AACSB Accreditation: "Building block" of academic strength

Julia Arcavi
Archway Staff Writer

Associate Vice President/Dean of Faculty, Dean Patterson, spoke at the Student Senate meeting yesterday in the Pepito Dining Room to inform students of the AACSB accreditation Bryan is currently seeking.

Patterson called the AACSB accreditation a "building block" to increasing the academic strength of the college. There are currently 653 schools in the United States and 78 international institutions that hold AACSB accreditation.

Bryant, chief executive, bentley and babson have AACSB accreditation, as Patterson stated, "This puts us at a slight disadvantage in recruiting." Application for AACSB is voluntary and takes approximately two years for approval or rejection. Preparation begins by hiring faculty, undergoing a completion of self-study and it is reviewed by AACSB bodies and finally a decision. Currently, Bryant is halfway through the completion of self-study. There is a fifty-five percent rate for accreditation. According to Patterson, all those involved are "working hard to not have a rejection." The earliest Bryant could receive accreditation is April, 1994.

The AACSB accreditation review process looks at such areas as the admission of students, curriculum, various facilities, and personnel. Patterson cited the area of personnel as the cause of "the most stress and strain." In order for accreditation to occur, some of the faculty must have Ph.D.'s and 75% of the faculty must be full time.

There are several arguments for and against accreditation. Arguments against accreditation is that it is expensive, it will make the business program look like others, it keeps talented teachers out of the classroom, and others say that one case study has accreditation or not. Patterson responded to these arguments by saying many employers do care if you come from an accredited school. "It does not say it on your diploma, but there is the reputation of the school," said Patterson.

Receiving accreditation means the school will be an effective indicator of quality, both domestically and internationally, assist graduates seeking jobs and will help in the recruiting of top quality students.

After Patterson concluded his speech, fielded questions from the Senators. Sophomore Senator Maureen Mabile asked if accreditation would affect the students financially. Patterson stressed, "the cost is already behind us" and the investment has been made. Therefore, tuition increases as a result of AACSB are not expected.

Clintont Wins Presidential Election by Landslide

12 year GOP era ends

Kelly A. Carwight
Archway Staff Writer

Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton won the popular vote in the race for the United States presidency Tuesday after promising change to a discontented electorate. According to political analysis, Clinton and his running mate Senator Al Gore won the election by splitting former Republican strongholds.

Most notably, Clinton fared well with Catholics, suburbs, independents, moderates and Reagan Democrats, all of whom were key to the GOP's 12 year presidential dominance.

Clinton finished strongly in all regions of the country. He won nearly all major voter groups. Polls indicate the Clinton/Gore ticket won among women by a wide margin. In beating Bush among white voters, 42 to 39 percent, Clinton became the first Democrat in nearly 30 years to carry the white vote. According to the November 4th Providence Journal, Clinton and Gore ran "strongly everywhere, among young and old, black and white, men and women."

With such a diverse backing, Clinton won by decisive margins in many important, closely contested states, including Michigan, Missouri, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Illinois, and Georgia. Clinton also swept all of New England, much of the mid-west and south, as well as the west coast. Winning states with large numbers of electoral votes, like California (54 votes) and New York (33 votes) helped ensure the Democrat's win.

The Clinton/Gore victory was announced by television networks ten minutes before the polls closed in the far west, although challenger Ross Perot had conceded to Clinton around 10:30 pm (EST). George Bush publicly conceded around 11:15 pm (EST).

Both Perot and Bush called on their supporters to work with the newly elected administration. Perot said, "The American people have spoken, and they have chosen Bill Clinton." He called for a big round of applause for Clinton from his own supporters, and then warned them, "We need to work all together, the new administration...The hope that we have, the dream of us...be an achievement...this is not the time for us to throw in the towel."

Bush reiterated, "The people have spoken and we respect the majority of the democratic system."

"America must always come first," he added. "I ask that we stand behind our new president despite our differences."

After acknowledging the "generous and forthcoming sincere congratulations" from Bush and Perot, Clinton announced, "This election is a clarion call for our country to face the challenges.

A Mandate For Change

Bill Clinton and Al Gore said it. Ross Perot said it. And most of the nation came out on Tuesday to say it, too. It's time for a change.

So what did this week's election be the perhaps the most important in recent years, because significant changes were actually made. The victory of Clinton/Gore and the respectable third place finish of independent candidate Ross Perot are testimony to that call for change.

This year a record number of women (6) were elected to the United States Senate. Among them Carol Moseley Braun was the first black woman Senator ever elected. In other facts, Ben Nighthorse Campbell became the first American Indian elected to the Senate. And political analysts claim that nationwide record numbers of voters turned out to cast their ballots.

The passage of certain Rhode Island referenda are also evidence of the we've-had-it-and-we-want-change-now mentality. Take Referendum #1, for example, which called for four year terms for general officers and voter recall. This referendum, which passed by a statewide 60 to 37 margin, was backed by coalitions for good government and ethical reform. One of the measure's authors said its passage was a "victory over cynicism and suspicion."

Alan Hassengfield, a prominent business leader and leader of the call for ethical reform in RI government, explained the passage of the referendum proves, "We've finally come out of the Dark Ages and we see that there is a future."

He's right. For the first time in a long time many people have been feeling they have been missing. It's commonly called hope. In hard economic times and times of ethical mayhem, nothing could be more important than hope. Nothing but positive action, that is.

For the CPA Board important to remember about all of these changes is that they were made by everyday people...everyday people who cared enough to make a difference.

During the Democratic National Convention and again in his victory speech on Tuesday night, Al Gore made a very emphatic statement: "It's time for them to go."

In Tuesday's election the American people showed they clearly understood and agreed with Gore's statement, in terms of politics. It's time for everyone to realize that what's true in politics can be true in our own lives. Take a look around you and see where a change is needed. Then dig deep inside and find the courage the American voters found: dare to care, dare to make a difference, and dare to make a change. Our time is now.

