Rhode Island Abortion Law Declared Unconstitutional

(South Providence, Rhode Island) A three-judge federal court in Providence has ruled the Rhode Island abortion law unconstitutional.

The court, in handing down its decision today, said the Rhode Island abortion law is similar to the Texas law that was struck down by the United States Supreme Court in a recent decision.

The court ruled that the Rhode Island law is unconstitutional in regards to restrictions on abortions and counseling on abortions.

The court also ruled that the state's law on abortion is unconstitutional to the Supreme Court decision.

Republican representative Theodore Law of Providence, said, "In light of today's court ruling I expect quick action on my bill to make the state's law on abortion conform to the Supreme Court decision."

Law said today's ruling means that Rhode Island has no abortion law on the books. He said this in turn means that abortions in the state are no longer illegal.

The federal court ruled on a class action brought by the American Civil Liberties Union.

The American Civil Liberties Union brought the class action to determine the constitutionality of the state's law on abortion.

Republican senator James Gallant said he was pleased with the court's decision.

At Monday's regularly scheduled meeting held in Room 386, Student Senate President John Gaffney read a proposal calling for a special poll to be conducted for the purpose of determining the student body's position regarding student representation on the Board of Trustees. The proposal was passed unanimously by the student assembly. These questions were included as the body of the proposal:

1. Do you feel that the Board of Trustees acts in the best interest of the student body?
2. Do you feel that the Board of Trustees knows enough about students' wants and needs to make decisions that directly affect you?
3. Do you feel that the student body should be represented by a student on the Board of Trustees?
4. If so, should that student have full voting rights?

According to Gallant's proposal, the referendum would be offered to the students during the week of February 5 through 10. President Brown announced that offering of the proposal will be postponed until the third full week in February, when elections for the executive council of the Student Senate will be held, enabling the referendum to appear on the ballot of the Senate.

In other senate-related developments, the problem of replacing six faculty senate positions left vacant by resignations and graduations was discussed.

In line with this, President Brown announced that Senate officer elections would be pushed up to the third week in February for the second consecutive year. He raised the possibility of more stringent regulations governing nomination papers, as a result of the problems incurred at the Legislative Council elections held in February. In addition, Brown called for an independent group of students, organized by the Senate, to run the elections.

Penny Sack Parade

Members of the Greek Letter Council at Bryant College, Smithfield, Rhode Island, are joining the "Penny Sack Parade" to help collect one million pennies ($10,000) during the month of February, 1973. A large pig vase, displayed in the Koffler Rotunda at Bryant will be used to hold "Student Sack Parade" to help with any odd jobs needed at the school and to spend a day with the children.

A "Follies Night," sponsored by the Council, will be held in the Bryant Auditorium on Monday, February 26. Various pledge chances will participate in this event with skills. Donations will be accepted at the door.

Containers will be on display during at-home basketball games. These containers will be inside the entrance of the Bryant Gymnasium.

Bryant College is competing with other Youth Groups for an award, to be given by Meeting Street School, to the organization which collects the greatest amount of money.
Chlorine Stings

Dear Sir:

It seems to me that the Maintenance Department never fails to "botch" things up. I have been reading about other student complaints concerning "Smitty's Boys;" now it is time to add my voice. As a member of the Swim Team, I try to get in two hours of practice a day in the Bryant Pool. Unfortunately, I have only been able to endure one hour due to the high concentration of chlorine in the water.

The pool has always had the high chlorine problems for as long as I can remember swimming in the Bryant pool. Supposedly, the Maintenance Department is responsible for pool upkeep. Maintenance, the idea is not to dump the whole can of chlorine in the water on Monday, but add the minimal amount that will insure proper health standards. If you don't have the proper personnel to maintain the pool, Mr. Smith, at least have your men properly trained for the job. (Not likely). No one can expect to train for a swim meet when he loses his eyes in the swimming pool.

Signed,
A Disgusted Swimmer

Dolan Accepts New Position

Paul Dolan, Special Functions Manager for ARA here at Bryant will be starting a new career on Monday, February 12. He has accepted a position with CCS as "field representative" out of New York City.

