Dr. Fullerton Strikes Again: "Plays Politics in Picking R.A.'s"

Maybe I Should Have Played Hockey

Dear Editor,

I've been a student at Bryant College for 3 years and have yet to see the Dean of Student Affairs do his job properly. Your method of choosing R.A.'s was almost as bad as Dean Kurt's "Curtis Hall Incident." (In which I got screwed.) Do you feel your screening process was accurate? Maybe I should have played hockey or bowling with you so I could have been chosen. Not only was it unfair to be interviewed by Resident Counselors who had no idea how to interview, but why weren't applicants given the chance to speak with YOU. Too busy? Bullshl! All you did was pass the buck. Why the hell don't you do your job. I'm not saying that I for anyone else who got rejected was more qualified than your hand-picked favorites, but we at least should have had the opportunity to speak our piece with you. Thank you Dr. Fullerton for it is you who deserves this year's "Snow Award."

Sincerely,
S.N.S.

Help Freshman "Learn The Ropes"

Dear Editor,

We are looking for interested individuals who are willing to devote time to the incoming freshmen this fall to act as a "Big Brother" or "Big Sister". What would entice you to help a freshman "learn the ropes" of Bryant, and to assist them in any problem which may arise, after Freshmen Orientation?

We are interested in community and dorm students who are in both 2 and 4 year programs.

If interested, please leave your name with Greg Evans in the Student Senate Office or Dan Aderhold in the Archway Office.

Time is of the essence, so please sign up immediately. Interviews will follow shortly.

Thank you and please participate in this cause.

Sincerely,
Dan Aderhold
Coordinator

Overlooked Experience

Dear Editor,

Due to the recent selections of Resident Assistants, of which I was excluded, I believe that the decision was made arbitrarily and without careful consideration of the qualifications of the individuals. I am a transfer student from a state college in Connecticut. There I held the position of Resident Assistant and was promoted to the Director of Student Apartment Housing, which is the current trend in college housing. There were 360 students in the apartment complex and we had six assistants. To my knowledge this was the first student apartment housing complex of its kind in the Connecticut State College System. During this period I did an independent study on the needs and problems that arise from on campus student housing. This report was submitted to the Connecticut Board of Higher Education to project future housing trends and needs.

Here at Bryant I am in good academic standing and have worked well with students and faculty alike. It appears to me that Dr. Fullerton has overlooked experience and sufficient qualifications in determining who should hold the R.A. positions!

What Gives A Faculty Member The Right To Criticize A Student?

Dear Editor,

What gives a faculty member the right to criticize a student he no longer has, in his (faculty member's) current classes? What gives this same faculty member the right to send this same student's current teachers a notice, to be read in class, saying the student is a liar? What gives this same faculty member the right to send this same student's parents a letter saying their son is a liar?

If anyone can answer these questions, I would appreciate their telling me.

Elimination Of Faculty Evaluation Was In Best Interest Of Bryant

Dear Editor,

The elimination of faculty evaluation by the faculty has helped Bryant greatly. Since the use of the evaluations were never fully developed, the elimination has saved everyone concerned a lot of time in making the forms, recording the results and distributing the results to the people concerned.

The elimination has probably given some of the faculty members a greater sense of job security since the staff's only recourse is open evaluation which has, in at least one case, resulted in academic reprisal from a faculty member. This case has, however, helped some students by teaching them that it is better to say nothing until the course has been completed. By this time, little can be done to alter the problem. There has been one exception to this statement.

There are faculty members who have themselves evaluated by their students but, these teachers are generally accepted as being "good" teachers by their students. The teachers considered as "bad" by the students are seldom, if ever, evaluated by the students in any formal way.

There is one way in which students might initiate action concerning faculty members. If enough students voice their disapproval and express their opinions to the proper authority, it is possible that some action might be taken. There is one disadvantage to this method. It is often inconvenient for both the students and the person with authority. If the person with authority becomes too inconvenient, he can easily become "unavailable" to students. These students will then stop their efforts and the problem remains.

As I first said, the elimination of faculty evaluation was probably in the best interest of the Bryant community.

The United Nations has just announced that it is moving to Paris.

Dr. Evarts doesn’t blame them. After all, he reasoned, anyone daring enough to send Mark Vincent to the United Nations for a convention should be prepared for the consequences. The week in New York is now in the past and he is already looking forward to the events of the week; so is the United Nations.