News item (per the Bryant college powers that be). Spring 1992. Bryant Accounting professors Fred Goucher, CPA and Michael Filippelli, CPA are demoted from their teaching positions in upper level accounting courses, effective for the fall 1992 semester, because they are "non-documented qualified" to teach the position.

News item (per the Bryant College powers that be). Fall 1992. Professor Michael Provost, CPA is demoted from his teaching position for the upper level auditing classes, effective for the spring 1993 semester, because he is "non-documented qualified" to teach the position. Non-qualified! Yeah, right!

Four years ago Bryant College had one of the most respected accounting programs. Now, the faculty that helped provide the core for that strong program are considered "unqualified" under the mysterious AASCB standards. They are being removed from their positions as societies of real world application of their theoretical expertise in teaching the selective courses in favor of faculty that possess doctors degrees. Over qualified! The change is almost always good and beneficial, with the exception of the problem of taking back qualified professors. It's a shame.

Now don't misunderstand, my change, change in 1992, is not only a good change, effective and up-to-date teaching methods come along, I would them to teach. All, and I suppose the rest of the Bryant accounting faculty. "You can see the best professor for the job be put in those demanding upper level classes. To bump a professor down a few notches simply because they smoke is more effective in the long run."

As for the effectiveness of these "non-documented qualified" professors, just ask any Bryant accounting alumnus what they think. Every alum I ever spoke to had the same general feeling about these professors: tough as hell when you're taking the class, but when you go out into the real world, you realize how well they prepared you.

As for Auditing II, there is no comparable preparation for the auditing portion of the CPA exam. (The same could be said for Professors Beaumage, Capo, Filippelli, Fontaine, Goucher, Lynch, and Simmons for practice and theory and for Sam Ramuay for business law!) But only two sections!? Wow! All the instructor be pleased with two classes of students (as opposed to four classes of 30), That should make for some effective (and cost effective) teaching.

And while we're on the subject of limited class offerings - hey CPA majors, have you checked with your local state's CPA requirements to determine how many ADDITIONAL COURSES OBTAIN BRYANT'S CURRICULUM WILL NEED TO QUALIFY FOR THE CPA EXAMINATION STATE?! If you're out of New York, and I speak from experience, be prepared to fight to get into that extra auditing class, as well as an extra three credits in economics and finance. You need those extra nine credits to qualify in New York. But each state is different, so check with your CPA board.

Too bad this is not a surprise. If you had read your independent auditor's report in April (see page 2 of the April 16, 1992 Archway) many of the Class of 1992 had some "going concern" questions about the status of Bryant's Accounting department. If only the "powers that be" had bothered to read that report, (And the by Bryant administrators, Provost had nothing to do with our report.)

But hey, here's a solution to balance the problem. Have the pass/fail sections taught by two different professors (Provost and some Ph.D.) and let the professor win. Guess who I'm betting on...

Sincerely,
Michael J. Boyd '92

Dear Editor: I am writing in regard to T.G.I.A.O. printed in page 2 in the October 29, 1992 issue of The Archway. Like the editors of The Archway, too, feel frustrated with the course. Bryant has taken over the past year. I do not believe however that complaining about what is going on will help the situation. In fact I believe it is a self- fulfilling prophecy. If we tell ourselves how horrible this college is often enough, we will soon start to think it is true. What I suggest is we take action on the issues we feel strongly about. For example, if all accounting majors feel they are being short changed on scheduling options, they should get together and meet with the accounting department head and the registrar to voice their concerns. Likewise to finance, marketing and all other majors here, Bryant students need to exercise their collective power to protest the kind ban, why do we feel so helpless when it comes to other important educational and social issues? I am not almost out of here and I am tired of people saying they are. Let's make an effort to change the things that need changing and attain a more positive attitude.

To the Editor:

In recent weeks, the editorial staff of your fine newspaper has inconclusively insisted that the word "sic" after a quotation is a style error and must be removed by the editor. In the October 29th issue, page 2, Faulkfield's only error was to fail to indicate The Archway (and no doubt we should start demonstrating for such an egregious error). Your batching of the letter of the day is what it was an attempt to punish someone who had the audacity to disagree with the posture of your paper.
The responses by present and former staff (Ms. Phillips and Mr. Philkes) strike me as this timorously epigrammatic in the extreme.

It is my understanding that editors regularly edit letters for grammatical and style errors. This requires that the editor have a rudimentary understanding of the English language, an understanding that the editors of The Archway clearly lack. If you don't believe me, just look at the following.

The following is based on a fifteen-minute reading of the October 29th issue.

Page 1: "Entrepreneurship Perceived by Lisa Leccechi. Sentence 2. "The event occurred on one day, the correct version is "The day's events." The last sentence of the penultimate paragraph should read "hand-on experience.""

Page 1: "Campaign Comes to Campus" by Julia Anthon. The first sentence of the paragraph should read "President Bush was represented (sic)." The word is "represented," not "reported."

Page 5: "Harassing Telephone Calls." "DPS has contacted the phone company to make it easier for you to have a "trap" on your phone if you receive harassing calls. You must be willing to prosecute. The method is efficient and free. Call DPS for details."

Page 7: "Public Safety Beat compiled by Mark Gordon, Students for a Safer Campus. Gas Confiscated. October 28, 1992. 10:25pm A Department of Public Safety (DPS) officer responded to a report of a person in Residence Hall 16, who announced several bottles lined up on a window sill. When the officer entered the room, the occupants were in fact smoking a big joint. The gun and approximately half a can of amphetamines was confiscated."

Vandalism to Vehicles. Friday, October 30, 1992. 2:34am. According to the above time and date, a DPS Officer on mobile patrol discovered a vandalized motor vehicle in parking lot C.4. DPS was able to contact the victim owner shortly thereafter.