The friendly Irishman started his food service career here at Bryant back in 1961 as a member of the dining management staff. In 1964, Paul joined ARA services and moved to Long Island, New York as Operations Manager at Adelphi University.

Paul returned to Providence with ARA in 1970, and has since then, served as Special Functions Manager, responsible for the Snack Bar, Faculty Dining Room, Rathskeller and Special Party Operations.

Speaking for the Dining Service Staff and Paul's many other friends here at Bryant College, I wish him the best of success and happiness in his new endeavors.

Peter W. Babbitt
Director of Dining Service

Trustee Pays Tribute

Dear Sir:

As a trustee of Bryant College, I want to express my feelings following troubled months. Yesterday's Board meeting, and the general student body meeting yesterday after lunch in the Koffler Rotunda.

The self-discipline and demonstrated sense of responsibility displayed by the majority of all concerned-students, faculty, entire staff, and your own journalism group particularly set high standards of behavior. Such exemplary conduct, too rarely seen these days on college campuses promised continued success for Bryant. I, for one, am proud to be a Bryant trustee. Whatever the unavoidable and frustrating predicaments we have shared, and may face together in the future, we can have increased confidence in the continued progress of Bryant College.

Cordially,

The Truth Behind The Trustees Message - A Fantasy

by Stephen Snyder

One more fuzzy brown morning in the student union; coffee gruzzles and newspaper russels pumping through the veins of a business school in operation. Bennie and Dick occupy an out-of-the-way table in a dark corner behind a reconstituted orange juice (with realistic pulp) and wait nine o'clock classes. Challenges calls the anti-study atmosphere like so much cigarette smoke. Dick breathes in some of his Bel Air.

He exhales, "I can't understand it. The Board of Trustees were going to clear this thing up for us." Bennie, son of a Cranston wholesale grocer, sits across the table from Bel Hilton, his newly developed mind, Bennie mounds. "This school is rife with political intrigue, and administrators against teacher, teacher against student, students against everybody. Rumors spread like pinpointed cheese to every corner of the dome area.

Bennie looks at his left shoe, bends down and wipes some smeared curl from his sole. He speaks, "You know, Dick, the trustees did make a statement, for what that's worth."

"Come on, man, you've read the damn thing. It comes out to a big nothing: makes no sense at all." Bennie nods in agreement, clutches his eyes in a frown, and searches for meaning. He conjures a picture of Father Haas standing before a microphone, making the trustees' message public. The beginning of an idea whispers, "Men of the cloth don't tell lies, there must be some truth in what the good father said." He sighs, opens his eyes and stares blankly at his unconsciously folded hands. A glint of light is reflected off the ring on one of his fingers.

"Of course!" bursts Bennie with sudden inspiration. "My Conrad Hilton combination signet and diamond rings are a dead ringer! If I can't decipher the trustees' statement with this thing to us students, another thing to the faculty, and something else again to the administrators, and on a monthly basis to boot." Dick frowns. "I can't believe that. You're accusing the trustees of double-no, make that triple dealing." "Not me," answers Bennie, "It's Old Conrad here, gesturing to the ring. Conrad Hilton is wiser than all of us."

The clock ticks off nine o'clock. Bennie points to the door, and both boys pick up their books and leave. The two stride through the rotunda, careful not to slip on the cheese. Bennie looks lovingly at his right hand; the combination signet and hands him a copy of the paper.

"Now, right here on the front page is a reprint of the trustees' message as delivered by Father Haas. He was talking about the move from Providence to here, said it had 'a significant effect on all aspects of the institution's operation.' Dick smirks.

"You don't need a fancy decoder ring for that. It just means that everything's gotten screwed up."

"Yeah, but look at this. Who wants to clarify ambiguities? the Conrad Hilton decoder says that means 'make up a good excuse.' That might be the key to the whole thing."

Dick has now lost his smirk. "These hotel guys, he must just have something."

"Now dig this: 'facilitate communication on all levels.' That phrase sounds suspiciously like late Johnson or early Nixon. Old Conrad says it translates to 'use different tactics to fit different situations.' Ergo, the trustees mean to say one point to the upper level of the dome area, saying to Dick, 'That's where Father Haas stood. I think I'm going to call him this afternoon.'"

