain left off.

“We were all saddened when we learned of Cain’s death. He was a dedicated and passionate student of radio. We will miss him greatly.”

The neon sign was dedicated last night in memory of Michael T. Cain, the Bryant student who was killed in a fall from the Cliff Walk in Newport last summer.

The sign was a project Michael was working on at the time of his death. When he first mentioned the sign to the staff members of the radio station, he said, “You know how real radio stations have neon signs, well, maybe if we got one, we’d be taken seriously.”

The decision about the sign was locked in committee until March when the plans were finally announced. Bryan is doing what it can to remember Michael, but Bryan can’t do anything to make sure something this tragic won’t happen again.

Michael was walking along the Cliff Walk in Newport early in the morning on August 6th with two friends when he accidentally slipped on mud and fell 70 feet. He was raised from where he fell and was pronounced dead in the emergency room at the nearby hospital. Cain’s accidental death resulted from head and internal injuries.

Three days after Michael’s death, snow fences made of thin slats and wire were erected at the accident site. The police report issued a few days later stated he may have slipped and fallen through an 8-inch gap caused by beach erosion between a concrete wall and a hedge.

What has the state of Rhode Island and the city of Newport done to make sure this won’t happen again? Governor Bruce Sundlun stated he was “deeply saddened” when he learned of Cain’s death. The Governor has a home on Cliff Avenue which overlooks the walk.

The Season of Our Discontent Is Upon Us

It was the year 1992. To some it was the best of times. To some it was the worst of times. But to all, it was the year of our discontent.

On the Bryant College campus, something was different. When asked what it could be, one upper-classman replied to me, "What do you mean the old Bryant apathy. It's been going on for years." His companion wasn't satisfied with that answer. He threw on his baseball cap to cover his unshowered head, and trudged off to his class, five minutes late.

When Bryant got to class, the professor wasn't there. She walked in the door a few minutes later. "Hi, everyone. Sorry I'm late--I got tied in a meeting. Oh, by the way, I'll have your tests back next week. I haven't had time to even look at them.

Later that night two students were sitting in the Bryant Center eating hot fudge sundaes. One of them began complaining to the other about the housing lottery. They were joined by another friend who was upset about the classes she preregistered for. The third girl asked her friends, "So, what do you want to do about it?"

The other two asked, "Nothing."

"Can I make an appointment with the Dean?" the student asked the dean's secretary. "I'm sorry, he's booked for the next few days, then he'll be out of town for a few days."

"Yes, there is definitely something strange going on around here. Something is rotten in Denmark, as they say."

In the years that we've been at Bryant, the something that seems to have turned sour is attitude. When we came to look at the school as prospective freshmen, everyone seemed happy and friendly--from the students and faculty, right on up through the administration.

But since then some uncontrollable factors have interrupted the shiny, happy people at Bryant. The nation hit the depths of an economic recession--a recession that hit particularly hard in New England. The Persian Gulf War sent us all in a tailspin last year. Nothing like a war to another, anotheryear.

Granted these are important problems that have changed the way we all view things, but we can't use them as a scapegoat for the discontent that seems to have smacked Bryant.

The problem pervades all levels of our community. The administrators look stressed. And the students are suffering from the fallout, but don't really know what has hit them. This isn't the same apathy that has been going on for years.

What's going on here? As business students we've been preached to repeatedly about the importance of communication in an organization, particularly communication of the necessary "ultimate and clear vision for the future." We've intensively studied different forms of leadership, and have been warned that people respond best when they feel they are part of the decision making process. Although these are things we have been studying in the classroom, it's getting harder to find concrete examples in the real world.

The phrase that comes to many students' minds is: "Do as I say, not as I do." Maybe the most important thing we should all be asking ourselves is "What exactly is going on here?"

Support All Athletes Equally

Dear Editor:

In a letter to the editor in last week's Archway concerning the lack of outlets to express cultural interests on campus, a point about athletics was made which we feel has escaped attention for too long. The article quoted one student who implied that Bryant is more concerned with athletics than with academics.

Unfortunately for non-basketball athletes at Bryant, this is not the case. As we're sure one of the authors is aware (he is a basketball player), the basketball program is the only varsity sport given any significant amount of support. At least 34 athletes receive "full rides" to attend Bryant and participate in athletics each year. All of these athletes are basketball players.