DPS states that he had parked his vehicle at approximately 6:30pm that evening. Apparently damage to the vehicle included bent windshield wipers, a broken antenna and rear tail light lens, and dents kicked into the right-front fender, right front fender, rear-right quarter panel, trunk lid and left-rear quarter panel, as well as many scratches.

Through further investigations DPS learned that more than twenty vehicles were vandalized on campus during that time frame. A video tape recorded from a parking for security camera was reviewed, revealing persons around the general area of the incident. At 12:01am, two males entered parking lot C.4 and went to their car. The two were joined at 12:32am by a third male. One male was filmed bouncing off the side of a vehicle. Shortly after the vandalism occurred, DPS located the guest pass of individuals who entered the area at that time and contacted the guests' host.

The host claimed he had no knowledge of the incident and his guest had already left campus. However, DPS found the guests' vehicle registration document and the host was contacted a second time and asked to report to DPS with his guests.

The suspects were then questioned and an investigation is continuing.

Page 12: "Alcohol and Subsurface Substance. At approximately 2:18am, on Saturday, October 31, 1992 a DPS officer was dispatched to Hall 16 following a report of marijuana smoking. When the officer arrived, he noticed a strong scent of marijuana coming from inside a suite. At this point, the officer requested an RD report for the suite. The officer entered the room, accompanied by an RD and an RA and observed what appeared to be residue from a marijuana and two (2) unsmoked marijuana cigarettes. It was reported the room was in disarray due to marijuana and approximately fifteen (15) empty hand-liquor bottles scattered about. Identification of those present was obtained and all illegal substances were confiscated to be destroyed."

Page 13: "Just the Facts..." By Michael DeOue, Ledger Editor. The letter reads: "The reader who had up. The gun and pants shortly clouded bent windshield wipers, a cabinet. Two broke. He lens, and dents kicked around the quarter panel, trunk lid and left-rear quarter panel, as well as many scratches.

Page 14: "Gun and pants shortly clouded bent windshield wipers, a cabinet. Two broke. He lens, and dents kicked around the quarter panel, trunk lid and left-rear quarter panel, as well as many scratches."

Just because we are involved in our activities, we don't mean we get excused from our academic responsibilities. We have the same restrictions everyone else in class has; we get to special events, but no freefringe benefits. But we do learn time management.

We also have responsibilities as Archway staff members and one of them is to make sure every week we have quality stories. That's why you're reading this, to be sure you read every week. And for the rest of you, due to the fact we are students, those little chapter mid-term exams sometimes take precedence over which would give more emphasis - a semicolon or dash.

Now, don't get me wrong, I am not complaining because of the great amount of work the rest of the staff and I have to put into the paper every week. It is a given and is something that comes with joining an organization; in short, it is our job.

But since our organization is composed of VOLUNTEERS, anyone in the Bryant Community is well advised to remember this. I don't see people camping outside our door waiting to join because they feel they can do a better job.

If by chance there are people out there who feel they could do a job better, they can come, please come, can come, please come. I'm sure almost anyone on the staff would be willing to give up their position for one week so you can see exactly what putting the paper together every week entails.

And hey, if you like it, then you can come up here every week, no matter how much exams you may have, no matter how long it has been since you've seen your roommate, stay in Bryant, I don't see people.

If you feel like it, you can come up here every week, no matter how much exams you may have, no matter how long it has been since you've seen your roommate, stay in Bryant, I don't see people.

It's really easy for people to sit in an ivory tower and pass judgment on a group of people and their work, especially individuals who have no experience in that area. Unless those specific individuals sit in the shoes of our employees and practice their time and energy, they should think twice about criticizing others.

The Archway is composed of members of staff who made a commitment to the organization, and every Thursday you can see just how strong that commitment really is.

Cindy Gale Managing Editor, The Archway Thanks from Prez To the Editor:

To the Editor:

Although I have been at Bryant for more than three years, and on The Archway for over two, there are still many things that happen which make me think... just because you think the Bryant Community has matured, someone doesn't do something to deserve this kind of thinking. And for the last few weeks, you can’t help but be careful as you walk to class. On Tuesday, the pieces of broken glass around campus from the most recent crash of fraud.

Yes, I am interested in the recent controversy over The Archway in its content. It's an interesting thought, and most importantly, are staff members. It appears to me, the ones who criticize the most are the ones who take the last action.

I would like to say that my place to describe to you the editorial policy of The Archway; that the Editor-in-Chief's job is one I will still be many times critical.

First, its content. As a student newspaper, it is the duty of The Archway to print information which is relevant to the Bryant Community. This means all students, past and present. It also includes all information which could ultimately affect these students.

Granting, not every story we print is going to dramatically affect the life of every student. But, we have a responsibility not only to ourselves, but to the Bryant Community as a whole, so well, to print stories which have the potential to affect students, even if it is just one student.

Secondly, the Editorial Board is the governing body of the newspaper with the final say. And this means staff members, not the Editor in Chief, so I will my place to address the editorial policy of The Archway; that the Editor-in-Chief's job is one I will still be many times critical.

Corrections are attempted, but may be beyond our ability to rectify. If you believe that an error has been made, please call the Managing Editor of The Archway.

Rally impressive were the splendid contribution of our faculty and staff. Your time and effort helped make these many events outstanding. Thank you all.

This was the first presidential election in which all major candidates were from the south. The Clinton Gore victory also represents the first time both the President and Vice President were born after World War II.

Political commentators also pointed out that Hillary Clinton will be the first First Lady to enter the White House with a postgraduate degree to her credit.

you deserve." is not a sentence. Where's the verb corresponding to "Organizational backbones?"

Page 2: Letter to the editor by Mark Pilchick, former Managing Editor of The Archway. In the sixth paragraph, Mr. Pilchick refers to Bryant as his "adolescence (sic)."

After spending $70,000 on his education, you'd think he'd know it wasn't "alma mater."

