Taking a Shot at Breast Cancer
By Kevin Heurn

Each year, thousands of women are diagnosed with Breast Cancer. Sisters, mothers, and grandmothers, neighbors and friends - 43,000 each year. And men too. While much less comparatively, each year 1400 men are diagnosed with this form of cancer. However, as staggering as these annual statistics may be, this year would be different - made so the Committee reached these victories - Pescatello, AD Dan Gavitt, Molly Devaney - Student Senate President, Student Senators for each class, presidents from both the IFC and Panhellenic Councils, and members of SPB and the Peer Educators.

Intercultural Center Opens Its Doors

Week Armed with ribbons and basketballs, these students set out to make their community stand up and take notice by planning both passive and interactive programs throughout the week. From posters noting statistics about affliction and detection, to ribbon distribution, to quizzes distributed in the Rotunda throughout the week, the Committee reached out to make passersby aware of how this disease affects us and those we know. And to make sure the week's events drew attention, the Committee drew on the support and involvement of some of the College's VIPS to help them with their "Shoot for Awareness" fund-raiser. Pledge sheets in hand, these VIPS took aim at 10 free-throw shots, and in doing so helped the Committee take aim at their goal of making a $500.00 donation to the American Cancer Society. Shooters included Bryant's First Family - President & Mrs. Machlery, VPs Joe Meichelbeck and Tom Eakin, Associate Dean Bob Stoss, Fr. Joe Pescatello, AD Dan Gavitt, Molly Devaney - Student Senate President, Student Senators for each class, presidents from both the IFC and Panhellenic Councils, and members of SPB and the Peer Educators.

While pledges are still being collected, the Committee would like to thank all those who stopped by to pledge, play or cheer on the participants. The collective efforts of all those involved served not only to raise awareness of this disease but also to take part in efforts to extinguish it. It is these efforts that serve to remind us of what we aspire to as a College Community, and more importantly as a part of our larger global community.

One of the best-kept secrets on campus will officially open its doors to the Bryant community on November 18 from 10am-3pm. That date and time mark the grand opening of the Bryant College Intercultural Center located on the fourth floor of Hall 7. There will be an official ribbon cutting at noon, and students, faculty, staff and administrators are invited to participate in this momentous occasion.

While its location and existence may have been unknown to some, its efforts to foster a respect for and appreciation of the history, traditions and cultures of the multicultural population on campus is no secret. The Intercultural Center is committed to the creation and maintenance of a campus environment which enhances the existence, increases the appreciation of and values of an increasingly diverse population. As stated in its mission statement, "One's cultural identity is very personal. With this in mind, the Intercultural Center staff seeks to support any member of the Bryant College community who, because of life experience, views, beliefs, choices, interests or for any other reason considers himself to be culturally unique". With this mission in mind, the Center's goals are to provide opportunities for the majority population to expand its worldviews and engage in intercultural communications and relations. Also, the Center serves as a resource to departments in developing policies curriculum, programs and activities that increase the number of multi-ethnic students enrolling and staying at the college.

In addition to its mission statement, the Intercultural Center has many goals, including helping Bryant students to network with students of diverse backgrounds from other campuses in and around New England. This enables Bryant students to see firsthand other programs and services that are provided and how they benefit students on their respective campuses. In September, Bryant's (cont. to page 4)
Regisration Frustration

By Julie Bethke
Copy Editor

"Registration should always be about the individual. Every student has a unique educational focus and unique goals; careful planning on behalf of the student is necessary in order to achieve the desired outcome. By selecting alternative courses, taking advantage of Bryant's advising resources, contacting various offices to ensure all obligations are settled and researching prerequisite and sequencing options, the registration process can be a positive experience and one that puts students on track for academic success."

The above quoted material came from an article I wrote last spring about the registration process and what students could do to make the registration experience less stressful. My view was optimistic; I offered suggestions to students, making it seem as if a total solution could be brought about by better planning, better use of available resources and diligent preparation. I must admit that I wish it were that simple. I would like to preclude this editorial by stating that I made no attempt to interview anyone or to gather any factual information about the registration process. What follows stems from my casual observations and personal experience.

Today marks the end of three of the most stressful weeks of the entire semester. Yes, the last round of midterms happened to fall during this time, but I am referring specifically to the registration process. At least its over, but I have not spoken with many people who have fond memories. Things started off shaky with the reallocation of the registration numbers. Some people ended up with undesirable numbers once again, which inherently caused some frustration. That pales in comparison to the difficulty students had getting, not the classes they wanted, but the classes they needed to stay on track.