It all started so innocently. Six Bryant students were selected to represent the school at the United Nations, along with other colleges in a model United Nations in New York. The boys of the others died too, but not yet. They are being flown back sometime today where they will lie in a state of shock in the Rotunda. I was the lone survivor: two of the others died either from alcohol poisoning or were being flown back sometime today. When he swallowed a beer can, one of acute exhaustion, and Danny succumbed to a bleed from California. Morticians in New York believe they may still be able to remove the smells from the faces of the deceased.

Out of respect for those who passed away on this assignment the United Nations decided not to name any group to commemorate them either since I already tried that. As a result, one of the parents of the deceased delegates planning to play for their formation of character until the parent found out his character was only worth two weeks to play. Anyway, I think the best thing to do would be just to take their cases, give them all an ailing, and bury them in a shoe box. Then we can party just like we did in New York only there will be five less drunks.

One might speculate at this point as to why I survived when the others did not. The answer is simple. From a hotel apartment, with Cary and Kelly where I long ago learned how to adapt to these situations. The first week in the apartment my liver had to build in addition to accommodate the overflow of booze. New York was therefore a cinch.

To the United Nations, which is moving to Paris as a result of our delegation’s visit, I would just like to say, "I look forward to next year’s convention in Paris!"

On Thursday, April 19, 1973, the Board of Trustees reflected all top officers of the board, including President Harry Evarts, Vice President Frank Delmosco, Vice President Joseph Haga, and Vice President Tom Mansson. It was then clear that the Board of Trustees gave unanimous support to all four figures.

Greek Anticipate Good Year Ahead

This past month, just about every club has had elections for the coming year and the Greek Council is no exception. Ten students were elected to the top positions of the Council. We went to Bob and Dan and for once they had an answer.

Both Bob Tringle and Dan Harrington have great ideas for the coming year, and if all goes well, the whole Greek system's top goal they are striving for is to get the college together as one unit. They want to budge the competitive gap between all of the organizations. At the present time, they are working with the Student Union and Servite Club on the 6th of May Festival. This is the first big event uniting the student body through a joint effort by the organizations.

Through their efforts, Bob Tringle and Dan Harrington want to elevate the concept that Greeks are "hard heads" and "beer drinkers." They want to run their office for the students by working in conjunction with other organizations but must have cooperation in order to accomplish this.

They stressed the fact that a fraternity or sorority is a unit that "cooperates and bridges a gap between today and yesterday." Here the alumni come in and give away a donning of great a position to the family fund but also by having a sense of brotherhood. A fraternity helps to "recruit you to a real human person" and "prepare the business world for you."

Both Bob and Dan have made sure of their obligations to the college and the Greek system that they get them into office and that they will do their best. They want to have the Greek system that they get them into office and that they will do their best. They want to have the Greek system that they get them into office and that they will do their best. They want to have the Greek system that they get them into office and that they will do their best. They want to have the Greek system that they get them into office and that they will do their best. Watergate: Bigger Than Teapot Dome?

by Bob Rahall

ides, Haldeman and Erlichman, resigned. The new head of the FBI, Patrick Gray, resigned because of his approval of the burning of various important Watergate-related documents. Former Attorney General and Nixon's campaign manager, John Mitchell resigned during the campaign itself. Why?

The "finger" had definitely arrived at 1700 Pennsylvania Avenue. Who would it strike next? In desperation, Nixon fled to his Camp David retreat to formulate some type of public crow soothing so that the American people would sympathize with the dilemma which his subsidiaries had "unknowingly" placed him.

In a rare display of Nixonian pragmatism President addressed the American people and took full responsibility for what the "finger's" charge had done. This was, perhaps, one of the shrewdest moves of his political career. Had he waited a week or so, that proverbial black cloud Truman spoke of may have stopped where he intended it to, anywhere Nixon turned over his personal investigation to the office of Attorney General, Elliot Richardson.

I can't help feeling insecure about a republican apostate conducting an investigation which could very well destroy the hopes of Republican President Ford's continuing election years of 1974 and 1976 and I sincerely hope that Nixon learns a lesson from this next time he runs for President. You might be thinking that the "finger" can only serve two consecutive terms...things are rapidly changing, and used to have freedom of the press too, a white back.