We are not trying to take away any of the significance of their effort. The fact that they attend practice daily, travel to games, and manage to keep up with their class work is admirable, and certainly deserving of reward. But there is more than one varsity program at Bryant. In the 20 years since their creation, the track and cross country programs at Bryant are two of the more successful programs at Bryant. The men's track team has won the last two Tri-State Conference Championships, is expected to win a third this year, and has come within six and one-half points of winning the last championship. The women's program, although not as successful in recent years, is the favorite to win the Tri-State conference championship this season. The next time you are walking through the MAC, take a look at the display cases next to the Coke machine. You'll find a great many championship awards for track and cross country--far more than you'll find banners flying in the gym for basketball championships.

Yet the track team gets little or no support from the athletic department. Some of the uniforms issued to the team are more than 10 years old. Up until the basketball court was replaced last year (the time of a cool quarter million dollars) Bryant operated a rubber basketball court and a concrete track. The basketball court is now one of the best in the Northeast-10 conference. The track is still concrete.

The logic for replacing the floor was its potential to cause major injuries to athletes. Basketball, however, has anyone given any thought to the potential for injuries that exist from running on a concrete track?

And just as the basketball court is used by others outside the basketball team, the track is also used by others. Many others, in fact, Executive Vice President Provost Wally Roetger is an avid runner. How about it Wally? Will Bryant ever get a new track? Or will the injury argument only be used when it's convenient to boost the college's image?

It isn't as if the basketball program is bringing in significant sums of money. Based on next year's cost to attend Bryant, the college will shell out some $418,760 on basketball players. That's not even counting equipment and travel costs.

In contrast, this year, the college will spend $1,300--five dollars per athlete per month--on meal money for track athletes. Again, this does not count equipment and travel costs. But the program this year meant over a million dollars in revenue to the college, because it is made up of students who pay their way to Bryant and continued, Support Athletes, page 3 also participate in athletics.

Track is not the only varsity program suffering from lack of support by the Bryant athletic department. Bowling was dropped as a varsity program this year, the year after it was one of two Bryant programs ranked in the nation's Top 20, and two years after a Bryant student won a national championship. Hockey, once a highly successful varsity program here, has been relegated to a club sport with little or no visibility or support on campus.

There has been a lot of talk in the past several years about starting a football program at Bryant. The cost of starting such a program has been estimated at $500,000 for the first year alone. If the money isn't available to buy the track team much needed equipment or support bowling, hockey and a whole host of other club sports, does it mean that a football program would find this $500,000 available?

We think we speak for a majority of athletes on campus when we call for increased support for non-basketball sports. It is high time for the college to support all of the athletes that participate in varsity sports. The other option is to continue varsity athletics at Bryant, an option that no one - athletes, students or administrators - wants.

and reportedly walked the path three times after the incident. He also stated in a press release dated August 9, "While the Cliff Walk is a worldwide attraction and natural treasure, a potential danger exists when tens of thousands of visitors walk the Cliff Walk, and we must eliminate that danger now."

It was stated in the August 10, 1991 issue of The Providence Journal that "For years, the city, state and federal governments, along with private groups, have searched for a way to restore and maintain the walk."

Seneca Claiborne's Covens own one of the 57 houses along the three and a half mile stretch of trail and stated he had fallen from the walk himself while jogging back in 1981. Yet, still noting was done to rectify the problem.

The city of Newport was aware of the problem for many years, but stated they hadn't the money to complete the project. The Director of the Athletic Department Captain Michael Newport and the Army Corp of Engineers and was erected approximately one month after Cain's death. There are also plans to plant trees along the area where the fence runs.

Keith W. Stokes, a senior policy aide in the Governor's office and a Newport City Council member, stated "The Cliff Walk is a rugged natural walkway. The part where Cain fell is heavily travelled and is of the steepest grade. There is a constant drainage in that area against a retaining wall."

"The fence," Stokes went on to say, "provides a clear demarcation element. It protects those who walk the path with less of a chance of falling."

There is a city ordinance in effect which states no one is allowed on the walkway between 7pm and 9pm. But, there are no gates or security measures taken to assure the ordinance is followed.

Steve Keister, "The Cliff Walk is a major tourist attraction to thousands of tourists every year. There are many people out there every day, joggers, walkers, kids - on a path that is five feet wide and there is not a lot of room for movement."

Steps have been taken over the years to assure the safety of those who walk along the path. In 1983, walls and fencing were placed for erosion control. There are portions of the path that are fenced off by either wood fences or some type of chain-link fencing.

