Governor's Commission Trains Disabled Individuals

Lisa Lucchesi
Archway Staff Writer

Bryant's Center for Management Development and the Governor's Commission on the Handicapped will be hosting a training program for individuals with disabilities in the state of Rhode Island. Individuals with disabilities will be trained on "technical assistance to the community." Those participating in the program will work as consultants to businesses and industries. The participants will help them understand and meet the titles and regulations of the Americans with Disabilities Act law.

Students and Faculty gathered last night to watch the lunar eclipse from telescopes set up by the Science Department, in the Unistructure. The eclipse occurred approximately between 4:45 pm and 8:15 pm when the moon passed through the dark part of the earth's shadow. Everyone on the night time side of the country was able to see the lunar eclipse. Due to a volcanic eruption earlier in the year, the eclipse was black instead of having red and orange pigment during the total eclipse.

Human Rights Day:
Celebrate Your Freedom

Lisa Lucchesi
Archway Staff Writer

"The Hillel Club feels it is important to commemorate International Human Rights Day as a way of remembering those Jews who have had their human rights taken away or violated throughout history," remarked Randy Abrams, coordinator of Outreach Services for Rhode Island Hillel Council. The United Nations officially declared an International Human Rights Day in 1948.

The day is celebrated worldwide and is commemorated with various events, such as candle vigils and memorial services. "In the United States, as well as in other parts of the world, we still see Jews being oppressed," commented Abrams. "Although we do have more freedoms than we've had in the past, it is necessary to speak on behalf of those still being persecuted."

Is Peace On Its Way?

With the semester ending and a call finally being issued for the various groups of the college to meet to discuss the possible conclusion of a leadership, there are still many questions students want answered.

Some students have questioned whether or not the high level administrators and the trustees are here to serve the students or themselves. Because they see student services suffer, and lose their contacts in the administration, it is easy to understand this concern. Although the answer is unclear, the trustees have offered hope recently by investigating the concerns expressed by various members of the Bryant community.

Students also feel the president be so focused on external affairs, such as fundraising, that the students feel they do not even know who he is? Perhaps it is more important for the president to serve as a leader who knows his troops before he ventures out to represent them.

Will the infamous quest for AACS accreditation really help the students? Or will the new push for research and doctorate degrees cause professors to become more focused on themselves and their job security, than on their students? Will AACS, in effect, take professors away from their classroom time?

What happened to student services? If last summer’s cut-backs were not supposed to effect students, why do student feels services such as student employment, athletics, and class scheduling have suffered? If the chain of command is broken in student services, students lose out because they don’t know who to turn to for answers. They also suffer the consequences of the disorganization felt by staff people who have lost their bosses.

The underlying theme to all of these questions is simple: the college being run for the students or in spite of them.

In several weeks we students will return from break to start a new semester. Hopefully, with a fresh perspective, we will all be ready to engage in the kinds of open discussions the trustees have requested.

Correction:

The article, "Graduate Association Established by Initial Full-Time MBA Students" featured in the December 3 issue of The Archway, inadvertently represented that the Bryant Career Services office has never offered active recruiting services for MBA candidates. It should have stated that the full-time MBA students are assisting the Career Office in setting up the recruiting process and monitoring their current programs to meet the increasing challenges facing MSA’s.

Our apologies to Career Services.

• This is the time of year when holiday festivities are on our minds and we decorate our homes with seasonal decorations. This sometimes causes us to overlook the safety of our surroundings.

• In this issue, we have four questions to consider before decorating:

- Are the lights you intend to use around the outside of the house designed for outside use?
- Are outside electrical outlets protected by ground fault circuit breakers?
- Are extension cords rated for the lights you plan to use?
- Does the forced air vent blow directly on the area where you are decorating your house? (This sometimes means to dry out the tree prematurely.)

• As the suspect arrived, he was met by a Resident Assistant who informed him an anonymous individual had been seen exiting the dorm and opening the sprinkler system stack pipe in the northeast portion of the hallway, a small amount of water flowing onto the floor. Through investigation of the sprinkler system, the detective learned two stack pipe cups were missing completely.

• A man was telling in that area of the building reported having heard loud banging in the hallway. When the suspect entered the hallway, two individuals were in the hallway, one of which gave a full description of the suspect. The individuals reported that the suspect suggested that they were doing something illegal. Investigations continue.

