Policy Changes in Effect Spring Weekend

By Jill Zaharans
archivist Staff Writer

The spring weekend is fast approaching, and many students are still unaware of the current policy changes. Slight alterations in policy have been made to alleviate the stress caused by past policies. Students should be well aware of the changes for the spring weekend to avoid any surprises.

The most significant alteration is the change in the style of testing. Students must now wear student IDs on their ID cards. Any student not wearing an ID card will not be allowed into the building. This change is to ensure the safety of all students and faculty.

One important point to remember is that there will be a $5 fee for entering the building. Students must present their ID card to enter the building. This fee is intended to cover the cost of security personnel.

In conclusion, the changes in policy are intended to improve the safety and security of the campus. Students are encouraged to be aware of the new policies and to follow them to ensure a safe and enjoyable spring weekend.
U.S. Officials Suggest Major中东 Combat All But Over in Iraq

President George W. Bush, left, and British Prime Minister Tony Blair walk through the grounds of British castle Caernarvon in northern England as they discuss the war in Iraq among other issues.

could be the residue of pesticides, officials said they believed nerve agents are present. About a dozen soldiers and two journalists, including Knight-Rider reporter Tom Lasseter, said the substances made them itchy or caused blisters on their skin. More sophisticated tests will be conducted in coming days, Runsfeld said.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said the initial reports and tests are often inconclusive. "Almost all first reports we get are wrong," he said. Some military officials on the scene said the material is not unusual.

In another major development, a British official said that according to sources close to Prime Minister Tony Blair, "the regime of terror of Chemical Attack has come to an end." Rumsfeld said it was hard to say if that was a victory, but the Bush administration was "pleased to be getting information" on the tactics used by Saddam Hussein, a point Whitman and other Iraq commanders tried to drive home in their briefings in Baghdad, near the canisters, in September. The United States has not yet confirmed that the chemical agents are nerve agents, but evidence suggests that could be the case. The chemical agents probably were sarin gas, which is a highly toxic nerve agent, or tabun, another nerve agent, experts said.

Frank, chief of the U.S. Central Command, visited troops in the area, which could be the site of the sarin gas attack.

In recent days, hundreds of Iraqi prisoners of war from the American-led coalition were handed over to the government of Iraq, which has begun to release some of them.

Students Share Internship Experiences

Written and Photographed By Elaine Chzrand
Archway Staff Writer

As the semester winds down, the campus becomes hectic and busy with final projects, papers, and exams. However, contrary to popular belief, it is not too late to find that summer internship that will provide you with real world experience or a stepping stone to that perfect opportunity. Even though it may be more difficult to find, it is necessary to exercise all available options and resources that are available to you.

Internships are rewarding and very beneficial to students, especially business students and Bryant students seem to aim at being part of the Ivy League. Not yet though.

The burden on faculty seems heavy, however they choose this job because of the fact that they probably enjoy it. According to Vanagascar, they believe that only the professors who are truly concerned about the expectations of their students feel this way.

Bryant students are encouraged to make professors aware of their expectations and career concerns with their work load, it is probably likely that faculty is oblivious to career concerns. There are other forms of making complaints and suggestions. However, professors just like everyone else, have the right to be Member of the Faculty’s Union, which makes sure there is thorough investigation.

It is only natural that somewhere along the line, faculty and students will choose to disagree on educational goals and methods of teaching. However, according to Ron Vin, “this is a normal and healthy kind of difference that exists on all colleges to some extent.”

As Far As the Bryant Players Are Concerned, Anything Goes!

By Christine Ludwigzak
Archives Editor

The Bryant Players put on a sensational performance last weekend, taking to the stage in an actual Broadway production, Anything Goes.

The musical comedy takes place at sea, with a mix of characters on board. There’s a gangster on the run, a singing bull dancer, and the flirty and wild romance who complicates things further.

A series of mistaken identities, and a love triangle of “bogusSuch a fantastic production. The show is well worth the ticket price for any lover of theatre as well as anyone looking for a night out.

The story is about love, power, and money. The characters are well-developed and the plot is fast-paced, keeping the audience on the edge of their seats.

The cast was outstanding, with standout performances from the lead actors. The musical numbers were优美, and the choreography was perfect.

Overall, Anything Goes is a must-see for Theatre lovers and anyone looking for a night out.

Students Rally For Peace

I shouldn’t have been scared, and I shouldn’t have been embarrassed, but I was. I didn’t want the school seeing me at the peace site. I didn’t want to be associated with them. It didn’t matter to me what my beliefs were.