So, you started out with the standard two alternative schedules, then checked the web site of closed courses religiously every night. To begin with, everyone starts out at a disadvantage because part-time students get first priority in scheduling. By the time you get to register, your planning sheet looks more like a bingo card than an academic plan. So your scheduling comes and you've got something that you'll settle for, and as you sit in Gushly, your heart sinks when the runners take their big black magic marker and close the last available section. If you're lucky, it only happens for one course; I've seen it happen two or three times. Back to the drawing board.

What I cannot understand is the deficiency of high-demand core courses. One particular problem area is within the communication courses. The popularity of the Communication major and minor has increased dramatically over the past few years and courses were closing left and right. Eventually, the department opened a few more sections, but not nearly enough to accommodate the demand. Since they were able to offer more as needed, why weren't they just offered from the beginning? It seems incredibly odd that based on enrollment numbers and course audits indicating what courses have been taken by students, that a more accurate number of courses could not have been offered in the first place.

I noticed a second interesting situation pertaining to course demand. Some students will have to take 400-level courses next semester when they have only completed the introductory 200-level course—all 300-levels were closed. Granted, 300-levels are frequently not prerequisites for 400-levels however, there is a logical system at work here, a progression of difficulty and complexity that builds upon previous knowledge and principles. Even if 400s are an option, why should they have to be taken out of order? Along the same lines, when the only courses left will fill a requirement, but there is no personal interest, how does that enhance the academic experience?

I think that if the existing course information system cannot provide accurate data pertaining to the courses that students would logically be taking the following semester, then a simple solution would be to do a preliminary registration survey. This could be a time period during which all students were required to meet with an academic advisor to do a tally of how many students need and want to take which courses. From that information, the exact number of sections that will be needed within each course can be determined. Also, I imagine that those who do not regularly meet with an advisor might be able to gain some valuable insight into academic planning.

I can respect the fact of the matter is that there are not enough of the right courses being offered at the right time. "Registration should always be about the individual." In my opinion, college is the time that you choose what you want to do, solidify your interests and in my mind there should be no limitation, no compromise on taking the classes you want, in the order you want and in accordance with your interests. Instead of the schedulers telling students what courses and how many sections are going to be offered, the students should be telling the schedulers what needs to be offered.

P.S. Many thanks to the Academic Advising staff for their long hours, patience and assistance throughout the registration process.

Legal Studies 211, Accounting 204, Finance 201. These are all core classes that every Bryant student must take in order to obtain a degree from the college. So, why is it that before registration is over, these classes are nearly filled? Why is it that Bryant requires every student to take these classes, yet they don't offer enough classes to accommodate everyone? Why should students have to suffer because certain classes are filled? We all pay our tuition, so we can take classes that will allow us to earn our degree. Therefore, isn't it only fair that Bryant supply us with those classes?

Many students, including myself, have planned out a schedule that will allow us to graduate in four years. However, all our planning is ruined when certain classes fill up completely. I can understand certain classes filling up, classes that not everyone is obligated to take. But, for basic core classes to become completely filled is ridiculous. Why should certain people have to suffer, just because they are given a high registration number? The college needs to remember that if they are going to require everyone to take these core classes, they need to make these classes available to everyone. And if that means hiring more faculty to teach the classes, so be it.

International Student Organization (ISO) and Multicultural Student Union (MSU) along with the Center hosted an event on campus where students from Brown, RIC and JWU came to campus for a successful social event. Also, in October, the Multicultural Center of St. Anselm's College hosted members of the Bryant College ISO for a weekend on fun and networking. Students supported Bulldog Football, met St. Anselm students, went shopping and enjoyed the New Hampshire foliage.

The Intercultural Center has made much progress since its inception, thanks to the unwavering support of the administration including Dr. James Eakin, Vice President of Student Affairs. His support has made the Intercultural Center's goals attainable. The Center's mission and commitment today are the direct result of Dr. Eakin and recommendations made by the Task Force on Enhanced Community Relations. Still, the Center cannot and will not reach its full potential until all students, faculty, staff and administration offer its support. A good beginning would be to join the Center for its GRAND OPENING on NOVEMBER 18.