Bob Byrons, the founder of The Cliff Walk Society, has been a member of the society for seven years. Byrons stated, "He (Cain) died for our safety, but I don't think the fence has been prevented by control."

Byrons went on to state for the Federal Department of Transportation to take over the property they would have to reevaluate with every owner of the property along the cliff. How can the property owners agree. This poses a problem because every landowner may not be willing to move their properties.

The society has given the City of Newport many ideas as to how to preserve the walkway. Fundraisers and donations are just a few of the ideas presented to the city, but they have not been acted upon.

The attraction is visited by over 300,000 tourists every year, and Byrons said that every time someone walks on the path, it wears the path down more. And without perpetual continued, Repairs, page 4

Who's Gym Is It Anyway!

Dear Editor:

Several weeks ago, I sent the Athletic Director, Leon Drury a letter concerning gym usage time. I was concerned that Bryant students were not getting first priority on the gym. In this instance many people may argue that such a complaint seems miniscule in nature. It may be, but there is a principle involved here that underlies Bryant's policies. This principle is that we have a right to Bryant College students the access to any facility before those of non-Bryant students. We (our parents) pay so many thousands of dollars a year for a college academically, socially, and recreationally.

Well, I haven't gotten much reaction out of the gym lately, how about you?

three brothers William, James, and Scott. Cain would have been a senior majoring in economics at Bryant this fall. In his three years here, Cain compiled an impressive record on the basketball floor. In 1990, he became the college's first and only Harry S. Truman Scholar, an award given to only 92 college students nationwide who considering a career in public administration. A Dean's List student, he spent the fall of 1990 studying in Washington, D.C.

On campus, Cain gave many hours of his time to numerous activities. In addition to his role as general manager of WMBF, he served as music director and disc jockey. He also housed the late-night show, "The Other Side," featuring faculty lives outside of the classroom.

Cain was an Archway Staff writer and served as the Features Editor during the Spring 1991 semester.

A debater is high school, Cain joined the Bryant debate team for the Annual Oxford Union Debate during the Spring '91 semester. The debate debate has been renamed in his memory.

A chain-link fence like this was placed around the area of the Cliff Walk where Michael Cain fell. As you can see by the divot under the fence, the path is worn in certain areas and poses a potential danger to all those who walk the path. The author stood in the divot and without the support of the fence, would have fallen to the rocks below.

O'Dell said in the August 6, 1991 issue of The Newport Daily News, referring to the place where Cain fell, "It's a bad spot. This is the third time that I know of that we've taken people out of there."

Locals stated they've heard of many people who were injured along the walkway. Not even a month prior to Cain's death, a two-year-old girl from Massachusetts was walking with her family when she wandered towards the end of the cliff and slid four feet down an eroded pathway. Luckily, her brother was nearby and pulled her to safety.

In 1987, a 20-year-old Salve Regina student was found dead 50 feet from the base of the cliff by a jogger. The medical examiner's office determined his injuries were "consistent with an accidental fall."

According to a report on December 24, 1987 issue of the Providence Journal, the student fell from a stump about 40 feet off the pathway of the Cliff Walk.

In August, the Department of Environmental Management planned to give the city of Newport money to install a four-foot tall iron chain link fence that stretches from the Forty Steps to Steep Hill Avenue. The fence, which cost under $20,000, was approved by the Coastal Resources Management Council, the Rhode Island Preservation Society, the City of

Disorderly Conduct

On Tuesday, March 31, at approximately 9:00am, a student entered the Entry Control Station (ECS) to question a parking citation. ECS informed him that the Department of Public Safety (DPS) Officer working at the ECS informed him that he would appear at the ECS Office to appeal the ticket at the DPS Office in the Unistructure. At this point, the student grew very angry and began verbally abusing the officer. The officer then ended the ECS to speak with a visitor. The visitor, identified himself as a recruiter, questioned the student's behavior. The student left the ECS very upset.

Vehicle Accident

Tuesday, March 31, 1992

At 1:55pm, a vehicle was weaving up Jacob's Drive toward the Unistructure when it struck by a second vehicle entering John Mowry Road. The second vehicle, stated by a witness, was traveling in the direction of parking lot C-4 when it failed to make a complete stop at the stop sign. The driver apparently did not see the first vehicle and proceeded to cross Jacob's Drive.