"I'll pray for you," sneers Dick.

The day stretches on, Bennie in a state of restless preoccupation from lecture to lecture as that one picture builds in his mind's eye. Reluctantly, Father Haas stands at the podium, his hands folded saintly. The image haunts Bennie still as he stands at Father Haas' office door, his right hand raised and about to knock.

"The ringing gists in the outer-office light. 'Good old Conrad, please don't let me down,' Bennie whispers inwardly. He knocks.

"Come in my son. The door is eternally open," comes a voice rolling through the walls. Bennie hesitantly turns the doorknob and enters.

Seated at a large oak writing desk, the good father with his hands folded, Bennie looks, remembering a similar pose from a week before.

"I came to talk with you about your speech of last Wednesday."

"Yes."

"Well, uh, I uh wanted to know what abeoum you and the board planned to do now that you've clarified the ambiguities."

The phrase sounds immediately upon saying these last words. He feels exceedingly irrelevant for using the holy tracts as a source for the facetectious remark. Father Haas says nothing. Bennie looks at him and sees him meditative, as if he were weighing the question. His ponderous hands lay folded on the desktop giving off a slight but noticeable aura. The true mark of a holy man, remarks Bennie to himself.

"Do you have any idea how the good father's hands, remembering a shadowy oil painting of wrinked hands in repose that once hung on his sweet grandmother's wall. Just like in the painting, there's a ring on the third finger of his right hand. That's funny," something occurs to Bennie. "That ring is-imoged, it hits him full force, he's wearing the Conrad Hilton combination signet and Business English decoder ring just like mine! The idea seems to spiral aboard and twisted thoughts swirling through his head.

"I see you've discovered my ring," Father Haas clairvoyantly notes. "Yes, my son, sometimes we have to call upon the wisdom of a being far greater than ourselves. After all, we to phrase things in an appropriate manner."

"Can I just assume then, Bennie has recovered from the shock, and feels now a bit peaved, that nothign has been accomplished except proper word usage, that the present situation will continue, that confusion and ambiguity will go on indefinitely?" Bennie thinks he's said that rather well. 'How about that,' he sticks his tongue out in his imagination.

The good father, now standing as if to usher Bennie to the door, speaks softly but with force. "All decisions of the board of trustees reflect the best interests of the Bryant College Community; with an eye to the future and an ear to the masses, we use our combined wisdom, and though our ways be sometimes mysterious, by the grace of Hilton we get things done, retaining a sense of pride and integrity." He raises his left hand in benediction, offers his right hand to Bennie. "Go, my son, and spread our message smoothly to all corners of the world. You may kiss my ring."

Bennie kisses the Conrad Hilton combination signet and Business English decoder ring, wipes the cheese from his lips, genuflects and leaves. On his way back to the dormitory, disgusted with Conrad Hilton, the Board of Trustees, and Bryant College in general, Bennie silently wonders whether there are any Holiday Inn franchises open in Saskatchewan.
Dear NORML Members in Rhode Island:

As you know, the marijuana issue is coming into increasingly sharp focus across the United States. The most recent developments are summarized in the enclosed issue of THE LEAFLET.

In the past two years, more than 30 states have reformed their marijuana laws, most of which were modeled after the Federal Statute. West Virginia residents and your Massachusetts neighbors are assured protection as time offends. Rhode Island and Texas, however, will still wrongly classify marijuana as a narcotic and charge the possession of small amounts with a felony crime. But Rhode Island may soon be standing alone with this dubious distinction.

There is every indication that the Texas legislature will sharply reduce criminal penalties this year and may even follow the recommendation of the President's Marijuana Commission by dropping them altogether.

We need your help to develop and coordinate an effective legislative program as the Rhode Island General Assembly begins their 1973 session. Governor Philip W. Noel has already indicated his support for the reduction of marijuana penalties to at least a misdemeanor. But given the massive body of evidence presently available clearly demonstrating the relative harmlessness of marijuana and its lack of significant threat to either the individual or society, and the composition of the Assembly, removing marijuana altogether from the criminal status looms as a reasonable and distinct possibility.

