The Apollo 17 astronauts are sailing smoothly through space despite an electric failure that delayed their liftoff by almost three hours and forced them to step up their speed slightly. Doctors in mission control at Houston and Biomedical astronauts Ronald Evans and Jack Schmitt were not wearing sensors, but doctors said from the lack of activity aboard the spacecraft they, too, appear to be asleep. Before the sleep period began, the astronauts dined on beef and gravy, chicken stew, ambrosia, gingerbread and browines. They are due to be awakened around 3:30 p.m. EST.

For your planning purposes, here are the times and the major events when we will be on direct coverage. All times EST and based on an on-time launch:

Wednesday, Dec. 6-9:53 p.m. launch from Cape Kennedy, earth orbit 12 minutes later.
Thursday, Dec. 7-1:14 a.m. Saturn top rocket stage refires to drive Apollo toward moon.

Apollo 17 Heading For The Moon

The Apollo 17 astronauts (L-R) Harrison Schmitt, Ronald Evans and Eugene Cernan visit launch pad to take a look at the Saturn V rocket that will fly them to the moon.

Kappa Tau Presents Homecoming Weekend

The Brothers of Kappa Tau Fraternity and the Sisters of Alpha Phi Kappa Sorority in conjunction with the Bryant Basketball team present their second annual Homecoming Weekend. This weekend proved to be one of the biggest weekends last year on the Bryant social calendar, and we are bringing it back again hoping it will be another enjoyable and successful weekend.

The first part of our weekend starts on Thursday night, December 7, with the judging of the Homecoming Queen in the auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Each fraternity is sponsoring a candidate to represent them in the pageant. The candidates will be judged on evening gown, questions and answers, hot pants, and a three to five minute speech on any subject they choose. The selection of the queen will come from 40 percent of the student vote and 60 percent of the panel judges. The voting will take place on Friday, December 8, in the Rotunda.

Friday night at 8:00 p.m. the Coronation Ball will be held at the Elks Lodge on Route 104. Entertainment will be provided by Peach Hill, a group seen at many of the local night spots around school. Also, on Friday, will be the announcement of the Queen and her court.

On Saturday, weather permitting, Kappa Tau is bringing back, by popular demand, their old tradition of the PigChase. This will be held at 1:00 a.m. at the track field. All the Greeks and Independents are invited to participate. There will be trophies awarded.

Topping off the Homecoming Weekend, the Queen will be crowned on Saturday night during the halftime of the Bryant-S.M.U. basketball game in the gym. We hope that you can all be there because it will be a fun time for all.

Dr. Wyld Resigns

In the last few years many aspects of Bryant College have changed. The college has moved to a new location in Smithfield, with new found space equipment and staff, the college has moved towards a brighter tomorrow or has it? Last year Marilyn Mitchell, a well qualified social science instructor left. As if lighteninghas struck twice; Dr. Piperopoulos has decided to terminate his work here at Bryant. Unfortunately for the students, there might have been more to that resignation than "meets the eye."

Wednesday, Dec. 13-12:03 a.m. second surface excursion begins.

4:33 p.m. third surface excursion begins.

11:33 p.m. third surface excursion ends. Thursday, Dec. 14-5:56 p.m. lunarlander takes off from moon. 7:58 p.m. lander docks with command ship.

Friday, Dec. 15-Direct coverage as warranted.

Saturday Dec. 16-6:32 p.m. Apollo blasts out of lunar orbit and heads back toward earth.

Sunday Dec. 17-3:25 p.m. Astronaut Ronald Evans begins one-hour spacewalk.

Student Information

Stenography Machines

Acting on the request of a student enrolled as a secretarial major here at Bryant, members of the Student Senate investigated the purchase price of the stenograph machines.

The following are the results to date of that investigation:

1. They are purchased by the Bryant College Bookstore from Stenograph Machines, whose wholesale price to those that inquire is: $120.75
2. Shipmencharge: 3.00
3. Total wholesale cost from Stenograph Machines: $123.75
4. Price to Bryant Students: $185.00

We feel that this discrepancy in price should be explained by those responsible.

All Letters Are Accepted

In the past few weeks, many letters have been received by The ARCHWAY for publication as Letters to the Editor. The standing policy has, and will remain, that all letters will be printed as long as they are not slanderous, profane, or have obvious false facts.

Last week we ran a letter that was signed by "Informative Greeks" concerning the Office of the Vice-President of Student Affairs. This letter caused an unusually large amount of feedback, both for and against. The ARCHWAY would now like to emphasize that it had nothing to do with the printing of the letter and apologizes for any embarrassment or personal grief it caused any of the people referred to in the letter.

We welcome all letters and will continue to publish all those submitted that conform to the policy stated in the first paragraph of this editorial. We reiterate, however, that all letters must be signed by the author, although he may request his name be withheld.

Dedicated To All Thieves At Bryant

Not everyone will know what this letter is about; but you, the lucky one, will understand it. Last Friday night, while celebrating my birthday, someone took a burden off my mind. I have had my albums here since the beginning of the school year and I have been worrying about them being stolen since then. No longer do I have to worry thanks to you. I appreciate this present to me.

You may feel you pulled this theft off to perfection, but there you are wrong. Instead of getting all my albums like you thought you did, you made a mistake and left me four which I may still listen to. Thanks for remembering me during this time of Christmas spirits by leaving these four albums. If you would like these albums stop by anytime and ask for them because I would love to give you what you deserve.

There was also a stack of 45's which you could have taken also, but I guess you just didn't have the time. I'm really sorry that we weren't here to help you carry them out but I guess that doesn't bother you. I mean with about 80 albums to listen to who has the time for measly little 45's.

After reading this letter you may feel I'm angry at you. Hell no, I'm Christian. So to you I dedicate this little poem:

If you should die before you wake,
I pray to the Lord your soul he take.
Heaven is a place you'd like very well,
But I wish the F-k you'd go to hell.

Your Friend Forever,
P.S. If you had waited until Christmas my suitemates and I would have giftwrapped them for you.

