Police controlling the crowd at Saturday night’s protest outside the Entry Control Station.

Hundreds of Bryant students, in a show of anger against the administration, staged a two-hour protest in front of President William E. Trueheart’s home Saturday night. The protest was multi-issue oriented, but centered around their dissatisfaction with the alcohol policy. At approximately 10:30 Saturday night, Public Safety and the Smithfield Police Department confiscated three kegs from a sorority house. Smithfield officials returned to Bryant a half hour later to find a group of students causing a disturbance in front of Trueheart’s home. The protest drew 31 police cars from nine neighboring towns, such as North Providence, Johnston, Glocester and state police. Camera crews from television stations WJAR Channel 10 and WPRO Channel 12 were also on hand.

Dean of Students F.J. Talley stated he was “dissatisfied and disappointed” when he heard of the disturbance. "Our Safety Director, George Coronado, said the students clearly let the administration know of their opposition to the enforcement of the alcohol policy,” by having the demonstration.

Students spoke over police microphones trying to voice their concerns, but the crowd was not receptive. "It wasn’t until action was provoked that the students mainly started to head home. Reportedly there were a number of students at the protest who had genuine concerns, while others were there just to see what was going on," said Talley.

Full-Time MBA Graduate Program Established

Kelly A. Cartwright
Archaive Staff Writer

For the first time in its 129 year history, Bryant College has introduced a full-time graduate program. The program was pulled together last year by Janet Daniels, then Director/Associate Dean of Faculty of Graduate School, and Wayne Lima, Director of Graduate Admissions. Daniels has since left Bryant for a position at the University of Hartford in Connecticut. This summer, Dr. Ron DiBattista, Associate Professor of Management, was named Interim Director of Graduate School while a national search is conducted.

Last year the program organizers set a goal of enrolling 20 students in the full-time program this semester to deem the program a success. There are currently 37 students enrolled as full-time graduate students.

According to DiBattista, the full-time Master of Business Administration (MBA) program differs from the part-time graduate program already in place in several important ways. The full-time program offers day classes. There are currently four day classes running, each one meeting from 2-4:15 pm on one day a week.

Because there are no classes held on Fridays, a series of fieldtrips and forums of guest speakers from the business community have been set up for the students. Enrollment in this full-time day program does not preclude a graduate student from taking a course at night. A student can take up to five courses per semester. For students who earn their undergraduate degree from Bryant, the full-time MBA degree can be completed in one calendar year, because many of the “common body of knowledge” courses are taken as part of the undergraduate program.

The school grants a waiver for the following courses if the student earned a B or better as an undergraduate: Accounting, Management Information Systems, Microeconomics, Financial Management, Legal Environment for Business, Organizational Behavior, Productions and Operations Management, Marketing Management, and Statistics 1 and II.

One of the perks of being a full-time graduate student is the opportunity to be involved in the Graduate Research Assistance Program. This involves working as a research assistant, not a teaching assistant for a concentration department. Graduate Research Assistants have their tuition waived.

Because the full-time students are on campus more often than the part-time, a “Full-Time MBA Graduate Lounge” has been set up on the second floor of Hallman House on campus.

Other steps were taken to meet the special needs of the new full-time students. "A week-long orientation session was held the week before classes," said DiBattista. Full-time graduate orientation included meeting the first four instructors that the students would have in class: Jeff Harkins, Accounting; Sam Mirranda, Economics; Phyllis Schumacher, Statistics, and Ron DiBattista, Organizational Behavior.

The students were also given a brief introduction to each of the campus services they pay to use, as well as sessions in Word Perfect, Lotus, MicroTab, and case methodology.

DiBattista explained a novel approach is being taken in the classes that this year’s full-time students are taking. "The instructors are using one case (involving L.L. Bean), so each instructor lends their expertise to the same case.”

As such, the four instructors are forced to work more closely together. “It’s a nice approach to give the instructors working and talking together,” DiBattista added.

Enrollment in this full-time day program does not preclude a graduate student from taking a course at night. A student can take up to five courses per semester. Participants in Saturday’s Twister-A-Thon for FACTS.