Malicious Fire Alarm

At approximately 4:15am on Sunday, December 6, 1992, the fire alarm in Residence Hall 16 was activated. When the dispatched DPS Officer arrived, the acrid smoke on the annunciator panel called 5th floor, northeast hall. During the investigation, the officer discovered a discharged drychemical fire extinguisher in the hallway. The box from which the extinguisher was removed was also damaged. The Smithfield Fire Department arrived and the alarm was reset.

During a check of rooms in the area, the officer located a witness. The witness stated she was awakened by noise in her suite. When she investigated, she discovered three males in her suite's common area. She questioned the males, who said they had entered through a window. The witness then asked the intruders to leave, and they complied. A few minutes later, the fire alarm was activated.

The witness gave a full description of one of the individuals and an investigation continues.

Reflecting On A Year At The Archway

Kelly A. Cartwright Archway Staff Writer

When I was asked to write this review of the Archway in my last year on campus, I knew I'd be foolish to pass up a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Despite my predecessor's warnings that the job would be difficult, however, I really had no idea that it would be a job, but the toughest challenge of my life. Although I have been a long and often difficult road, I do not regret accepting the challenge. I have learned more in my one year at editor-in-chief than I have in the rest of my three and a half year career at Bryant. It would be impossible for me to say this has been a pleasant, calm year. Because of all of the strife and controversy that emerged on campus in the last twelve months, this has actually been an intense year. This latest lesson I have learned is that you can't please all the people all the time. As a matter of fact, one of the thrusts in the newspaper business should be that no matter what you say or do, someone will not like it.

Unfortunately, those who most often find fault are those who do more than complain in "solve" problems. During my editorial term, I've learned those people who will never be pleased are really unimportant in the grand scheme of things.

This was a banner year for news on campus. The biggest story of the year was the uncovering of an alleged student gambling ring on the Bryant College and University of Rhode Island campuses. Despite allegations that Archway covered the story for its own greater gain, I steadfastly believe all of the "gambling events" were covered in a journalistically sound and professional manner to inform the Bryant community.

The Archway also served as a forum for the debate of whether "non-directly licensed" coolers are unqualefied and whether "doctorally qualified" meant professors were more qualified. Some AACSBD wanna-be's have made it seem like a doctorate degree qualifies a person as a good teacher as if by divine right. Others have claimed that while a doctorate may symbolize higher learning, it does not guarantee better teaching ability. This controversy may never be solved. Nonetheless, I would like to take this opportunity to applaud the service of the many fine teachers at Bryant who truly care about their students. These men and women who care are professionals, regardless of the degree or whether they are "doctorally qualified"... whatever that may mean.

Like last spring, The Archway has also been the place for people to vent their frustrations about poor morale on campus. A

And Now, The End Is Near... From The Editors

Cindy Gale
Archway Staff Writer

The Archway had just been distributed and my stomach was in a knot. It turns out that what had happened at Bryant during the summer has surfaced again. When I read the back page there were classified ads asking for all types of Archway staff members. Not only writers, but advertising designers, photographers, production people, and sports writers. At the time, my career goal was to be a sportsjournalist, and I figured I should get some experience in the field. My Dalek Smith encouraged me to go to the meeting to see what it was all about.

I wasn’t hesitant at first, because I wasn’t sure I wanted to join the newspaper staff. I thought, “I have no experience, I can’t start thinking about putting a newspaper together. What use could I possibly be?” I decided it to be a try anyway.

When I arrived at the meeting, I was in the first row on the left side of the meeting room. When I saw sports, Mark Pillich immediately jumped for joy. He held up an ad in his hand, and only two sports writers and the department desperately needing help. “Are you?” I thought. “Just what I need...”

The first story I covered was the first Annual Essex Hatch Golf Tournament to benefit the scholarship fund. But by the yellow turf in the rain for two days, with paper in hand, and I took notes in the numbers. I pondered my article forever, and when finally finished it, I thought it was fantastic; all 700 characters of it.

The next, I guess you can say, is history.

When I joined started, I had no one to call at all. There were no one, and no one seemed to care if they knew me or not. I was supposed to be a sports writer and I knew no one in the place of sports. I dropped my articles, attended my weekly meeting, and that was period. End of sports.