So now I am ashamed that I associated the peace-in group as a traitor. They shouldn’t be. Unfortunately, not everyone at this school sentir such.

I joined the peace site on Thursday, April 3rd at 2PM. There weren’t many people in the group yet, but everyone was very welcoming. I told them who I was, and asked if they would mind if I asked them a few questions. Everyone who gathered there shared the same beliefs against the war. It’s not just in Iraq, but also war in general.

But that is not the only reason they go. They go to be seen, but it’s more of a social environment where they can gather and meet new people who share the same beliefs. A meeting ground between faculty, staff, and students where they can hear each other’s views and have some discussion about the war.

Elizabeth Walden, a professor of humanities here at the university, says she doesn’t just go because she’s against the war, but because she wants to be part of the conversation, to be heard, and to have her voice heard.

“People need to be heard. They need to be seen. They need to know that their voices are being heard and that they are valued.”

With the current political climate, it’s important that these voices are heard.

Hurry up and give us sign...

It has been awhile since I have attended a poetry reading or writing as an editor. The reading has received a lot of attention. Students have been quite vocal about their concerns regarding the war and wanting concerns about certain colleges department.

Now it is my turn. I would like to take this opportunity to address an issue that The Archway has found to be quite troubling. The new policies regarding posters and flyers. My guess is that the printing of signs and posters has been taken away, yet NOTHING has been offered as an alternative. Right now the problem seems to be a serious one within our community. The college has yet to create any new areas where those things can be hanging and presently there has been no increase in interior and exterior signage, which helps students and others to where they need to go.

Not only is this frustrating from an academic standpoint, but consider the campus books, which has thought about how they can make their policies seem less arbitrary and that the "unstructured" is.

Good luck finding anything on the campus, but consider the campus books, which has thought about how they can make their policies seem less arbitrary and that the "unstructured" is.

The Economics of Having a Girlfriends: A Negotiating Model for Relationships

By Tom Bresciani

Conventional negotiation models for two parties generally assume the following form:

(1) Each party initiates the negotiation process by submitting a minimum payoff that must be received by the other party.

(2) Subsequent to this introduction of minimum payoffs, each party declares a maximum excess surplus (or "threat") that will ensue under the condition that their minimum payoff is not received. And (3) Once all payoffs and consequences have been made explicit, negotiations proceed until the minimum payoff to each party has been exceeded by an amount that returns each party's threat to a level equal or higher.

With respect to non-plutotic relationships, however, this theoretical model exhibits absolutely no practical utility. The female consequently demands a much higher acceptable minimum payoff than the male in addition to establishing several new requirements in the instance that the minimum payoff is not received.

Consequently forced to overturn the idea that the important element of negotiation is understanding and achieving a win-win situation that had happened. Recognizing this, the following model, which fills the gap in utility that had been made apparent by the data, is presented. This model, recognized as "the distorted minimum payoff model," performs optimally under the conditions in which each party has had the following components:

(1) The parties have a distorted minimum payoff.

(2) Non-plutotic payoffs, and (3) No big deals.

Essentially, the model assumes that an initial agreement is made whereby the parties continuously negotiate the terms of the contract.

Once a mutual agreement is made, the parties will not mutually negotiate for its current most significant essential payoff, one which is "surprisingly; pointless."

Guster Parachutes Down

Christian Collard
Archives Staff Writer

It’s been 12 years, 4 albums, and countless shows since Ryan Miller (guitar/vocals), Brian Rosenworcel (percussion), and Adam Gardner (guitar/bass) first met as freshmen at Tulane University in the fall of 1997 and conjured up the idea of getting together and making music.

They’ve been playing shows together since October 3, 1992 however back then they were known as Gau. The band had to change their moniker after another artist who went by Gus signed to Geffen Records in the summer of 1995.

With their fourth album, “Keep It Together,” on the verge of release (June 2003) Guster has hit the road this spring playing clubs and college campuses and they’ll be stopping off to play here at Bryant on April 26th. If you haven’t heard them before, make sure to check them out on your list. You’ve been missing out on amazing music that thousands have been listening to for a dozen years now.

Their first 3 CDs have been critically acclaimed and have stirred up plenty of interest in the rock scene. They have performed on Late Night with Conan O’Brien, played Woodstock ‘99, and toured with such acts as the Barenaked Ladies.

Despite having plenty of mainstream appeal they still remain somewhat “underground”.