If you have some time and energy you want to put to good use, please contact NORML's Frank Fiorni at your earliest convenience. Franklin may be reached at 1457 Lexington Avenue, New York, New York, 10028 (212) 427-4105.

Sincerely yours,

R. Keith Stroup

Bryant Students Selected For D.C. Internship

Four students at Bryant College,Smithfield, Rl have been selected to participate in the Washington, D.C. Internship Program for the week of February 12, 1973. This program is under the direction of both U.S. Senator Claiborne Pell and U. S. Representative Robert O. Tienan of Rhode Island, it is announced today by Elizabeth S. Palter of the Social Sciences Department at Bryant. Miss Palter is internship coordinator for all colleges in Rhode Island participating in this program.

John R. McLaughlin, Jr., Bryant '74, of Coventry, RI and John DeToma, Bryant '75, of Uxbridge, Mass. will be assigned to Senator Pell's office; John F. Devaney, Bryant '74, of Ticonderoga, NY and Anthony M. Pesare, Bryant '75, of Cranston will be assigned to Congressman Tienan's office.

These internship programs are designed to give students an on-the-scene view of the function and operations of government. Participants gain experience by attending congressional hearings and visiting executive offices and the Supreme Court. Opportunity to take part in these programs is available to Rhode Island college students whose courses include studies in Political Science.

Selection and announcement of participants for the week of March 26 will be made at a later date.

Poseidon Adventure

In the Entertainment World-from United Press International

In the first four weeks that “The Poseidon Adventure” appeared in theaters, it earned 15-million dollars.

This is a film that could move “The Adventure” into the rarefied box office heights of “The Sound of Music” and “Gone With The Wind.”

One man who fervently hopes so is producer Irwin Allen.

“We’re going for 100 million dollars,” says Allen. “We haven’t even started counting box office receipts from foreign countries.”

What, Allen was asked, goes into making a block-buster in this era of so-so movie profits?

He explains, “First, we got a recognized novel, even though it was on the best-seller list for only a couple of weeks. Next was the hardware. By hardware I mean we were shooting the interior of an upsidedown ship.”

Allen continues, “If you have a good story and good actors it helps if you can set the picture in something other than overly familiar places, the western street, an apartment or a crowded city. Then there is movie magic which is related to all the special effects, hydrom, crash, cliff, explosions. My theory is to keep the audience off balance and never let them know what’s coming. I make it a point to avoid the familiar.”

Allen is an average-sized man, but his imagination is boundless. He sees spectacles on a round face which is animated even in repose.

Says Allen, “In my pictures I like to take ordinary people and place them in extraordinary situations doing super-extraordinary things. That’s how the characters in ‘Poseidon Adventure’ respond to their surroundings.”

“Not too many people find themselves in the middle of the Mediterranean Sea in an overturned luxury liner,” he says. “He adds a picture is bringing in people in age groups who haven’t gone to movies in five or six years.”

Last Tango In Paris

The film, “Last Tango in Paris,” has created quite a stir and lots of debate among critics. Here, UPi’s Senior Editor, Frederick Winship, offers a review.

Marlon Brando’s new film, “The Last Tango in Paris,” which is on trial for obscenity in Italy, opened at a Manhattan theater last week at $8 a ticket—the same price charged for porno films.

The film caused a sensation when it received one showing at the New York Film Festival last October and when it opened in Paris last month. Critics have hailed it as a “last major film with a major star to feature frontal nudity, simulated sex and a whole dictionary of four-letter words.”

Few films have received a more fevered and sensationalized buildup before their American premières, but in spite of its bold brutality, “Tango” is a work of art and another winner for Italy’s 31-year-old director, Bernardo Bertolucci.

Brando, who sat out the premiere at his Tahitian island home, plays Paul, a 45-year-old American living in Paris. Slaggered by the inexplicable suicide of his unfaithful French wife, he holes up in an empty apartment with Jeanne, a 20-year-old post-graduate nymphette who briefly mistakes sexual attraction for love.