Page 2: "Virtual Reality Attacks Bryant" by Julia Aronech. The eighth paragraph reads: "Virtual Reality is more than just an elaborate video game (sic) it is the wave of the future." Aside from the hyperbole, try using a semicolon instead of a hyphen.

Paragraph 12: "In architecture, for example, a person can enter a building in Virtual Reality in order to meet with architects with the layout (sic) of certain features. The Berlin train station was built (sic) this way. "Layout (sic) is one word. Did they really build the Berlin train station using Virtual Reality? Did a bunch of construction workers put on the helmets? Do you need a helmet to use the station? You mean "designed," not "built.""

Paragraph 14: "In addition, the law enforcement agency may be able to recreate court scenes.... Aren't there more than one law enforcement agency that might use this? By the way, that actually has been used to recreate a California murder."

Paragraph 15: "Another future aspect of Virtual Reality, (sic) is the possibility... "Comment indicate passers; there is no pause in this sentence.

Page 6: "Voo Doo Chainsaw 92" by Ben Perkins. Pick a paragraph. There isn't enough space to identify all the errors. This article is composed of sentence fragments, missing punctuation, the use of adjectives in place of adverbs, missing quotes, and other errors. It is quite simply the least literate piece I've ever seen printed.

Page 11: "Volleyball Struggles for Win" by Angelo Corradino. Sentence 1: "The women's volleyball team went 1-3 this week as they (sic) lost two big matches to teams ranked (sic) the top twenty-five in the nation. You mean "ranked." Also, team is singular, so "it should be used in place of they."

The last paragraph reads: "Bryant is also one of the few colleges in Rhode Island to win a New England Championship in the past few years. Rhode Island's team won in 1990. This was the last tournament (sic) of the fall season. "What does this follow sentence of the paragraph mean? Is a line or a word missing? By the way, the correct spelling is "tournament."

A long-saysapychologicalquirk, I doubt the women's tennis team is traumatized by their equipment.

Paragraph 4: "Other key win (sic) came from..." Since you're talking about more than one victory, try "wins."

Page 12: "Men's Soccer Extends Win Streak" by Angelo Corradino

Paragraph 6: The team is know (sic) reyading for..." Even my four year old knows the difference between "know" and "now."

Paragraph 8 (on page 11): "We are on a five games (sic) win streak: it looks good..." should be written: "We are on a five-game win streak: it looks good."

The truly sad thing is that this was one of your better issues. And, the above analysis does not include your organizational columns, classifieds, or pieces obviously written by persons other than The Archway's staff. I recognize that in putting together the paper, small errors may creep in; in the case of your paper, they appear to be coming at a dead run.

As journalists, you have a responsibility to the truth. You also have a responsibility to use appropriately the English language. You apparently have abandoned your responsibilities in this area. There's an old adage that "people in glass houses shouldn't throw stones." Until you clean up your own grammatical house, you shouldn't cast aspersions on someone else's. And to do it simply because you disagree with his or her position (I didn't notice you trashing Mr. Pilchick's letter) is the antithesis of the "journalistic responsibility" you so grandly throw at anyone with the temerity to criticize you. The Archway is indeed a "powerful me­ dium," but power corrupts. It is unfortunate that the editors of The Archway are so sensitive to criticism. Your reference to Mr. Ciriello's letter smacks of anti-intellectualism, which is the major problem on this campus.

An Interesting Winter Alternative

When school lets out for Christmas break, what are your options to pass the time? Work? Watch television? Another option is available to pass that wintertime in a productive way and earn college credit.

A course titled, "From Pioneersmen to the Imperial Army: The case of the United States and Spain" is available as a Humanities credit this Winter session for any students interested. A great advantage of the class is that it will be taught by Professor Manuel Broncano from the University of Leon in Spain.

Our own Humanities Professor, Joe Urgo, taught at the University of Leon last semester with Professor Broncano. On his visit he suggested that a faculty exchange program would be beneficial to both schools and an excellent experience for the students. Priscilla Angelo of Bryant's International Affairs then extended the invitation to Professor Broncano to teach here during this winter session.

The class itself is an intense, two week course that compares the setting of the United States frontier in the late eighteen hundreds with the reconquest of Spain from the Moors in the Middle Ages. Through the use of history text, literature, and movies, students can get more of an all around picture of American history and how it may mirror or differ from historical events of other countries. For example, the course includes a comparison of "Dances with Wolves" to a slightly older Spanish movie titled, "El cid.

Professor Urgo greatly enjoyed his experience of teaching in Spain, as well as teaching with Professor Broncano. Urgo commented, "He is a very lively, young teacher and was likely the most popular professor, in addition to being the most promising."

Overall, this class is a rare opportunity for the Bryant community to study and experience American history from a different point of view. For a moderate workload, you can get college credit and a chance to study under a foreign professor.

(Auxiliary Winter Session class descriptions will be in the next issue of The Archway.)
To all of you currently at Bryant, you should remember these three will one day be looked back upon as some of the fondest memories in your lives.

I remember my first four semesters at Bryant and the routines and my five classes each semester. I couldn't believe there were so many choices to choose from. I was excited about the five classes each semester. After sleepless nights of decision making, I would learn my first five classes would bring me a barrel dead last and my five choices would have to include another ten alternatives. That was some heavy stress especially when the time slots I chose were not available.

Bryant also has a couple of those friends you had not seen last semester show up on campus. This was you speaking with a new accent, a couple of leftover British pounds and a couple of perch of what was going on. You would see Europe on a standard budget. I was fortunate that Bryant was beginning to spread its wings internationally at that time. I spoke with Doc O'Hara and he pointed me in the direction George Tsapkas, who has since passed away, as the study aboard expert.

It was eleven o'clock in the morning and the early morning time. You can cancel because there was a golf match that day. I wend tried to see George, but he was in college. That summer, all of our junior year, I decided I wanted to go to Australia for the year. The information made available to us back then was nothing like the current situation for we did not even have a fax facility back then.