The first vehicle received moderate damage to the front left quarter panel. However, the second vehicle was struck in the grille and the front right quarter panel receiving heavy damage. The driver of the second vehicle was issued a ticket for "Driving After Endangering" and was transported to a local hospital for treatment.

Driving to Endanger

At 1:20am on April 3rd, a Department of Public Safety (DPS) Officer witnessed a student drive his motor vehicle past the stop sign in front of the County Comfort, without making any effort to stop. The officer reported that the vehicle was traveling at a very high rate of speed and that there were ten people in the roadway at the time. The driver was issued a ticket for driving to endanger and driving for the fast conditions.

This photo illustrates the close proximity of the path to the edge of the cliff. This wood fence outlines certain parts of the walk, while other areas go unprotected. You can see the rocks below and the steep drop that lies on the other side of the fence.

Maintenance, it will keep getting worse. Byron stated it was "just a matter of time" before something like this happened.

Byron went on to state the Cliff Walk "the greatest asset Newport has and for the amount of money it brings Newport every year, something should be done to keep it safe. It is sometimes referred to as the 'Jewel of Newport,' but they don't do anything about its condition."

According to the Newport, Rhode Island Guidebook, "the walk has been damaged by hurricanes and erosion over the years, but has been restored to mostly good condition by the Army Corps of Engineers. Just the same, there are several spots where the unwary tourist could take a precipitous fall off the rocks below." Stokes hopes the fencing, along with enforcement of the time constraints, will make a sensible combination so people can "enjoy it, and enjoy it safely."

It is unclear who has absolute ownership, and thus primary responsibility, for the Cliff Walk. The walkway is not owned by one individual or group. It is used as a "public right of passage" and is managed by the private owners of the property for public use.

Many people interviewed along the Cliff Walk felt the area was dangerous and something should be done to assure safety for everyone who walks it. An individual indicated that he himself had fallen and heard of several others falling as well.

Byron also stated they "have to, make it safe. Someone has to deal with the problems the Cliff Walk has. If every year we were to do a little bit to make it better, things like this can be prevented." He went on to say the society would like to place emergency equipment, like phones, along the walkway so if something did happen, they would be able to get help quickly.

A woman from Boston was quoted in the August 12, 1991 issue of The Newport Daily News as saying, "I'd have to see them (the city) take away from the beauty of it (the Cliff Walk) with fences and walls."

Sunburn noted the Cliff Walk was "a worldwide natural attraction and natural treasure."

But is the beauty worth it if it cost two families?

Answering the Answerable Question of the Universe

Michael Cain
Archway Staff Writer

As the world gets older, the answers to the same eternal questions seem less and less clear. Some of these unanswered questions are:

How will Wade Boggs ever get over his addiction to sex without treatment?

When Bird comes back will he score any points just yet at the team for making him run on a fast break?

Is Pat Sajak really just a David Letterman impersonator?

Is Arsenio Hall really just an Eddie Murphy impersonator? Rated PG?

I can understand why he drinks, but who would believe that John Tower would be rumored to Womanize?

Why are so many of the school's clocks 3 minutes slow?

Don't listen to the commercial. They only make donuts at Dunkin Donuts once a day, an by 6:00 clock at night they are usually harder than cement. Why not make them twice? Why come I never see any girls at the beach wearing Sports Illustrated's swimsuit?

Of course Brown is not elitist. About 30% of the students going there receive financial aid. After all, the school will only cost $19,380 next year?

Will Frank Bruno demolish a divorced and fired Mike Tyson or will Tyson eat him for dinner?

Is the best sport show on television Weekend Scoreboard with Bob Gunther on Channel 56, Saturday and Sunday's at 10:30?

Maybe Americans will get the picture that comes to terrorism; don't fly overseas on any American jetliners.

Why is our spring break in the middle of Winter?

Why is everybody listening to "Mike's Mix?

Is it just a coincidence that the Greenhouse effect is getting worse and God forgot the snow this winter? I know video Walkmans are cool but who wants to watch a movie on a 3 inch screen?

Why are Entertainment Tonight, PM Magazine, A Current Affair, and The Inside Story all the same?

Why have they not cancelled the USA Today TV show?

How come every time I turn on the TV, another vacationer becomes a victim to a stolen wallet?

Changing Seasons:
Winter to Spring, Lent to Easter

This Winter seems to be lingering well into what should be Springtime. Rumors of snow still creep into the forecasts. The crocus are late this year, very late. My daffodils appear confused, growing one day and then stopping for a week. I have begun to wonder if we will have the glorious Spring on Easter that so many of us count on. (And if it will warm up by Spring Weekend.)