The Commuter Connection held its first annual Twister-A-Thon to benefit the Family AIDS Center for Treatment and Support (FACTS) Saturday Sept. 20. In addition, the Commuter Connection raised money from last Friday’s Drex Down Day and T-shirt sales, Donations from professors and Winthrop’s Hallmark included baby food, cickets and toys. There are currently two FACTS houses in Providence which provide care for babies and children that are HIV positive.

FACTS is the only organization of its kind in the country; although it is staffed by medical personnel, it is located in a house, not a hospital type atmosphere. As a relatively new organization which started in 1989, FACTS is in need of support especially since it has come under recent budget cuts. Gilmore, Vice President of the Commuter Connection, FACTS is staffed round the clock by doctors and nurses and is closely associated with the Rhode Island Hospital’s AIDS clinics. Currently, there are six HIV positive children at the FACTS house. They come from various ethnic backgrounds and different socio-economic levels.

"It eliminates any AIDS stereotypes when you see the children," said Gilmore. In the future, the FACTS house will continue to provide a much needed service to the local area with the help of numerous volunteers.
The Trickle Down Effect

Trickle, TRICKLE. Drop, DRIP: It seems like just another drop in the bucket.

Last weekend a large group of students took to the streets (well, Jacobs Drive, anyway) in protest. As the local media pointed out, most college protests are centered on important political or moral issues, but this issue was about alcohol.

The feelings about Saturday’s impromptu rally are mixed. Some students think what they did was wonderful. They subscribe to the “Yeah, we showed them” school of thought. A lot of other people subscribe to the “Yeah, you guys ended up looking like fools and ruined your chances of being viewed as responsible adults” school of thought.

The media and the college’s neighbors effectively characterized the protest as laughable. “With all the bigger issues in the world, why are students rallying about beer?” they wonder;

An alumni who works for a major international company in the local area offered an alternative view to that question. His theory: the students of Bryant College are reacting to campus wide oppression and poor morale due to a variety of administrative boo-boos. (Even the President isn’t equipped to patch this up with the biggest bandage in their first aid kit). If this alarm explains is, the students are acting their anger about the recent staff cut-backs and a variety of other issues. Instead of attacking what they view as the real issues, they react to what affects them most directly: drinking rules and regulations.

It’s really an age old theory, much like the theory in politics that constituents won’t react until they get hit in their pocket book. Which brings us to another point. If you are upset about the going-ons of the administration or are appalled by the reactions of students last Saturday night, you’re not going to be really generous when donation time rolls around.

Let’s see the business minds of Bryant College can follow this logic. People who graduate become known as alumni. Alumni often go on to get jobs. Some of these jobs pay a lot of money. Some of these jobs are with big, powerful companies. (Still with us? Now it’s a little trickier.)

Alumni who have positive feelings for their alma mater are notorious for donating money to that institution. As this college likes to point out, alumni are also an important resource for future graduates. (Ask the Alumni Office.) Alumni who are disillusioned are not only less likely to donate their money, but also their time and effort in terms of helping other graduates of the same institution.

If you follow the logic, you probably have one question remaining: where does this affect me? Considering another drop in the bucket. But remember, enough drops in the bucket and the bucket overflows. (Or the bottom of the bucket nouts out.)

Former Chaplain Responds to Charges

Dear Editor:

On a recent visit back to Rhode Island, I had occasion to pay a visit to the Smithfield campus where I spent nearly nine years as Catholic campus minister (1980-89). These were exciting and wonderful years for me.

As I toured the buildings of this sanctuary on Labor Day, I noticed several changes. New students, with evident enthusiasm, were walking across the paths; the familiar Canada geese were encamped on the circle (I remember when the first ten arrived one fall, 1981, I believe); the small prayer chapel has been converted, apparently, to meeting room, I was sorry to note.

More than these visible signs of continuity and change, I noted in the issue of The Archway that was available that day a most subtle and, perhaps, most troubling symbol of the “new” Bryant. The loss of some key personnel during the summer months and some of the response to these raises some serious questions.