It is now time for that crucial fifth semester and that does not include winter break or summer school. Now there five choices to have been narrowed down, one major. I asked my major to help me decide on one major, to have some choice and do it for the rest of my life. These decisions were made with the advice given to be beginning to require and act, dare I say, responsibility? Well, the decision was made by me that my major would be International Business Management. After finishing out school overseas, I decided on Scanning Gat College in Sydney, Australia. I decided I always wanted to visit Australia and meet a couple of kids from there when I was in my major.

January 23, 1984 I moved into my house at Bondi Beach, Australia where I lived to be a fish out of water. My preparation for the semester down under consisted of reading Time magazine very quickly. I was interested in Australia. Reality set in very quickly when I arrived for my orientation day with several hours in the country. It was now time for an attitude adjustment and I can only think those professors now for re-aligning my thinking.

I spent my five weeks every day in the library reading about Australian business, government, history, etc. My five-week ended and my mind began to expand. I remember sitting in an Australian government lecture dealing with the many questions and unanswerable questions who I was the Republican and who is the Democrat. Oops! The professor called me on the phone and gave me an assignment that confirmed the old saying, "When in Rome do as the Romans do." My paper was handed in and my oral presentation on the differences between the Liberal and Labor Parties and its non-affiliation with either the United States Party, I began to understand how much I had to learn.

They say the only way a baby can learn to swim is if you drop it in water. Studying abroad has the same effect on people. You are forced to learn how to do things their way and what works for you in your home town does not necessarily work for you in another country. I look at my year in Australia as the most influential ingredient in the forming of my current state of mind to date. Financially there are barriers to many things we do but education is a short term investment with long term benefits. I returned to Bryant for my senior year and I knew I had received what well rounded education Bryant always bragged about. I was so obsessed with my year abroad I made sure there were two more people the following year. I do make the most expanding experience available to all.

I remember being the student representative on the strategic planning committee my senior year and discussing a number of different issues. Closing the Park and turning it into a computer center, moving the game room so that we would have to walk outside if we wanted to play basketball between classes, forcing the school to employ professors with more than R.S. after their name, and to build a parking lot, for one would contain a non-alcoholic room for students (Nick's Place). Finally, the plan included the school thinking more internationally and promoting students going abroad and inviting foreigners to come and learn.

Anybody who has ever gone overseas can tell you the only thing they would have won would have more money. The total experience can not be quantified. I can guarantee you people who plan the overseas studies into their four year schedule will definitely have something they want.

I graduated in 1985 and started in an entry level position selling for a gift company, Russ Berrie and Company. I worked hard for 18 months and was able to save up enough money to go to Australia and see all of my friends for Christmas Holidays. I wanted to make the trip with somebody so I took my mum with me and we had a great time. Upon our return I realized I was at least interested in the English language. Russ Berrie and Company, where the potential sales are a little bigger than Eastern Connecticut. Upon my return, I realized I had now worked for the company for almost five years and I was not a long term student. My qualifications would now classify me as having experience! This leads me to the next famous saying my dad taught me. "Sometimes if you are in the right place at the right time you can jump the line." It so happened the owner of Russ Berrie Australia was attending the U.S. management meeting that year. One thing led to another and I found myself doing a one on one management training with him the following week. He was very impressed with my knowledge of the industry but overwhelmed with my knowledge of Australian ways of life. He had been looking for the right person to come down to Australia and take over his company, for he was getting on in years. I guess I was in the right place at the right time if it was not for my overseas studies when I was in college, I would had never had the confidence in myself to make the move.

I have now lived in Australia for the last two years and have positioned myself second in charge of the company. My title is National Sales and Marketing Manager for Russ Berrie Australia which is doing over $10 million a year. In 1990 when he approached me, his annual turnover was just over $3 million. His twenty years of experience feeds my mind's need to grow on a daily basis and his confidence makes me work harder.

I have been stuck at the past seven years and marvel at how so many independent activities contributed to the end result of where I am today. I would never change anything about those years at Bryant, and my south east bread not only the world of business. If you ever have any hesitation to studying abroad, call me collect. Just remember to add 16 hours to your clock!

Go you Bryant Indians!

Not For Women Only...

Our society is in need of a change in attitude about the work environment and the family unit. Some readers may be familiar with the Donna Reed Show or "Father Knows Best" that families would view on TV in the 1950's when slightly over 18 million women were working force. Now, 53 million women are working and shows such as Murphy Brown, Golden Girls and Designing Women are reflecting society. What does this mean to the family and to business? Change!

Tip: If you think you have read ENOUGH about discrimination toward women, please pull out an article from the bottom to the top.

Where do we start? According to research conducted by Women Employed, a Chicago-based organization which works to expand women's opportunities through greater career mobility, stronger equal opportunity policies, improved work and family benefits and the elimination of discrimination, a starting place would be to eliminate five major areas of systemic barriers challenging women:

1. Pregnancy Discrimination: Under the law, a pregnant woman must be treated in the same manner as another applicant or employee with a temporary medical disability, and that is not often the case.

2. Gender Discrimination: There are different assumptions made about women's attitude, ability and commitment to work and the company. Women continue to be highly segregated into workforces. Ninety-nine percent of secretaries are women, as are 93% of bookkeepers, 93% of nurses and 82% of administrative/clerical support workers. Job segregation translates into lower pay and lower status. At one time these jobs subsidized a family income. In the 90's, however, this may be the sole income for a single woman with children.

3. Pay Inequality: Women of equal ability and position are still paid less than men. According to the most recent statistics available from the US Department of Labor (data gathered in 1989), women earn 69% of what men earn.

4. Sexual Harassment on the Job: Any unwelcome verbal or physical advance or suggestion made by someone in the workplace which creates the recipient discomfort, creates a hostile atmosphere or interferes with the recipient's job performance. Costly law suits can be avoided if both men and women were aware of behaviors that offend, and have an internal business procedure that addresses this issue to stop the behavior with out the fear of retaliation.