For those of us who belong to the Christian traditions that observe the Lenten period, this late turning of the seasons seems to fit too well with the movement of the church year. The Lenten season, too, is dragging on seemingly forever. Our thoughts have turned ahead to Holy Week and especially the celebration of the Resurrection of our Lord. We long for the joy and excitement of Easter, the change in the tempo of the music and the tone of the service, as much as we long for the return of the warmth of the sun, color of the flowers, and the songs of the birds.

I find myself grasping at every possible sign that Spring has arrived, and at the same time I take every opportunity to look beyond Holy Week to Easter. And yet, I have to stop and remind myself what Spring would be without Winter, what Easter would be without Lent. Having grown up in an area that had three seasons instead of four, I can tell you it is very different. It was not until I had experienced living through Winter, that I could not appreciate fully the joy of hearing the first song of the returning songbirds, or the thrill of spotting the first crocus or the first robin.

It is not until we take seriously the mystery through Lent and the remembrance of the passion and death of Jesus Christ that we can experience fully the joy of His Resurrection that is the Easter experience.

May you have a blessed Holy Week and a truly joyous Easter.

Field Training Conducted at Bryant

by Mark A. Breslin

Last Friday was the start of a long weekend for some Bryant students. Members of the Bryant R.O.T.C. program spent their weekend in the woods, behind the rugby field, conducting tactical training.

This exercise was conducted for the Bryant cadets in the place of a training exercise scheduled for spring weekend. Bryant cadets volunteered their time to evaluate and supervise the exercise so the Bryant cadets would not miss spring weekend.

The missions consisted of squad size reactions to different tactical scenarios. The scenario included: raids, ambushes, sniper attacks, and reconnaissance missions.

Each cadet in the squad was rotated through a number of leadership positions in which they were evaluated on their tactical and technical performance.

In addition to squad missions, the Bryant junors set up a nighttime patrol base and defended it from enemy attackers, the Bryant seniors. Despite losing one cadet to a simulated hand grenade, the seniors were successful in repelling all the seniors attacks.

Saturday morning came early. They began their missions again at 5:30 in the morning and carried on until lunch. Breakfast and lunch consisted of the Army issue Meals Ready to Eat (MRE). Their training came to an end well ahead of schedule at around 3:00 Saturday afternoon. The R.O.T.C. cadre planned additional time for retesting failures. This proved unnecessary as the cadets all achieved first time "go's". The cadets moved inside to take part in an After Action Review to discuss what they had learned and observed throughout their training.

Bryant Students Put Totally Under

Frank Santos showed Bryant his hypnotic powers once again on Saturday evening. Santos has been performing regularly at Bryant for the past five years. He also performs at many clubs in the Providence area on a regular basis.

It was evident that not many people were present since Santos had trouble getting volunteers for the show. Many people were asked to take their seats after failing the first exercise. However the people on stage were not the only ones to fail under hypnosis.

One member of the audience, an Archway staff member who did not want to volunteer, fell under the power of Santos' voice. Santos had her believe that she won a lottery and the promptly joined him on stage. The evening's highlights included "appearances" by Madonna, Billy Idol, and the Righteous Brothers (played by the volunteers). You are probably wondering why Santos is supposedly R-Rated. Many of the other acts were sexually oriented.

Santos had two Marianne displaying how they have sex. The act consisted of rubbing feet together, and socks served as a contraceptive device. Surprisingly enough, the sounds that Marianne made is the same language. So if you are into imagining two 54 inch striped "wee-wee's", having "sex" in the dormitory private areas, suffering through imaginary woggies, or watching your friends make love to themselves, than do not miss Frank Santos' next performance.

The deadline. However, let me make it in before the midnight filing deadline. I'm sure that at this very moment you are busily thinking of excuses to put off filing your return until this weekend. Which is when you will put it off until next week for more self-fulfilling excuses such as hangovers. Which is how you will realize that there is no possible way you can get the thing done by Wednesday at midnight. Which is when you will pay a reputable accountant, such as H & R Block, most of your life savings to make reasonably sure that you won't get audited to the point where the IRS wants to know if that really is a glass eye.

So anyway, I usually do all of this sort of work by going down this column to some helpful tax tips that will help you to get that return in before the midnight filing deadline. However, let me make it perfectly clear up front that I've actually filed late, received my check, and spent the money, so my motivation for doing this is having been left hanging out to dry.