In an attempt to seal everything out of his life but sex, Brando reaches a new realization of love that expunges his grief and despair. When he proposed to the girl, disarmingly played by Maria Schneider, she turns him down and their erotic ill wills end in tragedy.

Brando tops his “Godfather” role, giving a performance of richer nuance and more complex characterization. According to Bertolucci, much of the film was improvised and Brando supplied many of the lines. The intensity of his identity with his role underscores the autobiographical quality of “Tango.”

The film has been banned in Italy pending the outcome of a trial growing out of citizens’ charges of obscenity. In Britain, it is being held up by the demand of government censors that a scene by eliminated. United Artists agreed to distribute it in the United States after it was turned down by...

Bryant Talent Perform as 'The Wheatstone Bridge'

Russell Francis and Steven Valenti performing at 'The Library'

Catching this dynamic duo at the dinner table, Russell Francis, a senior at Bryant, favored this reporter with a few candid quips, relating their feelings along with a bit of personal data.

Russell Francis is in his final semester at Bryant. With his major of Marketing, Russ's home town is Stamford, Connecticut. He mentioned that his special interests lie in sex; not to be confused with Steve's avocational activities of performing at various functions with guitar in hand, and a growing enthusiasm for photography. Steve is also in his final semester at Bryant, with a business administration degree concentration in management.

Asking for a description of the type of guitar the guys like to play, Russell set about giving a rundown of the virtues of the "G String."

"Now the G string is very important if you break the G string it's all over but the sails. Please see, and it gets very noticed. Cause it exposes the inner side of the box which is the upper part of the portion of the guitar which I play."

Steve realized the need of an interpreter, and explained that Russ plays both a six and a twelve string guitar. For those who are music buffs, Russ performs with a Gretsch and a Framus, switching between the two, depending on the number. Steve went on, saying that while his partner played the twelve string, he preferred a six string Gibson, adding that the bulk of the songs they play are of folk music nature.

"When I grab the microphone and I don't have the ground switch on, it really livens the night up."

In a more serious vein, Steve expressed his feelings, "Basically High."

"I listen when there are a lot of people, and I like to see when a lot of people get happy, because it makes me play better and I know Russ gets into his music more when the crowd is on our side."

He also mentioned that he personally enjoys a rowdy crowd, saying that, "When they respond, we respond."

MBA Highlights

One of the questions that students who are interested in the MBA ask is: "What are the prospects for employment if one has an MBA degree?"

The answer is very simple: Very Good!

Business in recent years has changed its attitude and expectations with regard to graduate study, especially in the field of management. For many years, the independent student, preferring to hire employees with undergraduate degrees. Then came a change of heart. Business began to look upon the holders of the MBA degree as a major source of management potential. Thereafter came a period of disillusionment in this area. Today, however, business has a more realistic covering degree essential, MBA in management does for the student. It has once again begun to look upon the MBA degree as a valid predictor of future performance. Although companies feel that the MBA is an asset because of the background and the broad understanding of business management that the student has acquired, these companies tend to look more at the individual than the degree.

If one reads the employment advertisements in the New York Times, he will discover that they are more frequently the specification that the applicant should possess the MBA degree plus what other requirements that the employer is seeking. A matter of fact, in the New York City job market, the largest in the country, particularly because New York City is the center of many corporate headquarters, the starting salary for holders of an MBA degree without previous experience is somewhere in the order of $11,000 whereas the starting salary for a student who only has a bachelor's degree in business is somewhere in the order of $5,000. This is a quite sizable increment and incentive for graduate study. MBA's have been greatly in demand in Accounting, Real Estate, Investment Banking, Computer Industries, Electronics, and other aerospace industries. Of course, if the student has had previous job experience, he would have a much higher salary.

Here are some typical citations from actual advertisements:

"If you have an MBA or engineering background, it is desirable."

"Good potential for the MBA who can provide a maximum and continuing contribution."

"Recent MBA's, high academic performance, 1-3 years of solid business operations experience."

"Seeking an individual with an MBA for marketing research."