5. The Glass Ceiling: Women and minorities have been unable to make major inroads into executive positions because of discriminatory practices blocking their advancement. Although women comprise 40% of all executive, management and administrative positions (up from 24% in 1976), they remain confined to middle and lower ranks and the senior levels of management are almost exclusively male domains.

I propose that while all of the above state facts are true, let's give the men a fair chance at what society has long expected of women. If a family chooses to have a husband stay-at-home with the children, why not? Society tends to make fun of "Mr. Mom." If a man wishes to stay unmarried and raise a child, why not? If a man wants a position that is usually held by a female, let him be interned from doing so because society would look down upon male secretaries or telephone operators and categorize them as "wimps" or "lacking ambition." In the field of elementary education, isn't society in need of more male role models for little girls and boys? But the pay is low, the status can be demeaning, and society is unaccepting.

6. Women's Issues are Men's Issues too.

Equality for women means equality for men and a better lifestyle for families.

So why is change so slow and why does change scare so many men?

Mark your calendars now for the following upcoming special events!

November 16-19, WGBH Steering Committee We could use more voices (students, administrators, faculty, etc) on this committee.

November 18, WGBH Attention Dance at RF Education Seminar on Gender Equity at the State House: 4:15-7:30; Join us for an exciting evening of dancing and fun. Look for flyers in departments with more info — call St. 6410.

November 23, WGBH General Meeting: Pupillo — brown bag at noon. Rosie Dunn will be our guest speaker. She will talk us about both the Bryant and the RI Task Force on Sexual Assault.

December 10, Dinner at Wright's Farm Come join us for our last event of the semester. In the spirit of giving, we will be asking all those who attend to bring along a small item (a bath soup, bath oil, beads, lotion, etc.) to be placed in a gift basket — from WFB — to be delivered to the Sojourner House in Woonsocket — a women's shelter.

"Walk for Women's Safety"

Several students and faculty members participated in the "Walk for Women's Safety" held on Sunday, October 25th in Boston. Over 2,000 people (men and women) walked and over $200,000 was raised. The "Bryant Team" raised over $650 (!) for the Jane Doe Safety Fund. We had a great time, bonded with some interesting people, and plan to return for next year's walk. Those who participated were (back row, left to right): Melissa Forrester, Elaine Malhot, Nancy Weinberger, Angela James; (front row, left to right) Sue Ross, Debbie Easterling.

Womens' Educators of Bryant by Barbara Gregory Career Services

The last of Autumn's gloriously colorful leaves have stopped transforming, pinched by the chill of the deepening night. Those same leaves, underfoot, crunch or fly away from us with the wind, or slippery—when we walk to us to watch their step. Feeling the change of season is a far cry from our work in lecture halls, offices, and studios, and is further still from the pressure of research and deadlines. Sensing the change of season is a point of electioneering, too, into another perspective.

So what we got to check up on the problems and activity of the moment, that we lose sight of possibilities that may come to pass only in the more distant future. Sometimes we therefore trade away future, long term goals for immediate gratification. But the seasons of our lives also will change; and we have to be open to futures we cannot possibly know about today.

In the between time, we count this week's and days from one holiday to another. From one break to another, let us give ourselves a break of another kind. We should stop in our tracks and consider, even if only for a moment, the past we have been and where we think we are going—and where, if we can honestly tell, we are going.

Jewish tradition remembers the reading of the Torah this time of year: this week's portion is not the story of Noah and the Flood: the destruction of the world that led to new beginning for human society. If there is an Ark in this day and age, it seems to me, we are all upon it, struggling to learn the lessons of our world, and ourselves as well, to a new beginning of our own.

Rotc Cadets Compete
In Annual Ranger Challenge Shootout

by Jim Ducezowski

On the weekend of October 23-24, three Bryant College ROTC cadets — Keith Metters, Jim Ducezowski, and Jeff Giroux — along with cadets from Providence College, UMass Dartmouth and Rhode Island College represented the Patriotic Battalion at the annual New England Brigade Ranger Challenge Shootout. The competition was held at Fort Devens, MA and consisted of eight events: static physical fitness test, marksmanship, orienteering, weapons assembly, a hand grenade assault course, setting up and crossing a one rope bridge, a pontooning test, and was concluded by a 10 kilometer forced road march. The competition was two days in length and was very physically demanding.

Just as in any other sport, the cadets competed against 18 other New England teams each representing their school. The schools were competing for the right to represent the New England Brigade at Fort Bragg, NC. The scoring system is based on a cumulative point total where the team that finishes first in an event gains 18 points, second gains 17 points, and so on. Those points are then added to any other points earned from other events. The top two teams, with the point total being the number of cadets who advance to Fort Bragg. The Patriot Battalion’s highest placement came from the first team, who finished second in the physical fitness test. They finished third in the hand grenade assault course, setting up and crossing a one rope bridge, and pontooning test, and were the champions of the Static Physical Fitness Test.

The Cadets also conducted home with the trophy, however all those who competed should be commended for their efforts; for everyone that competed, was a winner. They are winners because they volun

Well, first of all we'd like to say thank you to all those who participated in our Trick-or-Treating program. We collected a lot of cans and we'll let you know how many families were given food baskets.
This semester is almost over already which means there are only a few meetings left. Don't forget about the upcoming National Sleepout and Comfort Night on Nov. 18. We'll talk more about it at our next meeting.
If anyone has any ideas for a program during the Christmas season, please let us know. We were thinking about going Christmas Caroling in some of the local neighborhoods.

First off, we'd like to thank Bryant alum Shannon Podlak, who was our guest speaker this past meeting. Shannon led a very interesting and informative talk on careers in the dynamic environment of retailing. Shannon has worked for successful retailers such as the GAP and is presently Operations Manager at Eddie Bauer, Emerlad Square Mall. Shannon, we wish you all the best in your career. Remember, it's never too late to join up! So, come to our next meeting with your ideas, and help the Bryant Marketing Association grow!
Next meeting: Wednesday, November 11th in Papatio next to Tupperos.