An Open Letter To Dr. Fullerton:

It would seem as though your time has come to leave our once peaceful school. You promised to go within two months if we did not have a strike. This is now three months now and it's clear that you don't have our backing. You are an insulated man, seeing only what you want and failing to see the people that you are here to help. Your job is not that of a supreme being, you are merely an administrator of this school and as such you are bound to do the job of your position, which is (to refresh your memory) to act as VP of Student Affairs.

This office and the one directly associated with it (Dean of Student Life) were filled by dedicated, sincere men who did all in their power to help, inform, reprimand, and if it was warranted, dismiss students. They were fair men who put the students' best interests ahead of their own private interests, and all the students fortunate enough to have been at Bryant while they were in office will long remember them as such.

It's time for you to talk to the students, or hand in your resignation, or both. Explain to us why we can't see you as we could your predecessor; explain to us why we have to go through your assistant to hear your words; explain to us why you aren't doing your job as well as your predecessor had; most importantly if you feel that you are doing your job then what exactly is it and how exactly are you accomplishing it? Be forewarned that the students of Bryant College are intelligent people with inquisitive minds and can't be fooled by the rhetoric of the interview you gave to Richard Woolf at the beginning of the year. All we want from you are straight answers to straight questions and a Vice-President of Student Affairs who will do a proper job for the students of Bryant College, the people who pay your salary.

ARCHWAY Shows Gross Negligence

Dear Editor,

It is nice to know the Archway uses a U.P.I. machine. Unfortunately most of the information is old hat. Why doesn’t the Archway concern itself more with the problems and accomplishments of the Bryant College Community? The weekly calendar published by the Activities Department is fine, if you can make all the meetings on a single day. In the past year I have not seen any reporters attending the meetings I have been a le to make. It seems as if the reporters feel that is is not their responsibility to cover school events. They seem to rely on the club or organization for the paper’s, articles, which in turn frees one more reporter to copy the dictates of the U.P.I. machine.

The Student Senate has in past few months brought to the surface a few important issues of major concern to the Bryant College Community. The minutes alone can not describe or sum up the activities of the Senate. I feel the Archway has shown gross negligence on their part in giving the Bryant Community the full data and background on many of the Senate’s activities past and present.

Sincerely,

Kenneth H. Katz

To Our Faithful ARA

Now that most of the facts have been presented to me, I have come to see o my own conclusions on that most memorable Thursday night. It seems that people who did not even eat that Thursday night got sick anyway. It has been detected that it is a gastroenteritis virus; that could spread as fast as any rumor on this campus. It could last from one to two days with nausea vomiting, diarrhea, and abdominal cramps according to the Providence Journal. This virus could have started as early as Wednesday and time was just the factor as who got sick first. All that was needed was a group of people in a enclosed area, such as a basketball game, to start the contagious virus and it could lưud as fast as the common cold. I have to agree that the ARA kitchen facilities are very clean and the food served is handled properly. But I have to conclude that the quality of the food is not up to what I could call digestible. You sure have the right to choose your meals. I have to pay for your appaling food because I live in the dorm. So you get our bread and we get your slop. I still think you are up to your neck in meatballs.

Should Students Have The Right To Evaluate Faculty?

To the Students of Bryant College:
Since our move to the Smithfield campus our right to give written evaluations of our instructors has been dismissed. The evaluations gave the students the opportunity to inform the administration of the performance of the Bryant Faculty. The administration could accurately determine by these evaluations which members of the faculty should be given favorable recognition and of those who must be warned that improvement was necessary. When an instructor’s performance was extremely poor, the administration knew of this circumstance and would take action, dismissing the instructor. Why has the administration abandoned this policy? Does the administration think that the student body is incapable of judging a teacher’s method of instructing? Does the administration feel the students do not have this right? The students are mature adults, capable of recognizing the talents and faults of their instructors, and since the students pay the faculty the employees, the students have the right to determine the future of their educational experience. The students must take action now to see that their rights are recognized and not jeopardized.

Editorial Letters Should Be Censored

Dear Editor:

I think it is about time the quality of editorial letters be questioned. I am in agreement with the idea of professing one’s opinion, but we are confusing this idea by contributors who are sure that they are the “Voice of the People.”

I disagree. I think that we are all entitled to our own convictions and should not let some unsigned article give the impression that it is the majority’s ridicule tool.

I think that it is about time the authors of some of our recent sound-implying and image-damaging letters should either qualify their accusations with logical facts or should pack up and get a job at SCRUEW Magazine or the midnight inquirer.

I don’t think we should regress to a point of setting qualifying standards for printable material which has been sent in by ARCHWAY readers. However, I do feel that an effort should be made by the editors to refuse or require alteration of material that would be considered in poor taste by the general public. There is no reason why the ARCHWAY, which has shown some dynamic transitions for a Bryant newspaper, could not make an effort on this issue.

My opinion of “taste” in this case is that the ARCHWAY, which is produced with our money, not be used as a sublimation vehicle to dump unnecessary and unqualified dirt on people at Bryant. Criticism should be constructive; not destructive.

Registration: Survival For The Fittest!

By Lucy Golabeh

Thursday afternoon I went to the so called “registration.” I arrived as a virgin registrant, not knowing much about the procedures I had to follow. Soon after, I found out what registration was all about.

My registration was scheduled for one o’clock. By eleven o’clock, when I arrived, I couldn’t see the doors of the registration office. Mass of eager “animals” were tearing the door down, trying to see who could get in first. The bookkeeper (namely the security guard) was trying to keep order without much success.

The door to the zoo was opened at one o’clock sharp. The reason I say sharp is because I felt a hail point pen being stuck in my ass at that time. There the one o’clock massacre began. From there on, I was pushed, shoved, trampled, molested, and pinched on the other side of my ass for a change. In addition to this, some creep stole my watch. I lost two toe nails (I was wearing army boots), gained a black eye, and lost my virginity in the process of getting through the door.