Many of these are being asked by students, administrators, faculty and staff, all I could see. I hope that satisfactory answers are worked out as the year unfolds.

Sincerely,

(Rev.) David J. Norris

The uppermost question in my mind, without being privy to all the factors entering into the decisions made, is the human question, the question of quality people, mostly in the area of student services, being summarily let go. Can a school’s, even a business school’s, commitment to its primary constituency, namely the students, be well served under these circumstances? What kind of institutional loyalty can be engendered in those discharged and in those who remain?

From far away, yet with still much affection and concern for the people of Bryant College, I hope that people can work together there to respond to such questions and concerns. Establishing a spirit of blamed or, in an appropriate context, a spirit of signed loyalty is a way to do that. The people of Bryant.

Another Unhappy “Customer”

Dear Dr. William Trachtenberg,

I am still having a problem with understanding, or possibly accepting, the recent cuts that happened on July 22, 1992. I have not yet come to realize how you can move around so much as the Registrar or the Vice President of Student Affairs. These positions were essential to the college and still are if you ask me.

When I started here in September of 1990, I thought this college was the best college around. Now I’m entering my junior year, and I want to transfer. The first class I ever took here was Introduction to Business. Obviously one you never took! I really only remember one thing from this class, but it’s probably the most important thing; the best way to run a business (and that’s what you seem to be trying to do) is to hire sufficient personnel to cover the different aspects of your business. The greater the personnel, the more efficient and well run your business will be. I’m assuming you didn’t know this.

Honestly, do you really think I’m going to believe that Wally Ronger can oversee that many departments? And now that Financial Aid is overseeing student employment, there have been problems with the students not receiving their paychecks on time. Everything seems to be in chaos and I really don’t think you can handle everything by letting it all go, except maybe how you can virtually turn an entire college against you. The students, faculty, and administrators have been in an uproar since July 22 and they probably won’t stop until you realize that you’ve made a mistake.

There are over 2,000 students who live on campus and more who commute. You expect to have only one man in charge of 50 activities. What made you think that this needed to be changed after so many years? F.J. Talley and Lee Labond were both very busy before dealing with all of the student activities, and now you expect that F.J. can handle everything all at once? This is a joke!

I don’t know where you get the notion that this is better for the College. Maybe you assumed these cutbacks would save the College some money. NOT! A college is a non-profit organization and, somehow, I really can’t believe that all of the students’ tuition money is spent on the students and their education. I can’t stop thinking about how people you hurt when you decided to downsize the College.

Don’t think you have heard the last of me - you’ll be here. By the time I graduate in 1994 you won’t be in office anymore. Maybe someone who really knows how to run a college in the students’ best interest will. You keep reminding us on how you’ve had a drop in enrollment. Did you ever consider they may be looking at the low quality job you are doing and realize you’re not here for the students but for the faculty? And, please don’t take this in a prejudiced manner. That’s the funniest thing from my mind.

A student ’94

Larceny

On Monday, September 14, 1992, at 5:45 p.m., a staff person in the Information Technology Center reported to the Department of Public Safety of the theft or the theft of some computer equipment. An employee stated he was called to retrieve some computer equipment from Hall 15 Study Lounge by those occupying the building during the summer. The employee reported he had rapidly retrieved a total of five (5) computers from the lounge, as well as a storage room within the building. He also secured the equipment together using a steel cable and high security lock.

At the beginning of the semester, when the employee returned to the storage room to remove the computers, he found only four (4) units. The Smithfield Police Department (SPD) was notified and a formal report was filed on a larceny report. The incident is presently under investigation.

Soliciting

A disturbance was reported outside Hall 15. The responding DPS Officer found three (3) females arguing with a male student. The student stated that he had purchased some cocaine from the females and that he wanted his money back. The DPS Officer requested identification from the suspects, which they failed to produce. The officer then requested the name of their employer. The suspect produced this information and were escorted off campus. A letter of trespass has been sent to the employer.