Helpful Tip #1: File early.

Well, it's a little too late for me, but isn't it? Every year it's the same old story. I diligently sit here at my computer cranking out helpful tax tips, most of which are even legal, and you go and ignore them! Well, next year, I just might not provide you with any helpful tax tips. So:

Helpful Tip #2: Round your figures off.

This is a useful bit of advice that has been shown to dramatically increase the returns received by filers. For example, if the line on your return asks you to report your income from wages, don't answer $35,617.31! There's absolutely no need to be that exact.

Helpful Tip #3: Itemize.

There isn't a better way to throw the IRS off your real paper trail then to keep a detailed receipt book with all of your purchases. If there aren't enough ten-key equivalents in the entire universe to figure out if you're fudging anything or not, I'm not talking about a shoe box full of receipts. I'm talking about truckloads of paper. Ask your friends for them. Make them up. Do anything to come up with receipts except raiding supermarket dumpsters - that's gross and you'll come out smelling like someone dumped the entire contents of the New York garbage barge in your living room.

Helpful Tip #4: Make use of the toll-free IRS Tax Hotline.

This is a free service provided by the IRS to anyone who files a tax return. Just dial up the hotline and listen to some goofy 22 year old accountant, just out of college, make up tax laws as they go along until you are certain that you have no better understanding of the tax laws than when you picked up the phone. Hey, they don't care, the U.S. Government is paying them (see above).

This is, of course, assuming you can even get through to listen to the wrong advice. A recent study by the IRS shows that only 1 of 20 calls coming in to the hotline actually get through.

My research turned up that the one call actually originated from a U.S.O. in the middle of a desert. Thanks to my excellent contacts with the IRS, I was able to obtain an actual transcript of that conversation:

IRS: Hello, IRS hotline, where we're right about 35% of the time.
Caller: Do you have Prince Albert in a can? (round of alien laughter in the background)
IRS: No.
Caller: Oh, OK, about how much is this? Is your refrigerator running?
IRS: That I don't know, but I can give you the average for 100,000 families that have so far resorted to knock knock jokes involving Dolly Parton and a can opener. (silence)
Caller: Me too, I'm sorry.

Hey, well, that's about all the time I have for today. I certainly hope that you will find my helpful tax tips useful as you prepare to file your return. Maybe you'd better start thinking about applying for an extension.

A Drawback to Sanity: Stress

Michael Cain
Archway Staff Writer

The leaves have all turned, creating the illusion of peacefulness in life and nature. But this illusion masks the painful horrors of midterms and semester burnout. This voracious beast often consumes one constant in college life: stress.

Most students just seem to go around the cycle of midterm and the end of the semester. No one notices until you ask your friend how his day is going and he responds, "I hate my miserable life." The transition from October to November usually coincides with the noose going up in the middle of the suites. Roommates tease each other about the ultimate sacrifice to achieve the 4.0 for the semester.

Students also change their mannerisms during this time period. Look around at all the kids biting their nails and running their fingers through their already chaotic hair. People start showing signs of Cramer Pyle/Mel Tillis disease. Ask them a question like, "How did that sociology midterm go?" and they respond with "uhh...uhhh...we...well...uhh..." In researching this topic, I noticed some common causes for stress. They include:

- I have three midterms in one day.
- Avoiding coke can is like avoiding grass.
- My preregistration number is 362.
- What happened to your cum, if you got a negative GPA for the semester?
- My parents want me to come home and help take my flag football team.
- I miss my girlfriend/boyfriend because he/she's too stressed out to call me.
- My Visa bill and phone bill came on the same day.
- We get Roast Beef Aa la Jus every other day.
- So I've created a list of the top ten ways to relieve stress when it builds up so much you cannot control it.

1. Go see Patrick Swayze's new movie Next of Kin. ("You ain't seen bad yet but it's coming.")
2. Skip all your homework for the night, after all, it might snow tomorrow and they'll cancel school.
3. Any of these suggestions might help one relieve stress. However, the most practical approach to get rid of stress is to eliminate its cause. So first isolate the cause and eliminate it. If you can't? Start with number 10.

An Actor’s Nightmare: Good Start to Finish

Angelo Corrado and Mark Filich, Archway Staff Writers

The Bryant Players opened their spring season with a production of An Actor’s Nightmare on Sunday afternoon. The performance, billed as a dessert theatre, served as a tune-up to the troupe’s production of Bye-Bye Birdie, opening this weekend to even higher expectations.

