Police Link Latest Va. Shooting to Earlier Sniper Shootings

By Ken Merrittson, Seth Borenstein and Samana Chatterjee

Linda Franklin, a 30-year-old business intelligence analyst who beat breast cancer twice, was the Washington, D.C., area's fourth victim, ballistic tests confirmed Tuesday.

Police were stopping white vans and trucks Tuesday around the crime scene created by the shooting, lasting in a two-week-long spell that has left five people dead, wounded, and millions terrified throughout the D.C. area.

A single bullet to the head killed Franklin, 47, in a Home Depot parking lot Monday in southeast Washington, near the northern edge of Falls Church, Va. She had been shopping with her husband. When they were planning to move from their town home in nearby Arlington, Va., on Friday and had bought supplies for their new home. They were about to load them into their convertible when Linda Franklin was slain.

Although many Washingtonians have wrung since the shootings began Oct. 24, Franklin's isn't the type that would have moved indoors, said Peggy Hulsey, Franklin's friend of four years.

She said Franklin would have been seeking some help from the Department of Justice, if illegal experts can figure out how to overcome a prohibition on the U.S. National Guard from participating in law enforcement.

Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld, in a request from the F.B.I., has given preliminary approval for those two units, which now have received sanctuary from the United Nations to authorize force against Iraq before the United States could go to war.

If the world body did not act, under Levin's proposal, Bush would have had to return to Congress for a new resolution authorizing U.S. force. Levin, D-Mich., in 1998, introduced the bill.

The implied votes were a resounding victory for Bush, whose advisors initially were skeptical and apparently did not even consider congressional authorization to go to war against Iraq. They also encountered a historic contrast with Bush's father, who was surprised by a similar problem in 1990, by much narrower margins, 52-47.

While America prepares for war against Iraq and U.S. troops prepare the hunt for Osama bin Laden and his chief lieutenant in Pakistan and Afghanistan, a new terrorism threat is on the United States and its allies is spreading across Southeast Asia.

A new threat came into full focus on Saturday, when a devastating bomb on the campus of the University of the Philippines left at least 187 people, including many foreign tourists, injured and wounded hundreds in Indonesia and the Philippines.

In the Philippines, they helped plan last year's Sept. 11 attacks on the United States in Southeast Asia last year, they schemed to set off seven more bombs within weeks. They showed again when they took obvious delight in the Sept. 11 attacks that killed almost 3,000 people in the United States.

These men were held to be the cause of God to punish America, said Jolo, a one-eyed terrorist network run by the Philippines. They hoped to harm bin Laden. True, he was happy about the attacks.

The wanton killing of civilians in the course of state war, by both Muslim and non-Muslim groups, is a matter of deep concern to both Muslims and non-Muslims. It is seen as a violation of international law and a breach of the Geneva Conventions.

President Bush signs the joint resolution passed by Congress authorizing the use of force against Iraq

47 in the Senate; 253-18 in the House.

Though Bush won the authority he wanted, the resolution's final wording did contain cautions that helped sway some senators and had the sanction of the Senate "Council," said Rep. John Spratt, D-S.C., voted for the war resolution after his own, more restrictive proposal was defeated.

There are two key votes that probably gave the Senate the confidence to support Bush's resolution. First, Senators voted 75-25 to limit the debate, and thus block opposition from the Senate. Second, they voted to make it the only alternative, a proposal from Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., that would require the United States to negotiate force against Iraq before the United States could go to war.

If the world body did not act, under Levin's proposal, Bush would have had to return to Congress for a new resolution authorizing U.S. force. Levin, D-Mich., in 1998, introduced the bill.

Have you ever wondered what would happen if people stopped volunteering on this campus? Have you stopped to think lately how life would be different if we did not have students, staff, and faculty that were willing to take time out of their days to make this school a better place to be?

I have been asking myself this question a lot in the past month or so, and I have come to the conclusion that something good could happen here at Bryant—whether or not it be the attitude of the students here, or the overabundance of people who volunteer their time. Up until this issue, the Archway staff has consisted of a select few who have decided that belonging to the school paper is a worthwhile endeavor. But the production and actual creation of this paper has been on my shoulders almost entirely. The fact that this is published, this is being read, is due in large part to the efforts of my peers. I do not believe that we have a general lack of campus involvement, and it was this letter that reminded me of that fact.