Resident Assistant

On October 29th, members of Residence Life and the Student Senate joined forces to help the Cranston CYO Center with their Haunted House fundraiser. This trip to scenic Cranston gave these two groups the opportunity to help a good cause and have a good time in doing so. For the past few years, Bryant College has played a role in this great program to raise money for the center and will hopefully continue it for years to come. Having the Bryant students participate in the program does more for the center than just another body being there as younger participants actually see them as role models.

Annual Halloween Party

By Matt Carbray

On October 24th, Inter Fraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council sponsored a Halloween party for faculty members, their children, and guests of the Bryant community. The event was a huge success, with many of Bryant's chapters dedicating their time to a wonderful afternoon. The Halloween Party Committee was headed by Julia Mastroantuono, Thetas Phi Alpha, and Matt Carbray, Beta Theta Phi. With plenty of games, and Papito filled with decorations, the 100 or so people in attendance were very grateful for the opportunity to spend a day with their children. From costume contests to face painting and "Pin the Nose on the Pumpkin," the day was a huge success. Thank you once again to all who were there to help out, because this day would not have been possible without your efforts, and hope to see everyone gain next year!

MIT economist to speak at Bryant College on Friday, November 19

SMITHFIELD, RI - Lester Thourw, Emeritus Professor of Management and Economics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Academic Dean of MIT's Sloan School of Management, will speak at Bryant College on Friday, November 19, at 2 p.m. in Janikies Auditorium.

Thourw's lecture, "Building Wealth in a Knowledge-Based Economy," addresses the ethical issues of wealth creation. Based on an understanding of economic history, Thourw will draw from his current book, Building Wealth, and offer insights for individuals, companies, and nations in building wealth in the new global knowledge-based economy. His previous books - The Zero-Sum Society, Head to Head, and The Future of Capitalism - were all New York Times bestsellers.

This event is sponsored by Bryant College and its Center for International Business, and the Newell D. Goff Institute for Innovation & Enterprise Studies at the Rhode Island Historical Society.

The lecture is free and open to the public. For more information, call (401) 332-6120 (Bryant) or (401) 331-8575 (Goff Institute). For more info, contact Janet Proulx (401) 232-6242.

Lessons of College Life-Part 5

Over the past few weeks I have come to realize how important communication is. This is an issue right now because of a problem that one of my friends and I have. My problem with communication, at least in her mind, is probably that I do it too much. I do tend to have a blabbermouth and I do let things slide. This has always been a problem for me, but has never truly gotten me in trouble until I came here. Life in college, at least in my case, is more complex. Situations arise that are new, or maybe you have heard of them before, but now they happen to you or one of your close friends. When these things happen, friends lean on each other for support, and it is good to know they are there for you no matter what. One thing that I have come to love about life at college is the fact that you can have an open mind and use the voice that goes with it. Several times when my friends have come to me wept over their problems, I listen to them, but I also tell them exactly what I think they should do, or even if it was their own fault that they are in the situation they are in. I do this not to make them feel worse, but to show them that they should not complain about what happens in their life if they made it that way. However, this makes it hard for me, because as much as I want to sympathize with them, I can not. I have not truly had my turn yet to whine about the ups and downs in life. I know that when I get there, my friends will let me complain all I want, but tell me exactly what I tell them. Another thing that I am dealing with right now is trying to stay optimistic. It is an almost impossible task at times. I have stress, on top of which, many papers and exams are due. The fact that I have not been back to my home in Florida since I got here and that I am not going to see it until winter break is not setting too well right now. I am so homesick I cannot stand it! I won't see my house over Thanksgiving, because I will be in Chicago with my mother's side of the family, of course, the Irish side. We have not had Thanksgiving together as a family for so long. We always went up for the holiday until my grandmother died. We have not been back ever since. We're all going up, because my cousin Katie is getting married that following Saturday. I plan on thoroughly enjoying the Irish wedding after all the stress I have been under before hand. I hope everyone out there has a wonderful time on break. You can be sure I'll let you know how the time with the O'Brien's is. I know I'll love it! Have a happy holiday!

Hello everyone! Our pie auction held on November 2nd was extremely successful. Our hall council raised over a hundred dollars. The top bids were $44 for Van, our R.D., and Michelle and Nate tied at $20. The auction was a great time! If anyone wants to see pictures check in Hall 15 later this week.