"Engineering degree essential, MBA desired."

"The successful candidate will probably have a bachelor's degree in economics and an MBA."

"Seek recent MBA's with no more than one year experience to staff newly formed department."

The Bryant Scuba-Diving Club met again last Tuesday to organize another scuba-diving course for the Bryant College Community.

The turnout was good and had a definite note of optimism toward the course.

Don Sunshine, the next President of the Club, spoke and stated the objects of the club and also an analysis of what the course would involve. He also stated that dives in the Rhode Island area would be planned weekly for those who would be interested. These will be posted in the ARCHWAY at a future date with other information as to place and time.

There are still openings for those who are interested in this certified YMCA Course. For $60 you receive all equipment and air necessary. Included is enrollment into our organization.

The course will begin this Tuesday, February 13, at 8:00 p.m. in the Bryant College swimming pool.

Cigarette Sales Higher Dispite Ban On TV

The tobacco industry appears to have suffered little from the law which put an end to cigarette commercials on radio and television. It is clear that Americans smoked more last year than ever before.

The sales pitches the tobacco companies used in print and television from the ones they used in spoken word and moving picture.

The Federal Trade Commission's annual report to Congress on smoking and early figures indicated domestic cigarette sales in 1972 may have been greater than any previous year.

The Agriculture Department says estimated 1972 cigarette sales totaled 566 billion— an average of 202 packs for every American over the age of 18. Both the total and the per capita figure would be records.

Even though print and billboard ads must now carry a readable black-on-white health warning, the FTC says advertisers are still using the techniques they always have— appeals to taste, association with desirable personality characteristics, and attempting to soothe the anxieties of smokers about health risks.

According to the report, the advertisements explained the virtues of non-filtered and extolled their filters, placed their products in beautiful surroundings, or in some cases used distasteful humor.

It also noted that 1972 was "a year of fun and games—literally" for cigarette advertisers. Various contests offered prizes ranging from 100 pairs of argyle socks to a 100-gallon waterbed. It said "Doral's 'Taste Me' tour stakes had as its grand prize a one-week restaurant tour for two for five consecutive years."

In the words of the report: "Smooth, mild, full and fresh are words which have been used for taste claims in cigarette advertising copy for many years, and 1972 was no exception." Perhaps the most provocative taste claim made in 1972 appeared in advertisements for Newport, which promised that 'Newport makes your world taste good.'"

For those who haven't noticed a cigarette ad since they disappeared from the TV screen in January of 1971, the FTC has this update:

"The Marlboro ranch hand is still around, Virginia Slims are still telling women they've come a long way baby, but Viceroy's "switched away from the discriminating couples who appeared in advertisements during 1971, to a series used in 1972 which featured male models attired as race car drivers, posed near their powerful machines."

The FTC report also indicated that the tobacco industry may have spent less on advertising last year, even though it sold more. Industry-wide advertising totals for the first six months of 1972—the most recent period for which full statistics are available—amounted to $80-million in the first half of 1971.

S. Martin Billet - "New Business Ventures"

Mr. S. Martin Billet of the Fram Corporation will address Bryant marketing students on the topic, "New Business Ventures— the Effect of Technology on Business Opportunities."

Mr. Billet's career in business has been connected with a number of technological developments which have opened new markets for industry. Most noteworthy is his work on a glass fiber belting in tires for which he holds a U.S. patent. Also, he has been involved with problems on pollution control, the reduction of engine noise levels, fiber reinforcement in plastics, and filter devices.

His current position is with Fram's Corporate Planning Group which develops new business opportunities for the company. Mr. Billet is a graduate of M.I.T. where he received both his B.S. and M.S. degrees. Away from work he is an avid sailor and is a member of scouting activities.

Mr. Billet's presentation will be held Thursday, February 15 at 12 Noon in Room 386. All interested parties are invited.

The Popularity Of Skijetting Just Keeps Growing

The popularity of skijetting just keeps growing. UP's Guy Pauley has a report.

So you want to ski-to join the growing group gliding gracefully down the snowy slopes. You're hardly ever too young--or too old.