This was only the beginning. The “hard” carried me with them to the registration table. When I finally came out of my shock, I realized what happened. After waiting for a half an hour, I finally found a table where I could make my schedule out. To add to my misfortunes, when I got up to the registration table the “animal” in front of me had already closed out my last class. To this “animal” I’d like to say: “May the Bluebird of Happiness crap all over your perfect schedule that I was suppose to have!” After making my seventh and worst schedule, I finally got up to the registration desk. This was my chance! There was nobody in front of me. I felt like a survivor in a jungle. My next shock came when the little old man yelled out, “Accounting 2d, as in David, is closed out.” I couldn’t believe my ears. Maybe he should take the English course I was forced to take-or is it closed out already?

After this experience of having to register like a hungry animal waiting for his next meal, all I can say is this system has got to go. I will not forget this day for a while to come because I still have my black and blue marks, and swollen ankles to remind me of it. If you know what’s good for you, start taking your Karate lessons early for next semester’s registration.
Accounting Association Holds First Annual Dinner

On Wednesday Evening, December 6, 1972, the Bryant College Accounting Association held its first Annual Association Dinner. The event was held at the Admiral Inn in Cumberland.

Mr. Richard Saltzman, an independent Financial Manager, was the guest speaker. He did very well to hold the attention of the forty members who attended his talk; a very informative group discussion took place.

The evening began at 5:30 with a cocktail hour, which put everyone in a happy, informal mood. Dinner was served at 6:30 and the meeting began at 7:30. We would like to thank our advisor, Mr. Mickey Perlow, for attending the dinner and helping to make it a success. Everyone will agree that the first Annual Accounting Dinner was a great success and there will no doubt be more dinners planned for the future.

Dr. Wyld: Editor Of Forthcoming Book

Dr. Lionel D. Wyld, Professor of English, is editor of a forthcoming book on American studies, methodology, and research. Dr. Richard E. Langford, President of the Press, has announced. The book, to be published early in 1973, includes chapters on contributor discipline to the American studies field, written by eminent national scholars. Dr. Wyld, who holds a doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania, has a broad background in the arts of communications, technology, and American culture.

Contributors to the volume include Dr. Paul J. Piccard, Professor of Government, Florida State University (Political Science); Dr. Paul Collins Hayner, Chairman of Philosophy, California State College (Philosophy and Religion); Dr. Eric Brungard, Professor of History, State University College at Buffalo (History); Dr. Bruce K. Ramach, Professor of Anthropology and Director of the Yager Museum (Anthropology and Archaeology); Dr. Rita K. Gillin, Associate Professor of English and Chairman of American Studies, State University College at Geneva (Literature); Dr. Mary Washburn Clarke, Professor of English, Western Kentucky University (Pulmonary); and the Rev. Mr. Mark Sumner Harvey, Old West Church, Boston (Music).

Dr. Wyld has written the introductory chapter on "The Study of American Civilization." The book will contain various bibliographies for each of the areas reported.

New Channel For Solving Dorm Problems

A concerned group of students within the Student Senate recognize the need for a "group" that will police the existing system for solving dormitory problems. It is our contention that the existing system, after being fed information on a given problem, fails to reach necessary decisions at the necessary times. This causes hardships, frustrations, and strained relations among dormitory students (even reaching points where students can no longer function in their academic roles).

We are making ourselves available to help you make sure the system works. What this means is:

1. If you have a problem that is concerned with dormitory living which has not been solved by contacting those responsible for solving such problems, please contact us.

2. If you have a problem that is concerned with dormitory living which is just now developing and you plan to contact those who are responsible for solving such problems, please contact us.

"Why should I get a job over Christmas vacation if I'm not going to get a job after graduation?"

Accounting Association Seminar

The Bryant College Accounting Association will hold a Graduate Seminar on Monday evening, December 11, 1972, at 7:00pm in Room c-267, off the Commuter Lounge. Guest speakers will include recent graduates of Bryant who will speak on their activities since graduation concerning their present employment. Refreshments will be served after completion of the speeches.

Everyone is invited to attend. This will mark the final meeting of the semester.

Think so? We hear a lot about lakes dying. Entropy they call it. When pollution reaches a certain level, it can't be reversed. That's what bribes do. Contribute to moral pollution. Trust turns to sewage in the community of man. You must do your share. It's not exclusive. It includes you and me.

Special Study Rooms: December 6-21

In order to satisfy a demand for study rooms after Library hours, classrooms 261 and 262 will be open from 10 to 12 p.m. from December 6 through 21. Someone will be in charge of supervising these rooms during the two hours. The regulations regarding no smoking or food in classrooms will be observed.

New Organization For Women Faculty

Women Educators at Bryant Members of the women faculty at Bryant College met December 5 to define the philosophy of and propose programs for Women Educators at Bryant (WEB). The primary purpose of the new organization is to advance the professional status of women both at Bryant and in the community at large. Other objectives are to encourage and support the active participation of women at decision-making levels, to promote recognition of the variety of talent and expertise among women faculty and to provide a forum at Bryant for professional women educators.

Students With Large Refrigerators

Students are now allowed to keep their large refrigerators throughout the year. The only stipulation is that students having these refrigerators should have the campus electrician, Mr. Wicks, inspect them for damage or dangerous leaks.

To have this done, the student should obtain a "repair form" from the RA in his dorm, complete it, and return it to the RA.

This Is A Direct Result Of Student Senate Action

Notice

Any student who stored his refrigerator here at the college, over the summer and did not receive his $30 deposit and/or his refrigerator in September, please contact Paul Gaboury, Dorm 4, Room 211, phone 231-4126, or leave a message at the Senate Office.

It is imperative that you contact me as soon as possible.