Fight

A DPS Officer was dispatched to a disturbance in Residence Hall 13. When he arrived, the officer encountered a student who claimed that three (3) individuals entered his suite and began pushing and punching those within the suite. The student, who sustained most of the injuries, gave DPS a complete description of the suspects. DPS officers located three (3) individuals outside Hall 15 who matched the descriptions given. The victim confirmed the suspects’ identities and SPD was requested. SPD responded and arrested the suspects, transporting them to SPD headquarters. The suspects have been arraigned and scheduled to appear in court shortly.

Note from the Department of Public Safety

A reminder: All guests must be registered at DPS (232-6001) by 6:00pm daily.

Safety Tip of the Week

Hello, my name is Ben Garfield.

I hope to help people with their computer problems. I have worked at the Koffler Center for over a year now, and I have had many different jobs over there. Some of my jobs included installing software, setting up professors' computers, repairing computers, and helping students with their problems.

Because of my experiences, I am familiar with several types of programs and can help with some hardware problems. Some of the programs I am familiar with are WordPerfect; 5.1, Lotus 123, Windows, Dos, PageMaker 4.0, CorelDraw!, Harvard Graphics, and several others. In coming weeks I will try to give basic but useful information to help you with your computer work. If you would like some help just send a letter to the Archway, and I will be happy to help you in any questions you have.

One of the most common and essential commands in the use of computers is the Format command. It seems like there are a good many people that do not know how to format a disk. This is the one thing I feel everyone should know. Formatting a disk is not hard. There are just a couple things a person should know.

First of all, the person should know what the "Density" the disk drive of the computer they are using. Density stands for how much storage is possible on the disk. High Density drives store more than Low Density. You can always format a High Density disk to Low Density, but the price of a High Density disk is more expensive than a low density disk, so you are spending more money than you have to.

There are two ways to tell if you have a High Density disk. If the movable metal cover is facing away from you, there is an "HD" in the upper right hand corner. The other way is that there are two holes in the corners of the disk. All of the computers in the Koffler center that have WordPerfect are Low Density. All of the computers on the main floor are High Density. The computers to the left of the print booth are High Density also.

When you know what type of disk and what type of disk drive the computer has, you can figure out what to format the disk to. If either of the answers are Low Density, format the disk to Low Density. If both of the answers are High Density, format the disk to High Density.

All that is left is to format the disk. Load up the computer. Then put the disk you want to format in the computer. To format a disk to High Density just type FORMAT. The drive you want to format to. So the command would look like FOR-

M A T B: To format a disk to Low Density just type Format (the drive you want to format P:750. So the command would look like FOR-

M A T B: P:750.

Ode on a Pearly Ke

Let me sing of what's worthwhile, the beautiful, the peace, the current smile.
Let me do of what is right, truth-freedom, love-friendship, to heal the human plight.

Why speak you of pearly things of legs, and legs, and legs of beer?

While the world goes crazy, grows old, and sighs from indifference, eradic bigotry, and ignorance may die.

My friends, heed well this why and wherefore of this simple ode to make a difference, by shouldering each other's sufferings and carrying each other's load.

Workshops and Peer Instructors

Do you know how to quickly obtain a list of books published for "business plans" in the past three years? Could you find a single page in a collection using the online book catalog? Do you know the numerical techniques for finding scholarly research in business using the ABI/Inform?

Begin the week of September 29, the library will offer afternoon workshops for novice and intermediate users of our compact disk products. We hope to enhance your library research skills and increase your efficiency at computer workstations.

This offering is the result of feedback received from the student body about using the compact disk products. Many users have found it helpful to use the compact disk products for research in their academic work. Our goal is to provide training for our novice and intermediate users so that they can make the best use of this valuable resource.

Camp All American

by Sean Canady

While most Bryan College students look for summer employment or just spend a few summer weeks at home, six junior soybean farmers will be attending the Camp All American program. This program is designed to provide training for those who are interested in working in the agricultural industry.

The program is divided into two parts: classroom and fieldwork. The classroom portion includes lectures on various agricultural topics such as crop production, pest management, and soil conservation. The fieldwork portion involves hands-on experience in the fields and on the farms.