The production tells the story of a play that is actually three plays in one and the struggle the actors must go through in order to successfully pull the production off. In An Actor’s Nightmare, the scene is onstage during a production in which the actors must shift between playing The Coward, Hamlet, and Checkmate at various intervals. If that sounds confusing, it is. And that’s the actor’s nightmare. The scene opens with the actors playing the roles in The Coward. Adam Rubin is cast as actor George Spelin, who is thrust into a role which he knows nothing about. He is forced to rely on the cues of actress Meg (played by Karen Boucher) who is also the stage manager. The effort of remembering the lines is a very frustrating one at best, and Rubin did an excellent job at communicating that frustration.

Partway through the scene, George is called away, and play the title role in William Shakespeare’s Hamlet. He can’t remember his lines, and finds Horatio’s played by Gregg Zak, speech so boring that he keeps falling asleep.

The actors’ frustration at having to remember the lines of three different plays and knowing when to shift gears from one to the other was communicated through Lori Newall’s portrayal of Dame Ellen Terry. The character is a slight airhead, and reads the entire script of the combined play, including the stage direction.

The final part of the production featured Rubin playing the role of Spelin, playing the role of Sir Thomas More. Mercifully for the actors, the production is ended when The Executioner, played by George Cornelius, kills More. The strain of the effort was summed for George that he feels like, although the nightmare has finally ended, he really is going to die.

OK, are you confused? A play like this is hard to act and harder to direct. But senior Dave Lubelczyk, in his first effort as a director, did a great job of sorting the whole thing out and making An Actor’s Nightmare an enjoyable production.

Unfortunately, if you didn’t get to see it last Sunday, you’re out of luck. The Bryant Players will open their full-scale production of Bye-Bye Birdie this Friday night at 8:00 p.m. in Janikke Auditorium. They will continue with a show at 8:00 p.m. Saturday, and a matinee show on Sunday at 2:00 p.m. in addition to the 8:00 p.m. show.

Tickets are on sale at the Info Desk or at the door. Tickets cost $3.00 for students and $5.00 for everyone else. Matinee tickets are $2.00 for students and $5.00 for everyone else.

Thank you for printing my plea for the return of the baseball cards. Miraculously they appeared in my mailbox this afternoon and sit back on the shelf where they belong. Sometime, if you have the space, please say thank you to the person who was thoughtful enough to return them. It really meant a lot to me, and added to the sentimental worth of the cards.

There will be approximately 400 accepted students here with their families to take part in many different programs; they will be perusing the campus, touring the facilities, attending interest sessions, and interacting with faculty, administrators and current students.

Please welcome these prospective students and their family members to Bryant College this weekend.

The Bryant Community Spirit Award... for Someone Who Makes a Difference.

Nominations are now being accepted for the first annual "Bryant Community Spirit Award... for Someone Who Makes a Difference" which will be presented at this year's Service Awards Ceremony on Wednesday, March 6.

Honoring an individual who goes above and beyond the call of duty and makes his/her presence felt in the Bryant Community, this award may be given to any administrative, secretarial/clerical, physical plant, or public safety employee. To nominate one or more employees, please pick up a nomination form at the Information Desk in the Bryant Center, reception area in the Unistructure or the library. All members of the Bryant Community are invited to submit nominations. Completed forms should be sent confidentially to Jan Lewis, Director of Human Resources by noon, April 17, 1992.

Since faculty are honored by their peers with the Distinguished Faculty Award, the Council of Administrators felt it would be appropriate to commemorate our appreciation for other dedicated employees as well. Therefore, we have initiated the "Bryant Community Spirit Award... for Someone Who Makes a Difference." We look forward to your support and nominations. For more information on this award, please contact Bill Baker at x6345.

The University of Connecticut won the New England Collegiate Volleyball League Men's A Championships held at here last Saturday.

Bryant finished the tournament with a disappointing 2-6 record. Flight 'B' represented the teams seeded 11-20 in New England Volleyball.

The top ten seeds battled it out in New Hampshire and American Col­lege taking the Flight 'A' Championship.

Joining Bryant in the field of ten were Tufts, Babson, Wesleyan, Williams, UConn, WPI, MIT, and Colby. Bryant's team scored 139 against UConn.

It was a fun and exciting day from the first serve at 9:30 to the final kill served at 5:30. The level of play was intense, and the games were highly competitive, keeping the field close.