Other events we have in mind include a 50/50 raffle that will run every other week, and a movie night each week. For the 50/50 raffle the price of tickets are as follows: 1 ticket $1, 3 tickets $2, and an arm's length $5. As for the movie night, we would like to know what everyone would be interested in watching. Please let us know what you think at our meetings that are held on Tuesdays in the lobby of Hall 15 at 6:30 p.m. Thank you.

I would like to start out by thanking everyone who participated in the candle sale. The candles that you have purchased will be in shortly. A portion of the proceeds will go to benefit the leukemia society. Parents' weekend was a huge success. It was great to meet all the parents. A huge thank you also goes out to all of the sorority that came up and showed us all a good time. The Putt-A-Thon will be coming up soon. Be sure to check it out and support the Hole in the Wall Gang.

The past few weekends have been pretty eventful. BTN was a huge success and everything went well. Boyd learned that you should put your hands out before you hit the ground. The Hulk came out this Halloween unfortunately he had to go back in about 15 min. later to stop...
Hello everyone, hope the year is going well. GAMMA has been keeping busy. Since this is only the second article of the year, I'd just like to fill you in on some things that have been going on. In very old news, after homecoming weekend, at the beginning of the year, members of GAMMA cleaned up areas around Greek housing near the townhouses. Phi Sigma Sigma gets a huge thank you for their clean up work around G-Block. They did a great job! Also, a thank you goes out to Aramark for donating gloves.

This past November 3rd GAMMA and Greek Life sponsored Chris Lowis, a former Bryant Fraternity member who came and spoke about alcohol and drug abuse. He was very informative and we appreciate him coming to Bryant and donating his time.

This November 16th, all chapters must send their risk management to a mandatory 6-15 meeting in Room 1. Many different issues will be discussed.

This coming semester, GAMMA will be having a fundraiser. We have not yet determined exactly what it will be but will definitely take place around the holidays. It most likely will be souvenir photos taken during the Festival of Lights. For second semester, watch out for Wednesday night safereides to and from Parentes restaurant.

A student driven BTA van will drive people to and from Parentes. In an attempt to get people to not drink and drive. Keep reading The Archway for future events and news. Thanks.

Hi! Today marks 44 days till Christmas can you believe it? I would like to thank everyone that attended our last big weekend, Halloween's "I Know What You Did Last Weekend." I know that everyone that attended had a really great time! Congratulations goes out to all those SPB members that helped organize the weekend. Keep your heads up for all the SPB events going on throughout the month of November!!

Upcoming Student Programming Board events:
- Saturday, Nov. 13th: An outlet shopping trip to Kittery, Maine. Be sure not to miss it!
- Tuesday, Nov. 16th: "Gift Certificates" DINGO! Come and win gift certificates from local businesses and places on campus! Time: 8 p.m., Place: Pepitto Dining Room; Price: FREE! So, come on out and join us!
- Wednesday, Nov. 17th:

Bryant Players
By Scott Marks

So much to say, so little space, but I'll give it my best shot. Dessert Theatre is upon us once again! Instead of stressing over your exams, check out the Bryant Players performing two new shows: Faugh (pronounced FOG) and Home At Six! We had auditions last week and had a great turnout with several new faces. This time out, the directors are Jen Warren and Steve Abouzeid. Congratulations to everyone who got a part.

For those of you that are interested in taking part in the Bryant Players in the future, we have our weekly meetings in room 2A of the Bryant Center at 5:00 Tuesday nights. Check it out!

As for the spring musical, last week our originally planned show, The Pajama game, sadly bit the big one. My condolences to all of you that were eagerly counting down the days until the actual performances, but don't worry, we've replaced it with an even better play... Guys and Dolls! Yes, we're showing a lot of "ambitiousness" with this production and are planning to go all out next semester and make it our best show ever! As of now, we're going to have auditions before winter break so that everyone can start learning their lines and musical numbers, giving plenty of time for the cast members to be all they can be... or something like that. Dates for the showtimes of Dessert Theatre and auditions will be posted around campus and also in this column.

Women's Rugby
By Susanne Howarth

Hey girls- Sorry we missed the last article, now its time to catch up. First of all, I want to thank all the parents who came to our final game with wine & cheese during parent's weekend. Good job HS for being great hosts and keeping the food coming! We had a couple of Parente's nights this past week, which was a huge success, especially on Thursday. Thanks to all those who supported the thing we do best on our team.