In a time when we are concerned with fleeting up those all important spreads, it worries me that clubs and organizations must struggle to recruit and retain membership. The Archway is just one example.

However, there are still on-lookers, guards, who may not be the most ideal times, but in the end, what will matter is that we have a majority of us still be able to have our voices heard.

Take groups like Helping Hands or Special Olympics, when those who are in need of help, we at Bryant College students just too many involved? I personally don't think that is the case, but when I hear my friends are going to a free concert in South Dining Hall, I wonder why the people who try to make this campus better still work so hard.

Why put time and effort into something to benefit the student body when not only it is not appreciated, but little connection is made between organizations or groups on what is being done to the campus?

This I think is part of the problem. As charitably-minded as we all think that we are, it is nice to be recognized for a job well done.

Members of 1996 would like to see their name in print, and I believe that what makes getting involved so great on this campus is the feeling that you come away with after something has been accomplished, and I believe that organizations would start to support their fellow classmates a little more, the general necessity of this paper being surfaced, would decrease greatly.

Part of being involved on this campus is not only organizing events or running organizations. It is also showing up to these events and meetings. Sporting events, clubs and organizations, concerts, speakers, bingo, movies, fundraisers, and all other events on and off campus.

These things are available all of us in the Bryant Community as something to enjoy and participate in, and I think that of people have lost sight of that.

It is able to be selfish. Partake in these things for yourself but don't be selfish with your time (as long as it is your time) because both are hot commodities on this campus and are valued highly.

So get out there and do something with your time. Get a feeling of belonging, a sense of belonging, a sense of community, and a feeling of satisfaction at the end of the day. That is what your college experience is what you make of it, and your time here consists of sleeping, drinking and watching "Crank Yankers" on Comedy Central, as well as what you have really accomplished.

Letter to the Editor: Student Participation on Campus Seems Low

Dear Editor:

Where's the REST of it? After reading "Bryant Sigma Eta showcasing Bryan for Homecoming," and "I picked up The Archway to get a sense of the campus. It seemed a little thin, but I was pleased to see that I get printed every two weeks, even if it is a LITTLE thin."

Upon further review I noticed that a number of the editor positions are vacant. This confirmed what I heard when visiting in the spring when visiting old haunt at VIM Student participation is down in most on-campus activities.

Does nobody want to step up and see their name in print? Do they not care about what goes on at Bryant? I miss Public Safety, best as well as the goings-on of the various clubs and organizations. It would truly be sad if the students for whom The Archway is published, did not see the need for a student newspaper.

Obviously, if you don't have the horses, you can only run the race. I don't as much as want to see an attack on The Archway staff, but rather upon the apparent apathy of the current Bryant student body. That is why I would be keeping them from asking the effort!

The Economics of Having a Girlfriend: Birthday Presents Part 2

By Tom Fischetti

PhD Candidate

As the last column suggested, this week we will be exploring the two variables that compose the equation used to determine how much the male student will spend on his girlfriend's birthday present.

First, we will be looking at the problems facing the boyfriend in this scenario deal with the potential costs of the present. How does one avoid allocating too many financial resources toward this purchase?

More importantly, how could one minimize the potential losses that may ensue from a break in the relationship subsequent to the purchase of her present but prior to your birthday? To approach this dilemma in an economically responsible manner, the boyfriend must ascertain the values of two variables, P, and A, where

P = Probability the relationship will still exist on your birthday

A = Age of the relationship, expressed in months, on your birthday

Now, before the potential loss minimization calculation (the girlfriend birthday present equation) can be revealed, the logic behind the selection of the two variables must be explained.

I believe that it is essential that the boyfriend understands the probability of the relationship still existing come his birthday.

If for some reason the relationship materializes because of behavior on an eventful Friday night/Saturday morning, and her birthday happens to fall on the day you are with your girlfriend, the boyfriend must question the potential longevity of the relationship before committing any financial resources to her present.