The cost of the program is $200 per person, which includes tuition, room, and board. Scholarships are available for those who need them.

The program is open to all agricultural students and those who are interested in working in the agricultural industry. For more information, please contact the Office of Continuing Education at 543-1234.

Fontanella was at the protest trying to figure out what the students wanted to hear. Fontanella stated, "They wanted to hear things we couldn't tell them. They want to know why." Senior Mike Yaffe stated, "I'm still in favor of the policy." Students who went to see the protest cited "upset" and "angry" because they have concerns and they feel the administration can speak for them.

Students also feel they have been treated unfairly by their RA's and by Public Safety. Although these groups are supposed to be enforcing these policies, some "just walk away from it," according to the students. Many students feel the administration can speak for them.

The administration first became aware of the students’ opposition to the policy at last Wednesday's Senate meeting. President Tomato, Chief Tomato, F.T. Tally and Bob Sloss were at this meeting to answer student questions, as well as to gain the student's support on enforcing the policy. F.T. Tally indicated there would be no enforcement if the students agreed to propose their own policy. According to Fontanella, the students have not agreed to this proposal.

The administration proposed a "trial period" to see how the enforcement would work. If the reduction of fines has an impact, and outside drinking are done responsibly, then next semester a "more lenient" policy will be put in place. If the policies are not followed, then the administration will consider more severe penalties.

Yaffe stated that the "responsibility of the students" is the key issue. The administration wants to reward students who are "responsible." If the students are "responsible," then the administration will consider more lenient policies.

Yaffe stated that "responsible" students "will not be entitled to any penalties." If the students are "responsible," then the administration will consider more lenient policies.

"The administration has to feel they can trust the students," and the only way this can be proven is through responsibility. Since the protest, student leaders have met with the administration to discuss the alcohol policy and negotiate an agreement acceptable to both sides. At a three-hour meeting on Monday, student leaders negotiated for the reduction of fines for having an open container for those students. Students 21 and over to $10 for a first offense and $25 for a second offense. Drinking on the front porches of townhouses was also proposed. This proposal will be given to higher administration officials this week, and an answer is expected next week.

At the meeting, Yaffe stated that the possibility of legalization of kegs on campus was discussed. The administration wants to see what is going to happen before taking any action. If the students are "responsible," then the administration will consider more lenient policies. Yaffe stated that the "possibility of legalization of kegs on campus was discussed. The administration wants to see what is going to happen before taking any action." If the students are "responsible," then the administration will consider more lenient policies.

Fontanella continued, "We're looking at the possibility of legalization of kegs on campus. The administration wants to see what is going to happen before taking any action." If the students are "responsible," then the administration will consider more lenient policies.

Fontanella concluded by saying, "It's up to the students. They always said they had no authority; they don't. They will have no one to congratulate or blame but themselves."

THE DEVIL, YOU SAY! Wednesday, October 21, 7:30 P.M.

A literary montage of Twain, Milton, and the Bible, "The Devil, You Say"! is a conversation with the Prince of Darkness. A chat; a tele-a-tete... and indifference is not allowed. This is a stunning and provocative look at man's concept of evil, a timely experience not soon to be forgotten. Please note: Not recommended for children.

BEAC

by Marla Real工程

Last Tuesday was our first meeting of the semester and we had a great turnout for the information-mal meeting. The BEAC board would like to encourage you to regularly attend our meetings. The agenda is filled with educational and fun events. If you missed our first meeting, it's not too late. In our discussion at the first meeting, we found the top environmental concerns of Bryant students are: water pollution, starting recycling in their home towns, rainforests and the greenhouse effect.

RECYCLING TIP: The following items can all go in the recycling bins in the suites: milk cartons, soda bottles, glass bottles, aluminum bottles, #1 and #2 plastics, shampwino bottles and all colored glass.
Please inform your friends and roommates! Also, please recycle the newspapers in the dorms. They will be placed separately in a brown paper bag.