I'm not sure if people are aware but our season is officially over. Our final record was 4-2. If only PC wasn't in our division we would be going to Maine this weekend for the finals. Maybe next year! Let's recap the last 3 games.

On parent's weekend, we took on Wheaton for the first time. We played really well, except for minor things that got in the way... maybe if the other team knew how to play correctly. Allison- remember good sportsmanship!

Thanks Catelli for being our EMT again. The next game was against Wheaton again. We won, but had so unfair calls during the game. When was the last time that you could get a penalty for singing a song before the game? Thanks to Kiki, Tricia, Kerry and Snoop for supporting us at the game, was it better than going to class? We didn't really think so.

We want to thank Cliff for the way for taking just a few seconds to figure out the new penalty plays that he taught us, actually worked.

Then there was our last official game of the season... how sad for the seniors. Congrats go out to Kelly and Natalie for scoring their first tries. Terri-how did you like playing on the other side of the house? Afterwards, we had a social gathering that seemed to be the best one of the year. We got to finally sing a little, how are people's voices? Sophonores- you need to learn all the verses of the songs, because you need to carry on the tradition of singing after a game. A couple of people, not to mention any names (Deanna, Allison, and MB) have turned into kleptomaniacs so beware and keep track of everything you own! They apologize again for not helping with all the things. MB- beware a certain person, who fell a couple times one night (Katy), is out to get you! Don't turn your back.

We didn't have a game Halloween weekend so the seniors decided to take a road trip. We ended up in the White Mountains in New Hampshire. There we enjoyed hiking 2.3 miles up Black Mountain, only a few minor injuries and complaints. Guns and Roses, the chipmunks, Susie-gone-bad and getto trash joined us at our Halloween fundraiser this Saturday, filled night with food, dancing who supported us this year we want to thank everyone we have no more games, and we will see you again soon! We have also been doing the "money pulled for them" costume award. A Little charades came into play, Heather- so where was the craziest place you had... We enjoyed a scrumptious breakfast cooked by Allison and Susie. Then voyaged home to find absolutely nothing happening on campus, what else is new? But Deanna, Susie, Carolyn and MB decided to gather with of their friends... but nobody showed up, oh well, we have each other.

This weekend we will be electing new e-board members, so start thinking about people for the different positions. Get your dancing shoes on because this weekend is our formal. I'm pretty sure everyone has dates but if anyone really wants to go, we may be able to work something out. It's going to be a fun-filled night with food, dancing, awards and a couple of surprises brought to you by Allison.

Well, this brings it to an end for this article. Since we have no more games, we want to thank everyone who supported us this year and we will see you again in the spring. We hope everyone has fun this weekend and lots of stories to share.

You haven't heard from us in a while but don't worry, we're still here representing strong. We are planning a couple of events and hope you will support us.

We are having a fundraiser this Saturday, November 16th at the football game. During the game we will be selling delicious, creamy, hot chocolate. It's going to be a brisk day. What better way to warm up the body and get that Bryant Bulldog Spirit going than with some hot cocoa. Prices of drinks range between fifty cents to a dollar and will be on sale most of the day. Come say hi, chat a little, drop some hot chocolate and cheer our football team on (by the way, keep up the good work guys). Cold weather is here and there are many families who are not as fortunate as the rest of us. As a sorority we strongly believe in helping others. November 15th to 19th, Zeta Phi Beta will be sponsoring a driving rode. We are asking the Bryant community if they have any article of clothing that is no longer worn or can manage without to please donate. Boxes will be set up in the Bryant Center, outside Salmonson, and in the Rotunda. Clothing will be donated to the Salvation Army. We ask that what you bring is clean and wearable. Thank you in advance for your support.

Shout out to all my Blue and White family. Stay strong and keep your head up!

Ah ye, it's good to be back in the Archway for another week. Not too much has happened lately with the men of TKE, but I'm sure we'll be able to elaborate on the topics that did manage to come up. First and foremost, the new Rage CD is unbelievable. Anyone that does not have it by now should be punished by way of canning. Let me tell you, this CD will not only give your ears the pleasure they need, but the amount of furniture you can break to the CD is unbelievable too.

Dan and Derek finished out the weekend. We ended up in the middle of the night with cold sweats just picturing the officers out there in the dark trying to figure out how to use a wrench.

Quick question: How come DPS will only allow fines to be paid in cash? Merry X-Mas boys! Don't buy any cheap ties. Until next time.