In mid-November of that year, the current sports editor decided he didn’t want to work anymore, and was gone. When Michael Boyd first asked if I wanted to take it, I was sure it was his best decision. I believed the question was “How much of my time will it take up?” He said, “Oh, not much at all. It depends on how much time you and effort you want to put into it.” Little did I know...

I was now expected to be up at the office on production night, and I thought “Why don’t I know how to turn on the computer, let alone lay out a page.” I went up anyway, but always managed to make an early exit. I felt useless and in the way, and then I bolted.

Then, all of a sudden, something changed. Spring semester of the year, people were actually looking at me, and because I was referred to by my name instead of that girl who wrote sports. “I still didn’t feel very comfortable at the office, but at least I fit in a little better.

By the end of that semester, I was up at the office all the time, not just writing articles, but socializing with the staff. I formed many close friendships that semester which are still very strong today.

We all said goodbye for the summer and couldn’t wait to see each other again in the fall. But, one staff member never made it back and The Archway will never be the same without her.

Those close to me know how much the death of Michael Cahn affected me and how much the turning point in my life was. Michael was the most creative individual I ever met. And although I didn’t know him for that long, he or more specifically his death, had a great impact on my life, and is something I will never forget.

I was then promoted to Managing Editor in January of this year. I had to learn to be a leader and a friend, which wasn’t always easy. This year has been a very trying and challenging one. I can’t personally, and professionally, I have found myself in situations I didn’t quite know how to handle. I made the right decision and others, well, I didn’t. But that is why we’re here, to learn.

And most importantly, I learn it’s not always easy.

Looking back over these two years on the Editorial Board, many stories stand out in my mind. Of course the gambling ring, conflicts with students, the review of Rob Base for (homecoming ’90, the Cliff Walk scandal, and most importantly, with Kristen Haish. Although never knew Kristen personally, I have gotten to know her through the Archway work with The Kristen Haish Memorial Road Race. It is an event I have grown very close to and will miss next fall.

I guess the whole point of this trip down memory lane is to thank every one who helped and encouraged me along the way. Without them, I wouldn’t have been able to come this far.

Special thank you to so many. If you think we’re done, I’d do it again, how about you? To Michael and Mark for giving me the opportunity to show my talent and for believing in me, to our roommates, the Sharpes, the Dwyers, who stood by me. And everyone else, there are too many to mention, who have been there, who have listened, and I am honored to call friends. And, of course to my Dad and A.J., for making me believe anything is possible.

The Archway was a big part of my life for a long time. It’s not going to be easy to leave, but I know I’ve gained so much, and now it’s time to move on. With Lisa and Ani and the rest of their Editorial Board the rest of the best. I have no doubts in my mind you guys will do a great job. You have my utmost confidence and I know you’ll make me proud.

It’s true, The Archway is a real-life experience that teaches you more about how to write articles and use a computer. You learn what teamwork, dedication and friendship are all about. And you have fun doing it.

To the entire Archway staff... I’ll miss the late nighters, the long walks back from the cold, the stress, the loud music, the fights with the cow, and all the fun. I can’t say all of you are in my life, but I know you’ll make me proud!

It’s easier sometimes not to hear it but you needed to hear it. The message of people like Michael, Terrie, Martin Luther King, and John-Paul II to name a few, challenge us to get our ducks in line and find God’s love in the smallest of creatures, in the birth of an infant destined to be the holy revelation of God, our own son.

Wake Up! It’s Christmas. Have you noticed? Hope so. If you have, your life will never be the same again. God will visit you and pitch the tent of business and grace in your heart. Know God in the infant King whose birthday we remember as Christmas.

I wish you all a Blessed and Merry Christmas and a Happy and Holy New Year. May the new born Savior bless your family and friends with every grace, and good thing. Merry Christmas.

International Feature: La Luz

by Edgar Hernandez

Hay una luz en el horizonte, indicando el camino. Pero, no todas las vueltas, sabías que deberías seguir, decide que para poderla ver, hay que tener más de cien años de edad, ¡Sabíamos de eso!... Es tan fácil alcanzar la luz; no se necesita nada más que el simple entendimiento de lo que es la vida, el constante aprendizaje de nuestros errores que nos hacen comprender, el interpretar esos errores y transformarlos en el conocimiento de nuestras sabiduría.