Students To Participate In Eleventh Annual College Business Symposium

The following students were selected because of their outstanding academic records to participate in the Eleventh Annual College Business Symposium sponsored by the Greater Providence Chamber of Commerce, held at the Colonial Hilton Inn on December 6: Barbara A. Macachetti, Patricia O'Moore, Janet A. Spinella, Dennis C. Creed, Mark J. Kinisky, Evelyn S. Rossi, Susan J. Morris, Robert W. Clamp, Austin P. Clark, Kathleen A. Grimes, Brian S. Merritt. The theme of the symposium was "Relative Alternatives," and the speakers were: Mrs. Freda H. Goldman, Special Advisor to the Commissioner for Continuing Education; Mr. Robert Gulla, Merritt, Lynch, Pierce, Femner and Smith; Miss Mary Pat Moore, executive Secretary Permanent Advisory Committee on Women; Mr. Anthony Kasgian, Assistant Professor of English Rhode Island Junior College. In the afternoon session a panel discussion was served as the medium through which the speakers and students interacted. Dean Clarissa M. H. Patterson, who is a member of the Education Committee of the Chamber, accompanied the Bryant students.

The theme of the program, "Smallness and Greatness," was selected because of the children of these groups and in favor of children of intellectuals and more privileged persons.

The system eliminates the old formal entrance examinations and requires students to have worked on farms or in factories to gain "practical experience." It also reduced the normal study period from five or six years to three or four years.

Senator News

Vincent Retires

The Student Senate had its annual Monday meeting on December 4, 1972, where the reading of a letter of resignation from Mark Vincent began the proceedings. The resignation of another Senator brings up the question of whether a member can responsibly represent the people who elected him to office.

The next issue on the agenda was the placing of a student with acting voting power on the Curriculum Committee and Co-Co Committee. This would allow the student body a more clearer picture of what is going on in these two significant committees. The Curriculum Committee is a need area for the students to facilitate their changing views to another. The rock opera "Bozo" will be presented on December 14, 1972 in the auditorium, for a minimal fee of 50 cents. This opera will be shown at night because the actors have other commitments.

The problem of the refrigerators was brought up for discussion by Paul Gaboury. He gave an interesting viewpoint towards this troubled issue of storing the refrigerators over the summer months. Miss States said, "that she sees no reason why the student cannot leave it in his dorm during the summer." This is not possible because there is no possibility of these appliances being ripped off from the dorms.

Herman S. Eisenberg

To Speak At Bryant

Herman S. Eisenberg of the Mark Hotel chain is going to address the Bryant College Community in a talk sponsored jointly by the Marketing Department and the Department of Institutional Management, on Wednesday, December 13, 1972 at 12 noon in the Auditorium. The topic of Mr. Eisenberg's speech will be "Impact of the Hotel Industry on Opportunities in Institutional Management."

Mr. Eisenberg is graduate of Louisiana State University and the City College of New York. He managed the Parker House in Boston and the Sheraton Motor Inns in Richmond, Virginia and Bloomington, Minnesota. He was manager of the Edgewater Gulf Hotel in New Orleans, Mississippi and many others.

In 1970 he was elected Manager of the Year by the Sheraton Inns, Inc. The Mark Hotel chain of which he is currently president, is operating approximately eight Sheraton Inns, Howard Johnson Motor Lodges, and Travel Lodges franchises totaling five-hundred rooms from Atlanta, Georgia to New England, as well as additional properties in various stages of construction and development in Europe and New England.

To The Bryant Community

On Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Mildred Nichols, will speak to members of the "Practical Politics" class. Other members of the Bryant community are also invited to attend and to talk with the coffee. The meeting will be held in Room 386 at 3:00 pm.

What will be particularly interesting for us is that Mrs. Nichols will have returned from the meeting in Washington D.C. of the National Democratic Party Committee and will be able to give a first-hand report of the meeting. One important issue at the meeting is whether Mrs. Jean Westwood will or will not stay on as head of the Democratic Party for the next four years. Mrs. Nichols was appointed by Mrs. Westwood to the National Committee and will be a member of the Committee for Delegate Selection for the 1976 Democratic Convention.

Mrs. Nichols is married, the wife of a professor of English at Brown University. She has three sons. She has been very active in the Rhode Island Women's Political Caucus and was an early supporter of Shirley Chisholm for President. She was one of the coordinators in one of the largest registration drives for new voters in the state.

Self Analysis

by Dan Aderhold

It has been a long semester and a hard one to many students. When someone encounters such a semester, it is difficult to find time to analyze one's self. Put aside a few minutes of your time to reflect. In this complex world of ours, it is easy to lose sight of who you really are; and people take on a new image—one that is phony and insincere.

Somewhere along the road, you and I have lost sight of the Christmas season ought to be a season of happiness and thanksgiving. This if fine, but one must slow down and look at his life style.

A good portion of your time may be all you need to save yourself from constant anxiety and mental depression. In this present era, the college student is searching for meaning in life and wondering where his life is headed.

It has been said by many people that the college needs more counseling services. This is true. We do need this, but unless a student finds time to reflect and to simply think, he will eventually almost certainly jeopardize his right side of values and priorities. True solitude and reflection is not something one can dispatch with out upsetting his human balance and sense of identity.

All it takes is an effort to be who you really are and not what other people want you to be. If this is done, you will truly be at peace with yourself. It is tranquility of the mind that is the secret to true happiness.

Education In China Progressing Slowly

China's revolution, in education is progressing very slowly indeed if Peking University is any guide.

The University, one of the oldest, largest, and most respected institutions of higher learning in the country, is operating at well below 50% capacity.

There is reason to believe most other major colleges and universities in China are doing no better.

Chou Pei-Yuan—a Vice Chancellor of this University's revolutionary committees—says about 4,300 students were enrolled for this year's fall semester.

Chou, a well-known physicist and longtime Vice President of the University, earned his doctorate from the California Institute of Technology in the 1920's. He told visiting students the school's capacity is about 10,000 students. But official Chinese reports a decade ago indicated more than 12,000 students were enrolled in 1961.

The teaching staff now numbers more than 2,000, according to Chou; and about 200 of these are professors or associate professors. (The 1961 faculty numbered 2,300 and about 10% of those professors or associate professors.)

Classes and new enrollments at Peking University, as well as other such institutions throughout the country, were suspended in June, 1966, "for half a year" on the orders of the Communist Party Central Committee and the State Council.