In such an instance, the boyfriend needs to ask himself, "Are we going to be together this weekend, nevertheless come my birthday in two months?" The answer should be a sufficient indicator of the general direction of the relationship and assist the boyfriend in the resource allocation process.

I mean, why buy jewelry when come Friday you're becoming increasingly social with another female who may potentially be "the one"?

Conversely, consider the situation of a boyfriend residing in paradise with his girlfriend of five years. In this case, it would be safe to affirm that the emotional fabric of the relationship is strong enough to assure that the boyfriend will be receiving something on his birthday, whether they are still dating or not.

Here, the possibility of a financial loss is smaller than the latter case, the boyfriend's financial outlay for his girlfriend's birthday present is offset by a future inflow on his big day.

The second variable, A, is also a logical inclusion.

Because the equation applied by the female in determining how much to spend on the boyfriend's present is expressed in the following manner:

A = 0.15% of her Semester Savings Fund ($1000)

the boyfriend is compelled to consider A, in his purchasing decisions. Armed with this knowledge, he is positioned to exploit the female's predictability by adjusting the amount he spends accordingly.

Because the value of A is zero, will be split in both the boyfriend and girlfriend's equations, including A ensures that the boyfriend will not be dedicating too much emotional resources toward his girlfriend's present. In this respect, equity in the relationship is somewhat sustained (see that ladies, your well-being is also genuinely considered in this column).

Unfortunately, because both time and space constraints, the unrolling of the equation must be postponed until next issue.

Although this was not my initial intention, circumstances have dictated otherwise. Believe me, I am sincerely sorry for any consequent inconveniences and hope that your patience is as great as your kind hearts.

However, if your girlfriend's birthday happens to fall before the release of the next issue, and you are dire need to minimize your potential losses from this ill-fated expenditure, e-mail me. I'd be more than happy to ease you some of your semester leverage money.

Women's Soccer Shoots for NCAA Tournament

By Chris Ludwiczak

The Bryant College Women's Soccer team completed their season with a first round berth in the NCAA tournament. The Bryant Bulldogs have now achieved a national ranking of 21st in the country. This year's success has not been easy, since the Bulldogs have been marked as a team all others aspire to beat. The girls came into practice with a strong attitude and a summer of hard training behind them.

They established goals early on, and knew where they stood after the two months down the road. Come November 2, the team intends to be playing in the NCAA semifinal again once, this time at home, right here in Bulldog Stadium.

Last year's team achieved success, but there was the pressure of others in the conference. Now Bryant had the soccer program at Bryant College been taken to such a level and recognized for so many achievements.

However, their winning season had just proved to be one of the team's biggest obstacles. Last year the Bulldogs were able to sneak up on some teams early on, and earn a legitimate status later in the season. "Our biggest challenge is not being the underdog anymore," explained coach Chris Flint.

"We are learning to play as a team others want to beat."

"It puts a different spin on the whole season," stated junior captain Rachel Basset.

"Last year we went out and played for ourselves. There are a lot more expectations this season."

However, the team knows what needs to be achieved for Bryant to play in NCAA tournament next month. As junior captain Kelly explained, "We can either be playing in the tournament or handing out parries for it."

The idea of a home field advantage in such an important series of games is definitely a motivating factor for the team.

The girls kicked off the season with a strong start and a four game winning streak, which earned them a standing of No. 10 in the country. This is the highest ranking in the history of the soccer program for the college.

"We started out strong, and then had a show period where we weren't connecting," explained sophomore Elizabeth Benet. The team's first loss was to Saint Anselm College. St. A's scored their lone goal directly off a corner kick with some help from the powerful wind. The loss was a shock, given the way that it happened, but "it was a reality check," said Coach Flint. "The game of soccer can go anyway, anytime."

The Bulldogs are still able to learn from their losses, and take away something from each defeat.

Two juniors, Benette and Kelly share the role of captains.

Women's Golf

The women's golf team has had a great season. We hosted our second annual Bryant College Women's Golf Invitational at Beaver River Golf Club on Sept. 31-2. Fifteen schools came, and the tournament was won by Florida Gulf Coast University.

This coming weekend we are going on our 4th tournament for the fall. We leave Friday for Myrtle Beach for the long weekend. We will be playing in the Lowes-Kyow Invitational. We will have a spring season as well, and we welcome tryouts for the team!