The semi-final matches pitted Tufts versus Worcester State, while UConn squared off with Williams. Babson finished first and was pre­valued as champion by defeating Tufts 15-9, 15-9, 15-9.

Bryant's team lost six of their games, but they gained some satis­faction in wins against Williams and Wesleyan. Bryant's day started out on a sour note, as the team dropped two close games to Wesleyan, but they re­bounded in the next games by split­ting with Tufts.

Bryant's hopes of advancing were dimmish when they suffered two straight defeats to Babson, 15-13, 15-13. Those are games we should have won," said club co­captain, Joey Martorelli.

Bryant still, already eliminated, played out the stretch successfully with a tough Williams team.

Bryant's teamDonal­ized its season of frustration within record of 3-5.

Assistant Coach, Elizabeth Cullins commented, "This season was full of ups and downs for the team. They beat some tough oppo­nents, but their inconsistency really hurt them."

Bryant was led this season by the powerful hitting of sophomore Luis Ydrach and is looking forward to Living next season with two more re­turning starters; John O'Brien and Aaron Schram.

They had a couple more players in tryouts next fall, com­bined with the talent we already have, we will be a very dangerous team next season," said Schram.

Soccer Host Alumini

On Saturday April 4th the men's soccer team went up against some of their ex-team members in the alumni game. The alumni lost the game 2-0 but put up a good fight against the present team.

Playing for the alumni were Steve Buonacqua, Paul Alderucci, Tim Lawlor, Mike Bullen, John Picciottelli, Joe Scalamoni, Ed Sullivan, Tom Otoole, and Ted Hovman.

The game was very competitive and entertaining but neither team let their get in the way of having a good time. Laug­hter could be heard out on the field as well as in the stands.

The teams originally were only going to play one forty minute half but continued the game playing two halves.

Scoring for the current men's team were Scott Calabrese and Mike Stupnowski.

Both teams put in a hard effort and had a good time. The game turned out to be a success for the present team and they look forward to playing their next alumni game.

Women's Golf Team Being Formed

by Angela Cerrand

Dr. Kris Kennedy, professor of mathematics at Bryant, has been trying to start a women's golf team for the last six years. In the past not enough women have come out to form a team. Kennedy hopes that will change this year.

Because golf is a two-season sport, Kennedy has lost some of her players to other sports. "It's hard to get girls who want to play golf but some girls definitely want to play."

the normal NHL cities.

Team owners feel it would be possible to bring some games in other cities, possibly in the south or even Europe.

They contend these two games would be helpful in locating strong markets for expansion and would increase the amount of people who follow hockey.

For the most part, the public has been on the side of the players.

Says senior hockey fan Pat Mahler, "The players acted in good faith by playing most of the season without a contract, although I feel that the two sides are to blame, management is more at fault."

In this writer's opinion, the sea­son will not resume this year, and it may even begin late next year.

Thank God for no playoffs, the New York Rangers would have won the Stanley Cup for the first time in 53 years.

So Son fans, does that sound familiar?

The women's softball team is off to a rocky start this season. The girls played six games in three days losing all six of the conference games dropping their record to 0-6 on Sunday. The games, which were all doubleheaders, were played against Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas. "The girls are playing hard against the competition and are showing improvement," said coach Bob Poss.

Highlights in one of the games were Meg Lashbury's three RBI's off Arkansas. The team is averaging an average of .230. The second game was very close, as Texas won 1-0. In the third game of the doubleheader, Lashbury batted .300.

A couple of the games were very close for the Lady Indians, and could have gone either way. Coach Reall has put the games behind them and continues to get ready for the rest of the season.

NHL Strike Will Affect Playoffs
by Mike Boulé

April 1, 1992 was probably the cruellest day for diehard hockey fans. Twenty-five years ago, the NHL's Board of Governors voted to go on strike for the first time in its history. The NHLPA decided to go on strike as a result of several issues.

For the NHLPA was an issue of the number of games players were being asked to play. The league has been trying to increase revenues from the television contract and has been asking players to play more games. The players, however, were not willing to go along with the idea.

On April 1, 1992, the NHLPA announced that they would not continue to play. The league was in a state of flux for the next two months.

The NHLPA wanted to negotiate a new contract that would give players better pay. The league refused to negotiate and the strike lasted until May 20, 1992. The two sides finally came to an agreement and the players returned to the ice.