For all practical purposes, classes were not resumed until the Fall term of 1970 when new curricula were established under the new revolutionary educational program launched by Party Chairman Mao Tse-Tung during the cultural revolution. The 4,300 figure cited by Chou is the total number of enrollment since then.

Students now are being selected under the new system inaugurated as part of the educational reform program. The new system envisions a wider selection of students—and Communist Party members—than is designed to give the children of poor peasants, soldiers, and the working families more opportunity.

In the past, they said, enrollment procedures were weighted against the children of these groups and in favor of children of intellectuals and more privileged persons.

The new system eliminates the old formal entrance examinations and requires students to have worked on farms or in factories to gain "practical experience." It also reduced the normal study period from five or six years to three or four years.

Can You Use A Loan?

Information for students who expect to obtain Guaranteed Insured Loans through local banking institutions.

Following are the current, revised regulations for applying for education loans through banking institutions as provided in the Higher Education Amendments Act of 1972. These regulations become effective on March 1, 1973, and are subject to change or further revision.

You will be eligible for federal interest subsidy benefits if:

1. Your family's adjusted income is less than $18,000. (Adjusted family income is defined as total gross income minus approved deductions and exemptions).
2. You file a Parents' Confidential Statement through the College Scholarship Service, Princeton, New Jersey, stipulating a copy be forwarded to Bryant College.
3. You complete, in triplicate, a federal affidavit form. This form must be notarized and the college must verify enrollment and financial need in addition to recommending to the lending institution the amount of loan you should require.

You may not be eligible for federal interest subsidy if your family's adjusted income exceeds $18,000; however, you still may obtain a Guaranteed Insured Loan for education purposes. To do so you only need to procure the necessary applications from your local bank. Payment of the interest accruals while you are attending college will be your responsibility.

More From Rick Nelson

If he wants it, Rick Nelson could become a full-fledged Rock 'N' Roll star again. He's on the brink of doing what hardly anyone really ever does—making a real, honest comeback, without having to compromise his own artistry. By now, of course, everyone knows about "Garden Party," and the story that's behind the song—Rick's appearance at a Rock 'N' Roll Revival at Madison Square Garden, the rejection by the crowd of his long hair, his new band, his new songs. How Rick Nelson and the Stone Canyon Band were booted off the stage for playing "Honky Tonk Woman."

But the important part is that what could have been simply a bummer scene was turned into what could be a brand new start for Rick. If he plays his hand right.

There's no question that Rick Nelson is, right now, making some of the best music he has ever made—singing his own songs, backed by one of the most versatile rock bands ever put together.

And the new album—titled "Garden Party" after the single—is a gem. It's a marvelous blend of music, ranging from hard, modern-sounding Rock to almost pure Country to the mellower steak of ballads.

The album starts out with a fine rocker—and a song that should, by all rights, be the follow-up single to "Garden Party." It's called "Let It Bring You Along," and it was written by the band's bassist, Stephen Love. But there's plenty of other goodies, including a little-known Chuck Berry tune, "I'm Talking About You."

In a recent interview, Rick said that he's happy with what he's doing now for the first time in years—and it's no wonder. Because there are a lot of people who think his new sound is the best he's ever had.

And he just might ride it back up to the top.

Long as we mentioned Rock 'N' Roll Revivals—ought to drop in a word about a new "Golden Hits" re-issue. It's Bill Haley and the Comets, proving once again that no matter how bad the music is, tunes like "Rock Around the Clock," "Shake, Rattle, and Roll," and "Rip It Up," are a lot of fun. And that's all anyone in the 50's over asked of Rock 'N' Roll anyhow.

Finally A&M Records, in its continuing effort to salvage Procol Harum from total anonymity, has put together an album combining the only two Procol tunes ever to legitimately be rated "hits." The tunes, of course, are "A White Shade of Pale," and "Conquistador." It was nice of them to put those two tracks at the beginning of the first side, since it makes it easier to pick them out. On the other hand, if you play it like that, it makes a six-and-one-half minute album. Oh well, Procol Harum fans have always been a suffering lot, anyway.

No Evening Division Courses Are Filed

As the semester draws to a close, registration materials are being prepared to mail to all present evening division students. The schedule varies very little from the catalog that basic first semester sections of English Composition and Economics courses are offered. Also to be noted is the scheduling of Economics courses on different evenings. The spring schedule called for a heavy concentration of Economics courses on Thursdays.

The up-to-date TENTATIVE faculty assignments are still posted on the evening division bulletin board. Remember, this listing is subject to change through the end of January. We guarantee that any particular instructor will teach a given course or section of a course.

Next week, hopefully, a list of tentative graduates for December and June will be posted on the bulletin board outside the evening division office.

No evening courses are filled. Reports to the contrary probably stem from the fact that day division students are permitted to register for evening courses on a limited basis. Only five day students are permitted to enroll in any evening division course. This is done to allow evening students sufficient space for selecting the courses of their choice.

Courses on the evening schedule which are closed are closed only to day students.

"The New Faces"

Richardson-Defense Weinberger-HEW

Washington news and analysis in depth from the nation's capital by George J. Marder of United Press International.

Generally, the men in President Nixon's second term Cabinet come from all over the United States. For example, the Office of Management and Budget to head the Department of Education and Health. Weinberger, for example, is from Missouri. The President is putting at the head of major government departments devil's advocates who question federal programs rather than advocates who will push for them.

That is the way the President hopes to accomplish his management diet for the federal bureaucracy during his second term. He is about through with his cabinet and sub-cabinet shakeup. It has taken on more of the appearance of a move of some of musical chairs rather than a brand, new look.

Only a few new faces are showing, but a lot of old faces are being moved into new slots.

However, the shifts are revealing. The President is taking men whose talents have been proved to him in one field, putting them in charge of programs where they have no preconceived ideas or previous commitments.

For example: the transfer of Caspar Weinberger from the Office of Management and Budget to head the Department of Education and Health. Weinberger is known as a brilliant management specialist and budgeter. In layman's language, he deals with the know-how of making programs work at the least cost, regardless of what the programs are. He is a new breed of efficiency expert--a breed akin to Robert McNamara and his whiz kids who ran the Defense Department during the Kennedy and Johnson Administration.