Women's Tennis

We have achieved so much this season. We are currently 6-2 in the Conference with four matches left before the conference tournament. We are no longer the next to last team in the conference. We are now a team to be reckoned with. We're turning heads, which is a nice feeling.

Our recruiting efforts have paid off and are starting to pay dividends. It's been a welcome change. We look forward to the rest of our season including the conference tournament, which is next week. We have the potential to turn this season's losses into wins at the tournament.

We also have players that could walk away with some Conference accolades. Alex Spencer is up for freshman of the year. She is 7-3 in singles play. She has beaten last year's NE-10 player of the year and freshman of the year, Marianna Santanello, could be on the all-conference doubles team too.

Women's Soccer

The Bryant College Women's soccer team is back on track after a late September bump in the road. The Lady Bulldogs started the year 0-4-0 and ranked #12 in the nation.

The lady 'Dogs are ranked #1 in the nation and received four votes on the latest Top 25 poll. Bryant scored a goal against UMass Lowell here at Beaver River Golf Club on Sept. 24. Bryant has scored the game-winning goal against UMass Lowell and has scored the 5-0 goal in the NE-10.

The Men's Soccer team won two games remaining in the season, traveling to New Hampshire on Saturday to battle Franklin Pierce.

Bryant Outplays Bentley 5-2

The win was a team effort, as senior forward Michael Minciardi scored two goals, and junior forward Clint Stoneka had a goal and two assists. Junior midfielder Allison Kelly became the program's all-time leader in assists, as she fed Sophomore Kristen Harmon for the game winner.

Junior forward Clint Stoneka fights for a win in the air.

Senior forward Mario DeLisi goes one-on-one with the Falcon's defense.

Introducing Art

By Justin Setter
Variety Editor

Dee Benschneider - "What do students dare do the wooded confines of Bryant College without first expanding their cultural horizons?" That might come as a shock to some but you may need more than your $22,000+ business education to make something of yourself in the real world. Don’t worry, though; your opportunity to become cultured is available to you right now.

The Bryant College 2002-2003 Art Series, sponsored by the Office of Student Activities, draws a variety of artistic domains. Students and faculty are exposed to plays, music, films, poetry readings, photography classes, crafts, and art exhibits.

Students and faculty can start their artistic journey with a theater staples such as "A Christmas Carol" presented in late November and "Phantom of the Opera," in March. These shows are located at Trinity Repertory Company and FPPC, respectively. Discounted tickets can be purchased on campus. The Bryant community also has the opportunity to experience the comedic film "Menace II Society," on November 2.

Two poetry readings highlight the series. Bessie Wommer, the posthumous of Maine, and Bryant’s own Professor Irma Chandler, the poet laureate of Rhode Island, will be the reading selections of their own work at Bryant College.

Bessie Wommer will be in Janikies Auditorium on Wednesday, Oct. 30, at 7 p.m. The reading should prove to be quite interesting. The subjects in Wommer’s fourth book, "M Density & Others," range from AIDS to war crimes with settings that jump from Las Vegas to Dallas.

Fellow poet laureate Chandler describes Wommer as "a person of very strong character who understands the essence of daily life." (Continued on page 8)

Faculty Profile: Professor Steven Riggs

By Farai Mgigi
Archway Staff

Position at Bryant:
Adjunct (part-time) professor in the Department of Communication, in which I typically teach two courses per semester.

Background:
Chandler provides an opportunity to experience poetry on a more personal level with his poetry reading, which is scheduled for March 19 at 7:30 p.m. in Phippitt.

Chandler will be reading selections of poems as well as doing a youth signing. His newest book, Sad Jazz should be out in December.

Another interesting aspect of the series is the photography class, which began in late September and continues through October.

Artistic Endeavors:
Chandler's artwork is taught by professional Suzanne Russell, the small class is taught by the masters of photography using black and white film. The overall goal of expanding Bryant's artistic appreciation is very reasonable considering the opportunities provided by the college through the 2000-2003 Art Series.

Look for more focused stories on the events of this years Art Series in upcoming issues of The Archway.