After talking with you, we realized the overwhelming concern for water pollution. Therefore, the special guest at our next meeting will be Dr. Doug Levin, oceanographer.
It will be a laid back, casual format open for questions and answers.
Please come join us on Thursday,
October 1 at 6:00 in the Dorm 16
Lobby. Any new members are welome. Please bring your $5.00 dues to this meeting. We look forward to helping you help the Earth!

Now that school is back in full effect, one thing is about to spice up the fall; that is intramural football.
We are expecting another strong showing from our team, but the biggest surprise is going to be from our "b" team. Behind the rocket arm of Mike Lasko and our tough offensive and defensive lines, we are going to win the whole thing.
Their first game is Wednesday and everyone should witness this media event. This weekend was interesting as usual.

BMA

by Michael Gannon

Welcome back! For those of you who were unable to attend our intramural meeting on Wednesday, September 16, don't despair. The first meeting's function was to inroduce the executive board and question both past and new members. Turnout was great and we still need your creative and innovative minds for upcoming projects.

Come on out and work on a logo for the 1992-1993 BMA T-shirt drive and we will greatly appreciate your help. We meet every other Wednesday at 7pm in Papito.
If you have any ideas, questions, or problems, feel free to send a note to BMA-BOX 5 or stop by townhouse-A-8 and ask for Doug Prevost. We're looking forward to a fun year and we'd love to hear from you or see you at our next meeting: Wednesday, September 30 at 7pm in Papito dining room-ens to Teppes. All Majors Welcome!!

I would like to welcome everyone back. I hope things are beginning to fall into place. This Thursday the Student Alumni Association (SAA) will be sponsoring an Open House. Student Senate

by Christine Gianetti

Hello Bulls! On behalf of the Student Senate I’d like to thank everyone for attending last week’s meeting. We had quite a turnout. In reference to the alcohol policy, there will be a meeting this past Monday between some representatives of Senate and the administration. There is a proposal being considered for the fines for 21 year olds and over being caught with open containers. The fines may be reduced to $10 for the first offense, and $25 for the second. Also being considered is the proposal of drinking in front of the townhouses. The exact dimensions of how far one must be from the townhouse will be determined later. These privileges are on a trial basis, so don’t abuse them. Let’s show them how responsible we can be. There will be future meetings between student leaders and the administration to put further positive gains in this area.

Also, at last week’s meeting, junior senator Jeff Davis made a motion for the recitation of the pledge to be made public. With no comments from any senators or members of the administration, the motion carried.

This upcoming weekend, Sept. 25 & 26, the Student Senate will be going to Bangor to help other students in their skills in leadership training.

All Senate meetings are on Wednesdays at 4:00 in the Pappas Dining Room, located in the Bryant Center. Anyone is welcome, so come and see your representatives! Have a great weekend!

Cross Country Finishes Strong at St. Anselm’s Invitational

Katie Pess
Archway Sports Writer

Both women’s and men’s cross-country ran well at the St. Anselm’s College Shackleton Invitational this past weekend placing first and third out of nine respectively. Coming in first for the lady Irish, and fourth overall, was sophomore Heather Crones with a time of 20:20. Following closely behind was Mandy Lapierre, who finished fifth overall at 20:21.

Bryant finished strong taking spots eleven through fourteen also. The finishers were Jill Decker 20:51, Maureen Salmon 20:56, Karen Palczynski 21:10, and Laura Zegzdryn 21:16, respectively. Other finishers for Bryant include Kellie McDermott, Karen Calderoni, Jackie Chomine, Jessica Duval, Jodi Russo, and Jen Gualti.

As Jill Decker and Karen Palczynski recover from recent injuries coach Charlie Mandeville is still very optimistic about the season. “The girls are running well. Heather and Maureen are looking strong and Mandy is really shaping up,” said Mandeville.

As for the men’s team, they are looking just as good finishing third overall.

According to sophomore runner Brent Oullette the team has a lot of depth this year and everyone is running very well. “We are all close together and that’s what gets the points,” said Oullette.