Weinberger is not preceded by a reputation as an advocate of welfare, health and education programs which he will soon run. He is not as familiar with those fields as most of his predecessors. Arthur Ribicoff, for example, was known as a humanitarian governor familiar with government programs for the poor, the schools, and the ailing. Weinberger's immediate predecessor, Elliott Richardson, had a reputation as a liberal and was knowledgeable in the specific programs of the department which he headed.

Weinberger's first chore at the HEW will be to be educated in what the HEW is doing and why. He already knows the cost from his experience at the Budget Bureau.

It could be that Weinberger will end up being an advocate, fighting for the programs he runs. But first he will be a man from Missouri at HEW. His first assignment is to bring fiscal responsibility to that vast department.

The proof of the pudding will be whether the poor, the sick, and the nation's school systems are better off after the Weinberger HEW. If all he's done is save money for the taxpayer by cutting back on services, he's done nothing but wield an axe.

Richardson also qualifies as a man from Missouri Cabinet official for the second Nixon Administration. He's had service at HEW which predated the Nixon Administration. He's also served at the State Department. Now he's taking over at the Defense Department, a field to which he is a stranger.

The military men at the Pentagon will have to get used to Richardson who said that defense budgets have to keep growing, as they have in recent years, in war and out.

Richardson moves to the Pentagon without any fixed ideas on what the defense structure should be, as his predecessor had. Secretary Melvin Laird was a top-ranking member of the House Military Affairs Committee, with a decided sympathy for the military before he took over at the Pentagon. If Richardson is to show the same affinity for sympathetic handling of military requests, it will have to be developed from experience.

Richardson also is pretty typical of a type of government career man who has been seen in Washington in the past generation, seemingly at home in any slot, and almost as much at ease in Democratic as in Republican administrations.

The tradition of the new breed is an ability to run things efficiently and to be able to get on top of the most complicated, jobs, rather than being overburdened by details.

There's one thing lacking in that new breed: and noticeably lacking in Richardson: political know-how. It will be years, if ever, before Richardson can match the man he succeeds in political savvy.

If the fighting had taken place here...

This map of the U.S. shows what the impact of the war in Vietnam would have been had it taken place in the U.S. Casualties, refugee, and defoliation data for the U.S. were computed on a percentage basis to reflect actual data from South Vietnam. Calculations took into consideration the ratios of U.S. to South Vietnamese populations and land areas. The statistics were then converted to state populations (or land areas) and projected on the map. Sources for the data are the U.S. Department of Defense, the Senate Subcommittee on Refugees, the Republic of Vietnam Ministry of Information, and the Stanford Biology Group (on defoliation).

A Whole New World

Jo Jo Starbuck and Ken Shelley, World Figure Skating Champions, the bright and dazzling costumes, colored spot lights, and the traditional magic of the 1973 ICE CAPADES is a 'whole new world.' Their professional debut with the show is another of their major goals that have been accomplished by this young and dynamic skating team.

The many hours of training and competing for amateur titles are far beyond them now as they embark on a new and exciting journey of the United States with star billing with the current edition of the ICE CAPADES. Their major concern now is pleasing audiences around the country. The challenge of pleasing an audience as opposed to performing for judges in the Olympic games is a welcome task for Jo Jo. She remarked that the pressure is not as difficult to contend with because you always have another chance. After a short practice session on the ice at the new civic center, Jo Jo and Ken agreed to taking a few minutes out of their busy schedule for an interview. As we sat in one of the dressing rooms, they both responded favorably to the question of how they like their new found acquaintances. Their new and different surroundings are a yet another challenge to these two exuberant personalities.

Beginning together at nine years old in the Paramount ice rink, Jo Jo and Ken started on a long road to success. They were shunned by their school mates as they rejected invitations to social events only to spend time practicing at the ice rink to prepare themselves for the day when they would compete for the U.S. Olympic Skating Team. As time progressed, their hours of practicing were extended until it reached the all time high of six hours a day for six days a week. Today, they have more time off during the day but the tour with the ice show is 48 weeks long with time off for Christmas.

Both from Downey, California, Jo Jo Starbuck and Ken Shelley attended the same schools, most recently, California State at Long Beach, where they decided to sign a three year contract with the ICE CAPADES. "It seems like I'm on a summer vacation now with all the free time," Ken remarked. He was used to many hours of practice and then his 'free' time was devoted to his homework, not a pleasurable diversion. With the holidays almost upon us, Jo Jo mentioned that she had some shopping to do and I offered suggestions for places she could find gifts for everyone on her list. A student of tap and ballet, Jo Jo managed to perfect her skating ability and together with Ken, they make a memorable impression on all who view their performance.

The ICE CAPADES will be at the Providence Civic Center thru Sunday. Performances are 7:30 on Friday; 12:00, 4:00 and 8:00 Saturday; Sunday at 1:30 and 5:30.

ATG SB SCORES

The Graduate Office has received the results of the ATG SB examination that was held on November 4.

For the first time, in addition to the usual verbal, quantitative, and total scores, additional information has been included on the form. It is now known as the Graduate Business Admission Council Preadmission Report. The new information comprises the candidate's self-reported undergraduate cum, undergraduate major, his work experience, his active military service, and a predicted admission index.

MBA COURSES

THE CORPORATION AND ITS ENVIRONMENT

From time-to-time in this column, we will discuss some of the graduate courses.

Bryant, in its MBA program, has tried to anticipate new management trends. One of the advanced courses is entitled Business Organizations and Their Environment. In this course the political, social and legal relationships of business are discussed. Among the topics covered are the historical evolution of the corporation; whether it can be considered to be a private government; the power of the corporation; and its relationship to the individual, to politics, to labor, to the community, and to minorities. A growing responsibility of the corporation is social responsibility and social accountability. These, too, are discussed. Of course, relevant cases and current happenings are studied.