WOMEN'S SOCCER

(4-13-1 overall, 1-7-1 Northeast-10 Conference) Last Week: Lost to New Hampshire College, 3-4. This Week: Season complete. Looking to finish the 1999 season by going unbeaten in five of its last six matches, Bryant dropped a 4-3 decision to New Hampshire College to close the year. The loss came despite the efforts of senior Kristen Berriman (Suffield, Conn.), who scored three goals in the game--two of which tied the score, and the last of which brought Bryant within one with 7:35 left.

Bryant also is under consideration for a return to the NCAA tournament for the second time in four years or a spot in the ECAC tournament. The Bulldogs reached a milestone last Saturday with a 3-0 win against UMass Lowell and gave fourth-year head coach Theresa Garlacy and senior setter Meredith Vachon (Cumberland, R.I.) their 100th career wins. Freshman Allison Gunther (Hauppauge, N.Y.) had a team-high 12 kills against UMass Lowell, while freshman outside hitter Erica Hood (Overland Park, Kan.) had 10 kills and a team-leading 15 digs for her 20th double-double of the season. Sophomore middle hitter Rebecca Colgate (Andover, Mass.) had a team-high 13 kills and three blocks in the second half of the triangle match against Southern Connecticut.

VOLLEYBALL

(25-10 overall, 7-2 Northeast-10 Conference) Last Week: Defeated Assumption, 3-0; defeated Teikyo Post, 3-0; defeated UMass Lowell, 3-0; defeated Southern Connecticut, 3-0. This Week: Tuesday, Nov. 9 at Franklin Pierce; Friday, Nov. 12 and Saturday, Nov. 10 at Northeast-10 Conference Tournament. Having extended its winning streak to eight matches and an impressive 19 games, Bryant enters the home stretch of the 1999 season with its eyes squarely set on the playoffs. After the regular-season finale against Franklin Pierce, the Bulldogs go for their second straight Northeast-10 Conference championship Friday and Saturday at Bentley. Bryant also is under consideration for a return to the NCAA tournament for the second time in four years or a spot in the ECAC tournament. The Bulldogs reached a milestone last Saturday with a 3-0 win against UMass Lowell and gave fourth-year head coach Theresa Garlacy and senior setter Meredith Vachon (Cumberland, R.I.) their 100th career wins. AQUARIUS
(Jan 20 – Feb 18)
There’s comfort there for the seizing in old ways and family traditions. We all stand on the shoulders of those who passed before us. Honor those who preceded you. As you acknowledge other people’s contributions to your present, you empower yourself to have a greater impact on future generations.

PISCES
(Feb 19 – March 20)
You search for alternative solutions to familiar problems, but there are no easy answers where you stand. Explore the belief system of your choice. You’ll get more out of it if you make it a private choice. Without your circle of friends to make you self-conscious, you’ll absorb ideas of great value.

ARIES
(March 21 – April 19)
Relationships get tricky. The familiar feels best, but you’re also definitely drawn toward the occult and forbidden. This could be a particularly sore point with loved ones. Memories of friends and family who have left this life revive some emotional memories.

TAURUS
(April 20 – May 20)
Emotionally, you’re caught up in the latest peaks and valleys among your intimates. The physical effects of both healthy and unhealthy relationships become more noticeable now. Get the right balance of fun, adventure, and work. Work includes those high-maintenance relationships. If the security payoff isn’t worth the stress, lay down the law or back off.

GEMINI
(May 21 – June 20)
Your normal ability to talk and charm your way out of situations is impaired this week. Don’t start interactions or make promises you’re not sure you can live up to. Loosen up with games, the more physical, the better. (Pass on charades if you can play Twister.) Watch your body language and facial expressions. Others will be watching...

CANCER
(June 21 – July 22)
It’s hard to stay serious and harder still to stop worrying about the unhappy people around you. Emotionally, you’re in a pretty comfortable place, even though it may not always feel like it. Resist the temptation to cheer up the folks around you. You are the most important person, make yourself happy first.

LEO
(July 23 – Aug 22)
Security is the quality you most need. Whenever possible, stick to familiar routines and dependable people. Make a conscious effort to let go of worries that concern people whose actions you have no control over. Channel leftover energy into talking to your recently dumped significant other, they have feelings too.

VIRGO
(Aug 23 – Sept 22)
You feel pinned down by routine and petty details. It’s a good time to add to and subtract from your possessions. Donate something to charity, and then go shopping. Be patient with people who restrict your freedom through their efforts to help you. This is a temporary phase.