Es tan fácil alcanzar la luz; no se necesita nada más que el perdón y el sincero amor del corazón, la felicidad.

The women’s basketball team went 1-2 last week as they completed their second full week of play. On Saturday, the Bills had to win the only win of the week against Keene State 80-78 in a come back from behind victory.

High scorers in the game was Liz Davies with 21 and Kelly Jacob with 16. Doherty also teamed up for 20 rebounds, holding Keene State to only two offensive rebounds.

“It helped with a positive reinforcement,” head coach Mary Burke said when asked about the win.

“It’s hard to get a young team used to playing especially on the road this weekend. And we were able to come home with a certain confidence in the second half when we came back.”

The Bills had some help from other key players, Kim Ross and Bridgett Coopman who played well and kept the team balanced.

“We snipped up and played big during the game, we have a young team if you get senior leadership you will win games.”

Saturday, the Bills had their toughest loss of the week on Saturday 75-90. High scorer in the game was Liz Davies with 23.

“We came out flat,” Burke said.

The indoor track team opened their season Tuesday, December 1 in a non-scoring meet at the United States Coast Guard Academy. The team did quite well with many members attaining personal bests.

The club was officially established last semester and are recruiting anyone who wishes to participate. Co-president of the club Karen Wain and Tom Giguere. Vice president, secretary and treasurer are Peter Gosselin, Heather Cronin, and Andrew Lee respectively. This year’s team will consist of approximately forty plus members.

The team looks forward to a total of five meets this season which are all invitational involving Division II schools.

They are planning numerous fund-raisers for this season and are hoping.

“The team is off for the rest of the semester and will pick up the season in January.”

Racquetball Defeats PC

By Doug DeCosta

The Racquetball Club ended a seven-year slump against Providence College two weeks ago by handing PC their worst loss ever, 18-2.

Bryant continues to build on last year’s team that won 5 of its last 6 matches and finished the season ranked 17th in the country. Head coach Denise Savoie added after the match, “It’s about time we did to PC what they’ve been doing to us the past several years.” That was an apparent reference to Bryant’s 1-2-1 lifetime record against Providence.

Providence coach Steve Meyer was visibly upset tying the loss and declined to comment on Bryant’s victory.

This year the team added five rookies to its playing roster. The men added: Todd Gourio (2 spot), Doug DeCosta (1, and Scott Kauffman #8. The women’s team added Kristen Levins #2 and Carra Xavier #6. The women were a combined 4-1 in their singles matches.

The women’s team swept all nine of their matches with the Women’s Captain #1 Bobbi Jo Bell netting the pace with a 15-0, 15-0 victory.

Hockey Successful Against MIT

By Jason Crozier

The Hockey Club started last week with a morally uplifting tying, but ended it with an upsetting defeat.

The team visited undefeated MIT (4-0) on December 1. They started slow and allowed the Engineers to score the first goal only after 2:00 of play.

Bryant began to pick up the pace, and after one minute of continuous shooting, the got the puck past the MIT intense goal tender, John Doherty picked up the assist.

On the very next shift, Cliff Stalker put Bryant in the lead. After Doherty scored the tying goal and Greg Doherty picked up the assist.

The evening went on to finish the game, leaving the teams tied 1-1. Bryant scored the goal early in the third leaving the game tied at three. The teams started the game.

The game was a nail biter in what was a dismal setting.

Even President-elect Bill Clinton got involved. He watched the game along with Jim Kelly, who said he was praying for his recovery.

We think of athletics as superior in some cases, because of the way they play and act. Dennis Byrd is one of these men. He is not letting his injury get him down. He knows he will never return so the goal isn’t there, but he has to get on with his life. At least he has people supporting him emotionally.

Dennis ispage and the rest of the students here at Bryant are pulling for your recovery. Our thoughts and wishes are with you.

Athlete of the Week

This week’s Athlete of the Week is Patrick Doherty of the karate club. Doherty tested for his KYU Brown Belt with all the perfection impossible. His next test will be for black belt. He works hard and long.

Doherty said, “It’s a great honor (to be selected Athlete of the Week). It means that perseverance and dedication pays off in the long run.”