GRADUATE SPEAKERS

Mr. Camper will be the main speaker at a one-day seminar to be held by Newport Creamery, Inc., January 16 at the Sheraton Islander Hotel on Goat Island in Newport. His topic will be "Leadership in Management." Also on January 17, he will be addressing the Rhode Island Housekeeper Association at the Emma Pendleton Bradley Hospital in East Providence. The topic that night will be the "Role of Continuing Education in Professional Housekeeping."

China's Leaders Are Learning From Laborers

Now a look at China after Mao... By Charles Smith, UPI senior editor in Peking.

One of Mao Tse-Tung's greatest concerns about Chinese communism is the emergence of an elite leadership class after his death. He fears that new leadership will depart from the course he has set for China.

This, Mao contends, is what happened in Russia and turned the Soviet Union into a revisionist state.

It is what is happening in China when Mao launched the cultural revolution in the last decade and destroyed the old leadership structure of both Party and State.

Mao always has maintained that the best way to prevent the development of an elitist leadership class is for the leaders—the cadres—to spend time laboring with the workers and peasants; listening to their complaints; learning about their problems.

By getting their hands dirty, Mao says, the cadres will cleanse their minds of any capitalist ideas that they may belong to a special group which requires privileged treatment.

So, on May 7th of 1966, in a letter to the late Defense Minister Lin Piao, Mao proposed a program for implementing these ideas. This became known as the "May 7th directive" and is the basis for the re-training and re-education of cadres that is going on in China today.

May 7th Schools

The new program swung into high gear that same month. Special facilities, known as "May 7th schools", were established throughout the country for cadres to participate in group study and collective labor.

For cadres working in the Eastern District of Peking, the May 7th school is located about 25 miles away in the Eastern suburbs. It was established on November 7th, 1968. Since then more than 3,000 "students" have attended the school...Including the present group of 450...Ranging form school teachers to factory supervisors.

The cadres had built the school from scratch, taking barren, uncultivated land and turning it into farmland which now produces about 8,000 tons of grain and 5,000 tons of vegetables annually.

Officials say they have "transformed not only the objective world, but also the subjective world" at the school.

Each cadre attending the Peking School stays six months. The term for other schools throughout the country varies from 3 months to 1 year.

Each cadre asp ens from two weeks to one month living with a farm family in nearby commune villages. The remainder of the time is spent in dormitories built by the cadres themselves. Because they are so close to their homes, each cadre is permitted to visit his family for three days every two weeks. For cadres from central government offices, who usually are sent to schools much more distant from Peking, the visiting periods are not so liberal. They get one month a year off to visit with their families.

When the first May 7th schools were first established, there was a widespread belief among analysts outside China that they were at least partly punitive. Some specialists in Chinese affairs still hold to this belief.

But school leaders say "absolutely not".

They contend that everyone who comes is a volunteer. That everyone wants to come...That they have a long waiting list.

From talking with cadres at the Peking school and watching them at study and work one gets the impression that the six-month term is something like a long stay at a dude ranch for some.

For the others it is probably like the general American attitude about going into the army—most people do not want to go. But they go because for them it is an experience. But think it was not such a bad experience when it is over.

“76” Winter Olympics

Winter Olympics May Be In Boston

Greater Boston would serve as the host city of the 1976 Winter Olympics under a plan championed by the president of the Mount Snow Development Corporation in Vermont.

Walter Schoenkn/echt of East Hampton, Connecticut, has made a formal application for New England as the Winter Olympics site in 1976 in a letter to Clifford B. President of the US Olympic Committee.

Under the plan, the Olympics would actually be held throughout New England in major cities and snow country lodging facilities and placing the financial stress on Yankee fragility.

The plan was broken for the new regional concept as opposed to the tradition of an individual state being the host. The Olympic Committee said Colorado could separate the games by as much as 150 miles.

At that time, however, Colorado voters rejected further state support of the Olympic Games which was established in Denver.

An Olympic village was to have been built there at an estimated cost of 15 million dollars.

Schoenkn/echt said the Hartford Civic Center which would be completed by 1976 could host some of the events and so could the New Haven Coliseum and facilities in Providence. The upper tier states could accommodate the skating and Lake Placid, New York, the bobsled runs.

"We could use the greater Boston area as the host city as there are thousands of overnight accommodations within a 25-mile radius," Schoenkn/echt said.

He said his own Mount Snow would have to have the men's and women's slalom and the men's and women's giant slalom. Cannon Mountain in New Hampshire could be the site of the men's and women's downhill and Waterville Valley could also be considered.

He said "jumping and cross country to be located in Maine, possibly in or near the Rangeley Lakes area, and there is tremendous enthusiasm in the local group there."

The Running Sports Commentary

by Peter Lockettel

Recently, there have been many upset in the world of sports. For instance, Alabama, Ohio St., Michigan, and Nebraska have been upset in college football. In the pro ranks, San Francisco juggled Dallas with its first loss in its new stadium on Thanksgiving. Former Heisman Trophy winner Steve Spurrier was one of the San Francisco stars in the game, as he directed the 49er's offense to a couple of touchdowns.

Certainly, this year has been a real gratifying one for Spurrier and the 49'er's. Steve was quite a quarterback in college. He literally passed the ball to John Brodie at the helm of its offense. In his first few season Steve Spurrier did not see much action. He did the punting chores for San Francisco, and he occasionally got the quarterback call when SF was winning big or losing badly.

For six years, Steve Spurrier, All American and Heisman Trophy Winner, had been strictly a running back. At last, Spurrier's patience and perseverance were rewarded.

The 49'er's were off to a slow start this year. Quarterback John Brodie had led San Francisco to a mediocre 2-3 record and fourth place in the Western Conference of the NFC. San Francisco fans were getting uneasy, "had the 49'er's and John Brodie lost it all?" The New York Giants quelled all these negative outlooks by injuring Brodie in their game with the 49'er's in October.