Their style of folk-lyric acoustic pop is very unique, with the subject matter varying from quirky, light songs mixed with some serious ballad-type material. Here are a few suggestions for listening to the 3 CD’s.

Parachute 1 - Fall In Two, 2

Parachute 2 - Mora Luisa, 4, - Wandsden, 10

Parachute 3 - Happy Fringe, 11 - Parachute Goldberg, 7 - Great Escape, 2 - Dollars, 4 - Airport Song, 9 - Baby Me

Lost and Gone Forever - 5

Barrel of a Gun, 3 - Either Way, 4 - Fa, Fa, A Center of Attention

A big part of the Guster experience is getting to see them live because it appears to be their true artistic medium. They connect to the crowd in a way that even their few fans can do.

They’ve been known to throw in a few covers during their live shows such as Livin’ On A Prayer, California Dreamin’ I think We’re Alone Now, and Stairway to Heaven.

For more information and to hear bits of the forthcoming album “Keep It Together” visit the official Guster site at (you guessed it) www.guster.com.

Also for those interested in some live and rare Guster multimedia clips check out the www.guster.com/fanpage.

The band will be opening for Guster. The Spring Weekend show starts at 6pm on Saturday April 20th at the Athletic Field’s come out and experience Guster live!

Opinion: Why Rap Radio Sucks Part II

Continuing my opinion from my article “Why Rap Radio Sucks,” I had the opportunity to watch the Tonight Show on March 29th, a group, Desert Fleet, hailing from the streets of Boston. I must say they put on a great show.

This was an excellent opportunity to see a growing rap group from the Boston community to get a feel of what rap is outside of HOT 106.3.

Desert Fleet is not to be mixed with a Rock-a-fella Records type group, but more of a Dungeon Family, because of their many metaphors combined with knowledge. He says their focus is to keep away from the commercialization that effects many rap groups and rappers today.

Although one of the younger members of the group, the appearance stage with a flow that changes much respect from the crowd.

After watching up the crowd, the group is an assortment of lyrical metaphors in their music. They have leave their ears. Some of their songs consist of Lyrics that are made more for a capella rather than beats, which is good things because too many people are hearing music today, not listening.

(Both Desert Fleet and I agree too easily rappers are rapping and not saying anything.

This is why prior to performances they listen to “authentic” rap without gimmicks, which brings us to another combined thought “Everyone can rap, but it’s about who can make it” says Big Tee, co-CEO.

Desert Fleet has members all down the East Coast, which gives them a variety of original artist and not a bunch of copycat sets. We also agreed upon the attention of what is called commercialized music.

They did give respect to Nelly, only because he put in his own style to help make money on his commercialized music, akin to their idea on radio programmers looking for who is selling and not what is being said by the artist.

“We respect those who have skills,” says Big Tee, whose crew’s list of those with skills is not that long because many rappers “party-pants” off someone.

This is why Biggie Smalls and 2Pac, are their influences and most notably Master P, who inspired Big Tee’s entrepreneurship. He recently co-produced a TV show called “Strictly Hip-Hop”.

“Underground Rap is where we need to go back to,” Big Tee said “we want hip-hop,” in with rappers displaying their best talents for their street credibility.

There are differences between purposely underground tracks versus tracks that become commercialized, or produced commercialized music to keep their record labels at ease.

This is ok in my book because you cannot hit the hand that feeds you. If you do, as Pumpey says, “break pocket’s yells,” and that is the truth.

When THE FIN radio UNDERGROUND SHOWS where they display underground music for artists who have great music but not big airplay and become hidden stars. This is where they hide for years looking back on Mistakes. If you do not believe me — Talk Swell, Jarron’s, and DMX are a couple of examples to name a few.

Even though artists have been forecasting the underground scene, to use guest appearances and Mixtapes to get their spotlights, Pete Rock says, “Stop up your game and make some good * so people aren’t offered when they hear it.”

“Offered” in the sense of Interests being upset you actually went into the studio, produced a whack track, have the network play it on radio with that track, and say to yourself, “This is hot.”

This is what those that make commercialized music an EMMO voice comes to mind, with “Humped up their style from farts to swish” and thinking about the underground music made for the stations! For a whole new evolution Ships of a new type of come! To go plato-tone and click and green.

Too much to mention, but you can keep up with WME 87.3 FM on Sun. 9-11 for Big pctchord & Clint Spez at 8pm as well as Wed. 5-8pm for Big Speech and Thurs. 9-11 for Pops & Jenny. It’s a wrap.