First, all the brothers would like to say thank you to Ken and Adam for this weekend. Thanks to Ken's mother for the home cooked Italian meal. Good luck to all the sorority pledges. Also, to all the fraternity pledges, keep up the hard work, especially our Delta class.
In sports, congratulations to DKE for winning their Floor Hockey Tournament. In football, D-Chi II tied with O'FC in a controversial game 13-13, but we know. We continued on with a playoff birth against BSC, but fell late in the second half. Good luck to all those that remain. Remember, Hockey season is coming fast.

First off, we would like to wish our pledges good luck. You're doing a great job. Keep up the good work! Congratulations to the Destruction Crew for making it to the finals in football!! Way to be girls! For those people who made it out of the Dungeon alive on Friday night, we hope you all had a great time. It was a great success and we plan on making it an annual tradition. Our Halloween night with TKE was filled with fun, singing & dancing. The best & biggest costume award goes out to Jesty.
On a more serious note, we would like to give a warm welcome to Aspen. We all missed you and we have a lot of catching up to do! We are also looking forward to seeing our much missed alumnae this weekend. Get psyched for the sisters gathering on Saturday R.P. of the weekend goes to Andwetti for twaying weedy hard.(sic)

Kevin Welch earned MVP honors, with a broken hand, in the Delta Chi Hockey Tournament as we beat team Lightning Bolt in the finals, 6-0. Weenie Nate won “best costume” prize on Friday, just beating out the voluputous Garth, and on that note, we'd all like to say, one last time, Party on Garth!

International Students' Organization
by Kristina Rolak
The International Students' Organization would like to thank the following members who manned the table at Open House on the October 25th: Annabelle Jimenez, Adriana Barnes, Jacqueline Shahdad, Kristina Rolak, and Susanna Simas. We also appreciate the hard work and dedication that the Multicultural Student Union exhibited by designing the sign for our table on that occasion. The event was a great success thanks to the help that we received.
ISO is a great place to meet different people from all over the world. At the meeting on October 14th, the following members were elected to hold office: President, Philippe Timos, Vice President, Alexander Baecht; Treasurer, Susanna Simas; and Secretary Kristine Rolak. Meetings are held every Tuesday at 6:00 in Meeting Room 1 in the Bryant Center, so check out what we're all about.

Karate Club
by Brian Cotter and Eric Zine
Last week was a busy one for the members of the Bryant Karate Club. In addition to preparing for our upcoming tests, we started our candy sales. For those of you who haven't sold all your candy yet, get to work. Next week is test week for all belts, including the new members of the club. The new members will be testing for their yellow belts Tuesday, November 10 and I'm sure all their hard work and dedication will show. On Saturday, those testing for San-Kyu and above will see if they can stand up to the rigors of the brown belt test. Good luck to everyone.
On a final note, anyone interested in joining the Karate Club is encouraged to attend class on Monday, November 9 at 4 PM on the second floor of the MAC. It's a great way to learn to defend yourself, gain self-confidence, and get in shape. Hope to see you there.

Phi Kappa Sigma
by Kevin P. Reid
First off, we would like to thank Theda for Friday night, and Phi Sig for an enjoyable Halloween. PKS- A secured the fifth seed in the playoffs by beating the Dawgs 6-0 last Wednesday. Kenny D. scored the game winning TD off an interception. We had several other spectacular plays, including House's continued, Campus, page 11
Volleyball Excels in Tournament: Looks Towards NE-10's

The women's volleyball team was 6-0 including winning the Bryant Invitational II Tournament as they defeated a strong Dowling College on Saturday.

In their final conference match of the first game and last 10-15, they bounced back to win the match easily by 15-3, 15-2.

Bryant then faced C.W. Post from Long Island, New York and won the first two games 15-9, 15-7. They then faced Iona and C.W. Post rallied to win 14-16. Bryant regained from a game down 15-11 which set them up in the semi-finals against campus.

In the semi-finals the lady Indians were cruised to victory 15-6, 15-9, 15-6 and were headed to the finals to play Dowling College who had beaten them earlier in the year. Bryant got all-around play from every player and as always had a few bright spots.

Kim Bennerjohn and Karen Michalski were selected to the All-Tourney team, and tournament MVPs when Marc Brack provided big plays all day to help the team overcome their opponents. Other key players for Bryant included Meri- buh Dean, Kim Potrzewski, and Te' a Ya Dean.

The team also faced Bryant invitational II Tournament in the week, 15-6, 15-10, 15-16.

The results from last night's Bonass/Lowell, amazing match missed earlier this season match were too late for publication. They will be the last week, sometime Fri. and Saturday at Bryant College to close out their 1992 season.

Jim Moses will be singing in the closing ceremony in Fenway Park this afternoon, Nov. 16th. Caritas and a hoopshot are planned for Thursday afternoon, Nov 19th. On Friday night, Nov 20th, comedian Paul Poundstone will be performing. At the Monmouth basketball game on Nov 21st at 3:30, we will be having a shoot out for a car giveaways. On Saturday night, a Battle of the Bands was planned in the MAC with comedian Paul Storrie as MC. To finish off Unhomecoming we will be visiting the Patriot/Tee game at Foxboro Sunday Nov 22nd. Sunday's movie will be Saturday Night Live.

Virtual Reality went over very well last night and we had a great turnout for "Basic Instinct." On Sunday, Saturday there will be a comedy show in South Dinner Room at 7:45 featuring Periwinkle's best comedians. Admission is $1 and refreshments are free. Our next meeting is Monday at 4:30 in meeting room 2B of the Bryant Center.

Hey Theta! The weekend went well. Thanx goes to Sig Ep for Saturday night's Fire and Ice party where you go to Suse for the decorations.