LIBRA
(Sept 23 – Oct 22)
This week causes an initial rush of insecurity. You may feel too fat, too thin, too tall, or too short. You’re tempted to scramble to even things out, but this isn’t the right time. Counter it with a form of affirmation: “I’m just right for right now.” See how many ways you can apply the word perfect to yourself.

SCORPIO
(Oct 23 – Nov 21)
You may pursue serenity, but the best way to catch it is to sit still. This provides an ideal time to design and create your personal space for prayer and/or meditation. Don’t depend on others to arrange for your solitude. The initiative is yours.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov 22 – Dec 21)
This is a good time for silence and for active listening. Don’t just hear others’ words. Absorb their emotions, their body language, the things they say, and the things they don’t say. Your ability to communicate will improve midweek, but for now, you’re better off on the receiving end.

CAPRICORN
(Dec 22 – Jan 19)
Novelty of any kind holds a powerful appeal for you, but it’s time to narrow your focus to a few interests. Take small things or small activities and strive for perfection in them. Even if you don’t succeed, you’ll increase your ability to focus, plan, and create. The achievement will boost your self-esteem.

Stereolab’s Cobra Slithers
From My Grasp
By Maggie Grace

Let me begin by saying that I am thoroughly confused by this album. I am not quite sure what to make of it. This was my first Stereolab experience and it has left me wondering. The album seems to be a mix of lounge-pop and electronica. The London-based band formed in 1990 after guitarist Tim Gane’s previous project, McCarthy disbanded. Gane along with lead vocalist Laetitia Sadier began a romantic relationship, from which Stereolab was created. In 1992, Stereolab released the first album in the UK, which soon became an underground hit. Their combination of synthesizers, hi-fi recording and melodic, almost child-like sounding vocals soon propelled them to bigger and better things. By 1994, the band had already worked with the likes of Blur, an Sonic Youth with lead vocalist Thurston Moore. Now, I have to commend the band for their groundbreaking sound. Never before have I heard an album like this. Their style of fusion leaves a lot of room for improvisation and experimentation and Sadier’s voice has a haunting innocent quality. I think that in order to appreciate Stereolab’s effort, I will have to listen to more of their material... so that is my next mission – become acquainted with this group of underground Marxists who hail from London. ...maybe my confusion will be cleared up a bit... then again, maybe not.

Brazil’s Arto Lindsay is Quite a Prize
By Maggie Grace

He began as a guitarist for a group called DNA, he then moved on to his second project, Ambitious Lovers. Now, Lindsay is concentrating on his solo career and it has produced some interesting results. His music is a little bit of pop, with a lot of Brazilian rhythm thrown in. Half of the album Prize is in Spanish, but there is something that Arto Lindsay communicates in his lyrics that transcends the language barrier. His voice is soft and controlled; never does he yell or even raise his voice. Like Stereolab, I had never been introduced to Lindsay’s repertoire before listening to this CD. I initially was disappointed with the album due to the lack of faster, perhaps more upbeat tracks. The majority of the album is definitely more toward the ballad end of the spectrum. But after repeated listening I began to appreciate the sound that has been created. The throbbing bass is like a heart-beat that pulses through almost every song and when combined with horns, violins and Lindsay’s soft questioning voice, it makes for a unique strangely enjoyable listening experience.

Season of the Nighthawk
By Asa Williams

After we landed, Harkes and I flew back to the domed field before the news teams could get to T.F. Green Airport. Linton then called a meeting of the agents at the Providence bureau, to see the story of our capturing of the Nighthawk. We did see footage of the lasers; however, all that was seen were the lasers, flares, and the contours of the bird and the plane. "The people behind this conquest say that it was some experience, this mission," Ross said in her Action News 10 report live from the airport, she only named a few names, primarily individuals. By the way, only Ross and we know that she is one of our agents.

Anyhow, this was yet another mission accomplished by us... and you know our symbol...
One Thing
By Jessica Setson

Sitting.
Wondering.
Where you went wrong-
What you did to lose that one thing.

Thinking.
Pondering.
What you could change-
How you could have done things differently.

You think of yourself,
And how you will grow from this-
If you will grow from this.

You accept your individuality
And your independence.
And as you sift through such moments in your life,
You find it impossible to find one remotely similar.