BRYANT BATMAN CONTEST

Home Dominance

By Richard K. Hart

The Bryant Baseball Team, under the direction of Coach Warner, and Matt Bernstein, showed an easy win against Barrington College and a sound win against Suffolk University. These games were played by Bryant's own baseball field, better known as mosquito park, and believe it or not, there were even some spectators there!

The Barrington team proved to be an easy win for the Bryant nine. Bryant's Craig Cole overpowered the Barrington team by limiting them to four hits. Bryant scored eight runs in the first six innings.

Leading off for the Bryant team was shortstop Tom McDonald, who singled and then stole second. Both Brian Ahern and Norm Trahan popped flies out into left field. With two outs, John broke loose with leftfielder Jeff Doppelt getting a single to score McDonald. Craig Cole, with a two-hit count, singled, scoring Doppelt and was limited to third by a double by second baseman Steve Ahern. Both runners were out, and the first baseman from fourth on strike from Frank Giffin. Catcher Mark Smith doubled and later scored along with runner for a single by first baseman Jack Keil. Tom McDonald who doubled scoring Balme and later scored himself from a double by Ahern. Trahan then ground out to the second baseman ending the big inning with eight runs.

Bryant scored again in the third when Frank Doppelt faced the plate and walked to second on an error by Jackie Batman in an attempt to sacrifice, but instead got to first on an error on Barrington's pitcher. Both Giffin and Balme moved to third base with a walk and later Giffin scored by a wild pitch. In the fourth inning McDonald singled, driving in Balme, then Ahern and Trahan flew out to the right and center fields respectively, ending a two-run inning. Bryant scored in the fifth when Balme singled off a single with two outs. He was scored by a single from Trahan. Jeff Doppelt hit a deep shot over the left field fence during mosquito park with a big first home run on the first pitch. Craig Cole got on base by an error on Barrington's shortstop Bob Jekel. Angell ended the three-run inning with a fly out to the right fielder. The team then scored again in the seventh inning. The second baseman from Smithfield, R.I. scored and was later scored on a single by Cole to cap a 14-0 game.

Bryant was not satisfied to get any further than second place in the final standings. Craig Cole, who pitched for Bryant in his last game, struck out nine, walked one, struck out two, and gave up four hits. Bryant Indians had seventeen hits with good hitting from Tom McDonald who went three for six. Jeff Doppelt went three for five, and Jackie Batman was a perfect four for four.

This hitting flasch was needed to break Bryant's four-game losing streak.

The next home game was last Wednesday against the tough Suffolk University team. Bryant and second was second inning when Steve Angel walked and was moved to second on a single from Balme. Sp．r．k hit off of Cy Hill forcing Angel in for the first Bryant run. Bryant scored in the fourth inning when Balme led off with a walk. He later scored on a single from Tom McDonald. The Indians scored in the fifth inning when Doppelt singled and later scored on a single by Angel who walked. Doppelt then scored on a single by Jackie Batman.

Suffolk finally got their first in the sixth inning. They scored for the first time in the seventh when Suffolk's Paul Shanahan hit a grounder to shortstop Tom McDonald who overthrew Craig Cole, allowing a run to score. Bryant went on to go to second. He moved to second on a fielder's choice and later scored on a hit by Jackie Batman.

Suffolk failed to score again. Pitching for Bryant was Cy Hill who allowed only three hits, struck out two and walked four. The Indians failed to get any runs against Eastern Connecticut, losing both games on a walkoff home run in Friday, Saturday, and Sunday respectively at $30. So come out and support the Bryant Indians at their own park!!

MARKETING IS...

Marketing Thoughts
Every man believes very easily whatever he fears or desires.

What's New

Two key questions about new products must be answered before they can be marketed: How successful will they be? And what marketing strategies, such as ad spending weights and merchandising plans, will maximize their profitability? According to Market Facts, Chicago-based publicly-owned market research firm, Marketed, a controlled distribution and product sales auditing service, can answer both questions for new products or for new marketing conditions for established products. Marketed does the warehousing of the test product, distribution to the stores, stocking, pricing, servicing the stores, billing, sales measuring in a selected medium-sized metropolitan area during the test period, and forecasting of national sales.