But you must be cautious at any age. Even a ski safety expert now in the Jackson Hole area of Wyoming--he's seen children no older than three start learning the pike by putting corny jackets and ducktails, they are forced into a dying musical genre where nobody takes them or their music seriously.

I honestly believe that anybody without preconceptions should listen to Flash Cadillac and judge them more exciting and interesting than the majority of what passes for rock 'n roll groups today.

The Popularity Of Skijetting Just Keeps Growing

The popularity of skijetting just keeps growing. UP's Guy Pauley has a report.

So you want to ski-to join the growing group gliding gracefully down the snowy slopes. You're hardly ever too young--or too old.

But you must be cautious at any age. Even a ski safety expert now in the Jackson Hole area of Wyoming--he's seen children no older than three start learning the pike by putting corny jackets and ducktails, they are forced into a dying musical genre where nobody takes them or their music seriously.

I honestly believe that anybody without preconceptions should listen to Flash Cadillac and judge them more exciting and interesting than the majority of what passes for rock 'n roll groups today.

Wheatstone’s Cont’d.

“When the crowd is getting a little sleepy, or I don’t think they’re paying attention, we still do what will call a good song, and one of the biggest good songs is the one I sing...’’Draft Dodge Bag,” which is a goof about the draft and about all the things that draftable people used to do to get away from the draft. They use to come in carrying purses and claiming they were fagots, or they had all kinds of physical disabilities...a raked up back and a dislocated dic, and they’re allergic to flowers and bugs, that usually starts to then up (the audience), and when we get finished with that we’ll go into a real drunk song like, “In Heaven There is no Beer,” or “Bottle of Wine.” Russ continued by saying that once the crowd really got flying, they would do something livelier by Chuck Berry or Freddie Clearwater Revival.”

week or more at a resort. And not all have the means of the Fords or the Kennedy clans.
Lipe says the sport is showing an increase-of about 10% per year—that there are at least three and one-half million "real" skiers in the nation.

Ski Industries of America, a trade group, tells how big a business the sport has become. SLA estimates gross retail sales of clothing, equipment, special footwear and such at $405-million annually. Counting in the amounts spent on travel, lodging, food and other expenses, an estimated $1,740,000,000 is spent yearly.

Lipe makes a career of making skiing safer. Right now, he says, the injury rate is about four skiers in 1,000 reported—cuts, bruises, and broken bones.

Ethel Kennedy and Lucille Ball both were victims last year—and they’re not beginners. Both wound up with broken legs. Even the experts are hurt skiing from time to time.

Lipe says friction is the major cause for breaks-occurring when excessive weight is transferred to the fall of the foot, creating friction between ski and boot. This friction causes the boot to stick to the ski and hampers the binding from letting go before the crash.

Accordingly, he’s developed two devices—the Lipe slider and the Lipe release check-to help prevent such accidents. Other equipment makers now are making safety releases for bindings in case of fall, and Lipe says “In the next year or two friction release should be standard equipment.”

Raiders Survive Black Magic Advance In Schaefer Tournament

by Jeff Doppelt

Dave Collier’s last-second shot and Willie Bloodworth’s rebound and shot at the buzzer enabled the Rhode Island State Raiders to survive a furious Ebony comeback. The game which had one of the most exciting finishes in Bryant’s intramural history, saw the Ebony team come back 19 points in the second half only to fall short and lose 48-46.

It appeared that the Raiders were going to coast to victory as they built up a comfortable 21-point half-time lead, 29-8. Leading the way for the Raiders were John Jenkins, and Eric Nellison with 11 and 10 points respectively. However, the key to the Ebony comeback had to be the loss of John Jenkins, Jenkins, the big 6-foot 5-inch forward for the Raiders, fell on his ankle early in the second-half, and is a doubtful starter for the game at URI this Tuesday. With Jenkins out of the lineup, Ebony started to dominate the boards, and constantly scored on second and third chances.

The Bryant Swim Team led by first place performances by John Johnston, Arthur Burrows, and John Copley beat Assumption College 66-46, Wednesday night at the Jewish Community Center in Worcester Mass. Bryant coming off last week’s tri-meet loss to SMU and BC led most of the way. The Indians swimming victory was the first of the season, and the first in the school’s history, and the first of many more in upcoming seasons.