To our pledges hang in there and may strong-you only have eight more weeks to go! Football season officially came one had fun this year. We had a lot of good officers, and I'd like to thank the offices for all their time and effort, Broke, thank you for coaching.

Our Halloween party with the men's soccer team was a great success. I hope everyone had a good time. Thanx to all that came.

Don't forget we are having a Field Hockey meeting on Thursday, December 10th. Keep in mind, you will be collecting money for is now. Hope everyone will show up. Field Hockey uniforms should be given to Brooke Miller no later than Friday, November 6th. Please let us know you can't make it.

Women's Rugby

Hello ruggeers! Well the season is officially over. On Saturday at the championship tournament, we proved that we are strong contenders, playing one of our best games of the season. We took Bridgewater by surprise and had them scared throughout the first half. This was especially true after a "great field kick-great job! Unfortunately we lost some of our momentum second half and didn't stay up on the. Our Silver Shield was the Christmas trophy. If you cannot make the meeting please call 8317 or 9242 for a message to show your support.

Until Thursday, enjoy your afternoons off.
Men's Soccer Goalie Ranked Number Two in Nation

Scott Calabrese has made his way up the soccer world, coming from a recreational team in second grade to Bryant College.

Calabrese, a sophomore from Newton, Connecticut, has been recently ranked as the number two goalie in the nation of all Division II schools based upon his goals against average of .35. He played on a solid high school team as well as an international team. His junior year he played soccer in Belgium, Germany, and Holland.

While in Holland, Scott saw goalkeeper Hans van Broekhoven play. Hans is an inspiration to Scott because he is "completely psychic and plays with reckless abandon." In Calabrese’s senior year, he posted 16 shutouts out of 18 games on his high school team. He was named to All-Division, All-Conference, All-State, and All-USA teams. He played against the international league, this time in England and Scotland.

While still playing college, Scott chose to play for a Division II team like Bryant rather than Division I. He chose to play in the second division because it "looks like Ecco Point. It’s so serene!"

At Bryant, Calabrese is double major in Finance and Concentration History, is a Resident Assistant on Deck

In the NCAA to date, but have fallen from grace in the past few years. They would eventually face each other in the final of the 1981 NCAA Final, where Magic Johnson and the Lakers would win the two of the three games.

But Bird also brought the Celtics two more NBA Championships, over the Houston Rockets in 1981 and again in 1986.

These were just some of the highlights Bird would bring to the game as he would become one of the premier players of his time, and arguably one of the five best in the history of the game.

With his desire to win and love for the game, you really began to understand Bird was more than just a basketball player and will always be remembered. But can his shoes ever be filled?

If you really look at his retirement it’s not just an era in basketball that’s ending it’s an era in the sports world. He is someone who played his entire career for the same team actually played basketball because he loves the game not so he could make millions of dollars in endorsements. Don’t get me wrong, even Bird had to be lured by the advertising world, but his career in ending and he need to make money in some way.

He is still one of the last in a long line of true sportmen both on and off the court. One of his most famous quotes exemplifies this, “I tried to play at a level where nobody else could play at. That way, I would be separated from the rest.” Did he accomplish this? Yes. There is no way you could look back over his career and argue against this. A career 42.3% of all games an 89.8% free throw percentage, and 37.6% from beyond the three-point line. But that’s not enough to win an NBA Finals, even Bird’s basketball skills are just not that good. He has many other things to do in life, and being one of the best in the world is not his only goal.

As former teammate, and long time friend, Bill Walton can tell you, he is a lot of common sense, or everything Bird does makes sense. He loves to hide behind that “He doesn’t want to be left out,” but really doesn’t have those traits. That’s what elevated him from good to great.

Although the Legend was not perfect, he hated to be away from the court especially if he was hurt. When he was injured he became reclusive. He would go back to his house in suburban Boston and ask because he couldn’t get his way with his own body. And no one dared approach him during times. He felt he didn’t have time to do anything except to get better, so he spent all his time doing just that, and letting his body heal.

That’s why it’s going to be so hard for him to retire. He can no longer return to the Boston Garden and put the Green and White. But if he knows, maybe we will eventually see him back on the sidelines as a coach.

There is one definite thing in the sports world, especially Boston, Larry Bird will be missed and the Boston Celtics and the NBA will never be the same.

The Legend’ Has Fallen

The women’s cross country team competed in and finished 20th in the New England Women’s Championships last Saturday in Boston.

Leading the way for the Lady Indians was Lauren Saunoh, finishing 3rd overall with a time of 20:23. Heather Croone came in on the team, and 17th overall, with a time of 20:53.

“We did better than last year,” coach Charlie Mandeville said. “We were 26th last year, but we were only 20 places out of being 18th which was around the middle [which was] what we were shooting for.”

Other finishers for Bryant included: Manly La Pierre with a 20:34, Karen Pauleyks with 21:01, Laura ZegaDreyman with 21:24, and KelHie Monteverdi with 21:29.

“There was only two Division II teams ahead of us, MAASS Lowell and Springfield,” Mandeville said.

“So that’s good for what times we did. We didn’t run particularly well because we didn’t put too much emphasis on it, but we ran okay.”

The team, comprised of five people in the junior varsity race including: Jackie Choisiere 21:38, January Calderoni 22:10, Jessica Daval 22:26, Jodi Russo 22:59, and Jen Gusi 24:26. Coach Mandeville used this race to decide who was going to be his seventh runner in the NCAA’s on Saturday.

“It was a toss up [between Calderoni and Choisier] they each placed seventh once. When we lost Jill Decker, they really stepped up,” Karen ran well at Stonehill, and Jackie ran well on Saturday, so Jackie is going,” Mandeville said.

The team is readying for the NCAA’s this weekend in Pennsylvania and are hoping to break into the top ten.

“If they run the way they are capable of running, and everybody gives me 15%, we should have a real good showing,” coach Mandeville concluded.

The NCAA’s will be the last meet of the season for the team.