"The missing link between industrial advertisers and their sales forces has been forged," says Innovative Services of Lake Mills, Wisconsin. Citing a recent survey by Marketing Communications Research Center Reporter, Princeton, New Jersey, showing that 93 percent of ad responders reported various shortcomings in material sent to them by the advertiser and that two-thirds of their inquiries were never even answered. 15 plans to provide the missing link. Services offered include handling all requests for materials, qualifying leads as to quality, developing a salesman follow-up procedure, maintaining an up-to-date mailing list, and developing analyses of ad effectiveness and other marketing information.

Military marketers use consumer-style ads to pitch products to small military market target audience of Congressmen, Pentagon procurement officials, and foreign defense ministry personnel, according to the Council of Economic Priorities, a New York nonprofit, watchdog group. CEP reports the ads create sales opportunities, promote products during contract competitions, and project reliable and efficient images for weapons systems. The top 25 weapons advertisers spent an estimated $2.3 million on ads in seven military journals in 1971 and 1972—a small expenditure compared to many consumer product ad budgets; but Leon Reed, CEP's military research director, says the ads "inevitably constitute an attempt to influence government advertising policy in a way which does not necessarily reflect the needs of the public or the wishes of its elected representatives." In addition, the report says, some "would probably not pass muster by the truth in advertising test of the Federal Trade Commission."

As college goes the best? According to Opinion Research Corp., Princeton, New Jersey, almost six times as many people as a decade ago (29 percent vs. 5 percent) say it's better not to have so many people go to college. In the early '50's, 89 percent felt that U.S. expenditures on college education "were a good thing"; in the early '70's, only 64 percent. Also during this period, those in favor of increasing state taxes for higher education dropped from 61 to 35 percent, reflecting an attitudinal upheaval which could have far-reaching effects of U.S. education institutions.

Sample Interviews

"We conduct the interview in a comfortable, easy-going manner," cited Joseph Power of the West Point Pepperell Corporation in Georgia. Joseph Power and Don Espe, president and general manager of the West Point Pepperell Corporation conducted sample interviews with students Ray Ponte, easy-going, and Chip Edwards on Tuesday. The interviews lasting each approximately ten minutes. The approach that went was given some ideas on how a job interview should be conducted. The interviews were followed by questions and critiques.

"Sleuth" by david t. pandolfi

As the fly is enticed to the web of the spider, so is Michael Caine caught in the web (in the form of a plot) of Laurence Olivier in this year's super mystery, "Sleuth," directed by Joseph Mankiewicz, is somewhat of a mind-boggling game of wits—Oliveir vs. Caine.

It should be noted that not much of the plot can be told or the whole show is spoiled for the viewer. Basically, it involved an old and eccentric mystery writer and a young brainy lawyer who is the writer's wife. Michael Caine keeps his appointment and the fun begins. While Sir Laurence solicits the aid of his guest, an alterior motive is nely the reason for the masquerade.

Jews, chow costumes, dynamite, guns and blood all play their roles in this detailed and twisting game of life and death. Actors are without a doubt superb in the respective roles, but Sir Laurence Olivier does tend to rise above many superstars that describe this excellent acting. A film that requires your audience, "Sleuth" deserves praise for its plot-provoking and baffling plot. The movie was written by Anthony Shaffer. Currently playing at the Avon Cinema on Thames Street in Providence.

Brother Sun, Sister Moon"

Not since Franco Zeffirelli's "Romeo and Juliet" has a motion picture had all the elements of fine photography, acting and sensitive plot. His newest film captures all those qualities and probably more. His film title, "Brother Sun, Sister Moon" is a film about the youth of St. Francis of Assisi and his early life as a follower of Christ's teachings.

After young Francis returns from the war he is infected with fever and washed over slowly by his faithful mother and servants. Soon after the recovery he is thought to be mad because of his strange actions and manner. Because he tries to show some kindness to his wealthy father's serfs, Francis is given a thrashing by him and told to obey his parents. On the faithful day that Francis is taught throwing his father's warrens away to the peasants, his father draws him through the streets of the city to the Church where Francis gives up all his worldly possessions and his name for the love of God. St. Francis retreats to a small, half-decayed church outside the city where he takes refuge and begins to rebuild it. Later he is assisted by many followers, many of them poor and sick.

All through the movie, the music and lyrics of Donovan add a special feeling of truth and love that is evidently lacking in the life of Francis's father and many of the other people of Assisi. The film may be of particular interest to the young people of today because they too are experiencing the feelings that St. Francis once felt. They too are turning away from materialism and the whole social system that seems to keep man from experiencing the love of God and his fellow man.