Then you realize,
It’s not you,
It’s that one thing,
And you never really needed it at all.

So you sit,
And you wait
For this unfeeling thing to drift away.

‘Dogma’ Shows Push-Pull Relationship Between Kevin Smith And His Faith

By Jacqueline Parade
Campus Correspondent
- Agnes Scott College
TMS Campus Media

Dogma: a principle or system of principals.

Writer-director-actor Kevin Smith considers his latest film, “Dogma,” a “love letter to the sacred mysteries of life.”

Think of this film as a visual love letter — “I love you, let me count the ways,” married to a confused and angst-filled, “You love me, you love me not.” Somewhere between that push and pull is Smith’s deep love for the Lord and his profound understanding that following the rules of religion doesn’t always translate into a relationship with God.

This hysterical comic fantasy is distinctly Smith, who once again uses foul language and his self-described, trademark “dick and fart jokes” to shed light on relational issues. As ‘Clerks’ examined man’s relationship with his inner self and “Chasing Amy” explored relationships between men and women, “Dogma” delves into man’s relationship with God.

Loki (Matt Damon) and Bartleby (Ben Affleck) are angels cast from heaven because they refuse to follow God’s commands. A woman with a secret ancestry, Bethany (Linda Fiorentino), is assigned to stop them from returning to heaven via a loophole recently sanctioned by the Catholic Church. Her band of crusaders include the “13th apostle” (Chris Rock), a discontent muse (Salma Hayek), and two unlikely prophets (Jason Mewes and Kevin Smith).

Although Catholicism is featured prominently throughout “Dogma,” Smith, a Catholic, does not attack the church. Instead, he openly embraces the concepts presented within biblical scripture and still manages to explore the downsides of religion — namely how flawed humans have distorted and twisted it to suit their own needs and agendas. In one scene, The Muse, played by a radiant Salma Hayek, laments that she once was charged with inspiring biblical authors — but watched them cave in to societal pressures that prompted them all to change their “she-god” references to “He.”

“Dogma” is a glorious tale of faith rather than religion. Any religious group with waning numbers could be inserted into this screenplay. Catholicism is simply what Smith knows best.

While “Dogma” explores the humanity of religion, this is not “The Last Temptation of Christ.” Instead of a Scorsese-esque mediation, Smith values individuality while also recognizing the enormous power of a higher being. The end result is a really funny — but oddly reverent — film. “It started with me asking some questions about my own faith but the flick doesn’t attempt to hold out answers to any of those questions,” Smith said. “It’s meant to make you laugh.”

“Dogma” is Kevin Smith’s dogma, and he encourages you to find yours.
Court Says U. Of Nebraska Had Duty To Protect Injured Fraternity Pledge

By TMS Campus

LINCOLN, Neb. (TMS) — The University of Nebraska had a duty to protect a fraternity pledge who was severely injured when he tried to escape a hazing incident in which court records say he was abandoned, handcuffed and made to drink alcohol, the Nebraska Supreme Court has ruled.

The state's highest court on Friday reversed a lower court's ruling that the university had no responsibility to protect Jeffrey Knoll, who was 19 when he pledged Phi Gamma Delta in 1993. The state Supreme Court sent the case back to trial for a jury to determine whether the university failed to meet its obligations.

The court's opinion stated that the university could have foreseen the potential for hazing on its campus. Justices noted that the university was aware of past criminal conduct involving Phi Gamma Delta, also known as "Fiji," and hazing activities by at least two other fraternity chapters on campus.

According to court records, Knoll was abducted from the basement of an academic building and handcuffed to an active member when he tried to run away. He was taken to the Fiji house, where he was handcuffed to a radiator and forced — over two and a half hours — to drink 15 shots of brandy and whiskey and three to six cans of beer.

After vomiting, Knoll was taken to a third-floor bathroom and handcuffed to a toilet pipe. He broke loose and tried to escape through the bathroom window. He tried to slide down a drainage pipe but fell and suffered head injuries. Court documents state his blood-alcohol level was .21.

Knoll sued the university for $91,000 in damages, alleging that it had a responsibility to protect him while he was on campus.

The university argued that it had no duty to protect Knoll, who was the victim of "horseplay" when he was first confronted in the campus building.

The Supreme Court disagreed and ruled that the university was obligated "to take reasonable steps to protect against foreseeable acts of hazing, including student abduction of the university's property, and the harm that naturally flows therefrom."