In a strong pack taking spots nine, ten, and eleven were Pete Gosselin, Tom Gaspar, and Mike Walsh. Completing the top five, which are needed for scoring, were James Hol and Brent Oullette, who came in eighteenth and twenty-second respectively.

Also representing Bryant were Mark Livingston, Mike Ricci, George Johns, Jeff Vack, Mike Dailey, Paul Dailey, Steve Michaud, and Dave Newman.

The men’s team is also looking strong this season and hope to continue to do well. “This is the best team we’ve had in a long time and we are looking forward to a good finish in the NE 10’s,” said Oullette.

Both teams look forward to a great season and continue this Saturday at Rhode Island College.

Women’s Volleyball Hopes to Learn From Mistakes

Angelo Corradino
Archway Sports Writer

The women’s volleyball team hosted the Bryant Invitational last Saturday, and are looking to use this as a stepping stone for the rest of the season.

On Tuesday the team traveled to Sacred Heart and were victorious 15-8, 15-6, 15-10. Everyone played, including the freshman, which is a good experience according to coach Karen Mendes.

The tournament began on a high note, for Bryant they defeated St. Michael’s 15-9, 15-3, 15-15, 15-8. They then began to slide losing to Dowling College 16-18, 11-15, 14-16.

“ar to host a tournament of this caliber at home so early in the season is a good way to prepare for the rest of the season,” Mendes said.

“Three of the teams who participated were ranked in the top five, and it’s good competition.”

The lady Indians were then defeated by Bentley in the semi-finals to place third overall.

“We didn’t start our season as early as the other teams did,” Mendes stated.

“They have already been playing for a week and a half and had more time to fine tune their problems.”

Coach Mendes also looks at this as a way to improve.

“The girls know they can play at that level now and realize that it’s going to take a lot of hard work.”

Team leaders are also showing their form.

Sophomore Maria Bras is already leading the team in every category but two, and has been player and is extremely successful at what ever she does.”

As for the team Mendes was very pleased with the way they played.

“Overall I was pleased because it was a learning experience,” Mendes said.

“To play Bentley and Dowling and lose made the girls want to work harder. Monday’s practice was fantastic. Everyone worked hard and wouldn’t give up.”

The team’s next match will be at home on Monday against UMass Lowell at 7:00 p.m., they will then travel to Bentley Tuesday.

Women’s Tennis Opens With Win

Yesterday they defeated Springfield 6-3.

Dana Tessier, Mara Levey, and Shay Poulin were all victorious in singles.

The team of Tabitha Kent and Levey, Tessier/Amy Polasek, and Colleen Shepard/Heather Donahue all went into the third set of their respective matches, and came up victorious.

Senior Heather Donahue won 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 at #1, sophomore Tessier (#2) won 4-6, 7-6(7-3), 6-1, and freshman Colleen Dykas also won 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

Donahue easily at #4 was sophomore Tabitha Kent 6-1, 6-2, Levey, a freshman from Minnesota, crushed through her match 6-0, 6-3.

Number 6 Poulin, a senior, won 6-3, 7-5, to lock up the victory for Bryant.

Double was also as exciting. At #1 Kent and Levey dragged out into another three set match winning 6-5, 6-4, 7-6(2).

Playing #2 was the duo of Tessier and Amy Polasek and #3 was the new team of Colleen Shepard and Katie Coates, both in losing efforts.

Samantha Libby and Pam Bowman then battled back from 1-5 in their first set to win the match.

Working together, under the coaching of Robert Cocker, the lady Indians have high hopes of a great season.

Today, the team will travel to Quinnipiac, and Friday to Umass Dartmouth. This Saturday they will be in Newport for the Grass Court Tournament.

Men’s Soccer Starts Slow

Angelo Corradino
Archway Sports Writer

The men’s soccer team went 0-2-1 last week as they kicked off their 1992 season.

On Saturday the team played Stonichill ending in a scoreless tie. Then they played #14 in the nation, Scared Heart, on Thursday and lost 0-1.

“We played a couple of top twenty teams and the games were very competitive,” senior Co-captain Chris McLeod said.

The team also played #4 Franklin