Assumption took an early lead when their medley relay team took first place, but the trio of Johnston, Copley and Burrows quickly changed things around. John Johnston coasted to an easy victory in the 1000 yard freestyle. It was the second first place finish of the season as teammate Kevin Gay finished a distant second. John Copley kept Bryant on the right track with a fine first place effort in the 200 yard freestyle.

John held off a strong challenge from his

SLAUGHTER IN THE GYM

During the course of the intramural basketball games held week nights in the gym, one of the most dramatic contests in recent history was fought out on Tuesday night. The match of skills was staged as the Dorm 5 team met the Ebony 5. The outcome was never in question as the Dorm 5 team easily held the Ebony 5 to an under 100 points. The final outcome was the Ebony 5 86 and the Dorm 5 team 27.

The Bryant Indians, behind a 30-point performance by co-captain Bruce Stewart, defeated intra-city rival Barrington 86-74 last Tuesday night at Barrington. The victory gives Bryant a perfect 6-0 record in the Naismith Conference-three full games in front of second-place Nassau.

During the first nine minutes of the game, both teams exchanged baskets with the score knotted at 12 a piece. However, baskets by center Dave Sorenson and guard Ned Bohan within a fourteen-second span gave Bryant the lead for good. A lay-up by Bruce Stewart with 3:55 remaining in the first half gave Bryant a nine-point lead. The Indians held this lead until half time as the half ended with the score 40-31 in favor of the Indians.

In the second half, Roger Curry hit an outside jump shot for Barrington with 16:20 on the clock to make the score 44-39 and cut Bryant's lead to just five. Coach Foliard, the Indians sixty-six point lead.

Swim Team
Assumption opponent won, teammate Tim O'Brien also did well in the event, in which he picked up a third place. Arthur Burrows made up for last week's disqualification by copping the two goal in the diving, and won his Assumption mattress. Even with his Assumption competitor through most of the race, but his sprint the last lap assured an easy five length victory. Teammate Tim O'Brien finished a distant third, as Bryant picked up six points in the event.

Matt Staropoli and Wayne Shenberger put in good performances in the diving, despite a first place performance by Assumption. Wayne won a second place in the one meter diving, and Matt Staropoli finished third. In the 200 yard butterfly, Bryant registered a sweep by Assumption.

Frank McCormack is back from a case of the flu and is spearheading a fierce Bryant attack.

Mark Rafferty took first, and teammate Paul Brown finished a second. And Art Burrows made up for the half way mark of the meet, Bryant had the lead 36-24.

Assumption made a brief comeback bid when they took first in the 100 yard freestyle. John Copley finished second and Steve Mungovan took third to avoid Assumption. Any chances of an Assumption comeback were quickly extinguished with John Johnston's victory in the 500 yard freestyle. John was an easy winner in the event with Assumption taking the next two places.

Art Burrows took his second first place of the meet with his victory in the 200 yard Breaststroke. Art let the race go to the last lap before running away from his goal, the lead never truly, but it wasn't enough. Rowey's Three goal midway through the period. He skated in front of the Assumption net, and nearly deposited the puck past the goalie.

The Rowey Team made an abrupt turnaround in the third period, but it wasn't enough in the end. Rowey's took the lead when they popped in two goals midway through the third period. Doing the honors for Rowey's Team was Carroll and Roach. Unfortunately, for Rowey's the lead never held up. Jay Walsh potted two quick goals for Team Mafia, as they surged back into the game. Rowey's pulled their goaltender in the closing minutes, but Phil Cerrone scored into the vacant Rowey cage for a 5-3 Team Mafia victory.

On Tuesday night, Team Mafia was looking to settle a score with league leading Sutherland's Swingers. Unfortunately, for Team Mafia, they never knew what they were getting into. Sutherland scored nine times in the first period enroute to a ridiculous 20-4 Dave Sutherland led the winners with seven goals, and his teammate Dave Stone chipped in five more.