Steve Spurrier took over at quarterback, and the rest is history. Steve had guided San Francisco to a 4-1 record until the Los Angeles game. He had moved the 49'er's into first place, and he had used the talent that won him the Heisman Trophy and All American Honors in college. Yes, fans, everyone in San Francisco was pleased and hopeful. The result could well be a Western Conference Title in the NFC and a trip to the Super Bowl.

A similar situation has recently occurred at Bryant. Currently, the Bryant Varsity Basketball is engaged in another basketball season. Many of the team's followers are quite excited about this season, the reason being, Coach Folliday has possibly found a center. Fans of last year's club, can recall games where the center position cost Bryant a basketball game. Hopefully, this year's squad will not experience the center problem of last season.

After Bryant's first two games of this season, much attention has been centering around Dave Sorrainne. Dave, a freshman out of North Providence, is Coach Folliday's man for the center position. In the team's first game of the season versus Quinncetuck, Dave had a quiet six points and seven rebounds. After the game, many Bryant supporters voiced their displeasure with Sorrainne's play. Their displeasure was somewhat quelled after the team's contest with Harrington.

Sorrainne connected for twenty points and eight rebounds, but the record still needs to be straightened out. The fact is, Dave Sorrainne is in the same boat as Steve Spurrier, except that Dave is getting his chance sooner.

Not many college athletes fresh out of high school, can be expected to perform up to their true potential in their first year of competition. It takes much patience and work on the part of the athlete and his support to teach him the fundamentals of the game. It is too much to expect a player his first year to contribute anything to the team. In other words, let's not be too hard on Dave Sorrainne at this stage of his career.

It is true that Dave has a lot of work ahead of him, but that's what Coach Folliday is here for. Let us all give Dave Sorrainne a chance. Maybe he is only a freshman with alot of college basketball ahead of him. I believe that Dave Sorrainne like Steve Spurrier, will emerge to lead Bryant to victory and maybe a trip to the finals of some post season college tournament.

A View Of Gloom

Since the beginning of the 1972 football season, the entire New England Patriot football organization has existed in complete havoc. From the beginning, General Manager Upton Bell and head coach John Mazur have disagreed with each other on many issues. After last season, Bell even disagreed with the Board of Directors who wanted to hire Mazur for the present season. Bell’s record for the past two years has been far from impressive. Through litigation, he has lost players of the quality of Fred Dwyer and Phil Olson. Not only has he lost both of these men, but he has also lost one of the first round draft choices used in trying to acquire one of the men.

Last year when times were good, Bell appeared to want to inherit the whole feeling of success for himself because he was the man to sign quarterback Jim Plunkett. Led by Plunkett, the Patriots were able to compile a 6-6 record which was four more wins than were registered in the dismal season of 1970 when the Patriots compiled a 2-12 record. This year after losing their “ace in the hole” Steve Kiner because of his illicit use of the drug “marijuana,” the Patriots found out that many weaknesses were present. After recording such victories over Atlanta who is a contender in the NFC Western Division and Washington who has clinched the NFC Eastern Division title, New England has tried for a victory in nine games—each time being unsuccessful.

Because of the continued losing streak, the Bell-Mazur controversy came to a head, as each man seemed to be blaming the other for his lack of effectiveness in doing his job.

Either because he knew he was going to be fired or else because he felt that he no longer wanted any part of a faltering organization, Mazur resigned. Immediately all pro football sportswriters declared Bell the winner of the fight. During the past week, the football world received a real jolt when it learned Upton Bell, the young aggressive General Manager had been fired. The Patriots now declare that they are looking for a new man, one who can fill the duties of coach and general manager at the same time. A man in the Don Shula line, New England is looking for a man who can become the “savior of the organization.” No matter who is hired, only a gradual change will occur.

With two games remaining the Patriots could escape the season with a 4 and 10 record which would be an average increase of only 3 victories a year since the acquisition of Jim Plunkett. For a team that has encountered one failure after another for the past ten years “that ain’t that bad.”

College Football

by Peter Lockatell

After more than three months of action, the college football regular season has drawn to a close. This season’s findings were some of the finest contests this college football has ever seen or staged. In the last few weeks, football fans have seen titanic battles between Alabama-LSU, Southern California-UCLA, Oklahoma-Nebraska, Notre Dame-Southern California, Michigan-State Ohio State and Alabama-Auburn. All of these games have had some bearing on the National Championship. In fact, the championship was not decided until the final gun of the Notre Dame-Southern California game.

This season also stumped the supposed college football experts. Before the season even started, the consensus was another national championship for Bob Devaney’s Nebraska Cornhuskers. As the season started to unfold, Nebraska was inimicable by upset by the UCLA Bruins. This upset marked the end of the nation’s longest major college winning streak, and in a sense, ended Nebraska’s dream for consecutive unbeaten and national championship seasons. Once Nebraska left the map, the Oklahoma Sooners, briefly stole the spotlight. Unfortunately, Chuck Fairbanks Sooners crew fell prey the Colorado Buffaloes.

The search to the Southern California’s supremacy was Alabama and LSU. Both teams were exceptional in and out of the conference, but Alabama beat the Tigers in their conference battle before Thanksgiving.

The Crimson Tide continued to roll towards another unbeaten season while Nebraska, LSU, Notre Dame, Michigan, Ohio State, and UCLA all fell out of the picture.

The last chance for another college team to overtake the Trojans was last Saturday. As we all know, the Trojans gave Auburn a 17-16 win in their own backyard! Then on the West Coast, Notre Dame fumbled away the national championship that night to Southern California.

To be perfectly honest, I did not believe Southern California had “the horses” to go all the way. I was definitely wrong. The Trojans have a mean running attack with the likes of Anthony Davis. Davis ran for an unprecedented six touchdowns against the Fighting Irish. On the other side of the latest score game has only gave up an average of ten points per ballgame. In any case, the Trojans are still not home free. Southern Cal has Ohio State as an opponent in the Rose Bowl.

Before I put this article or column in the mail for a while, here are my last set of fearless predictions on the upcoming post season bowl games. In the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans, the Oklahoma Sooners will keep the “kitties” of Penn State at bay. Greg Pruitt, starting from his Heisman Trophy class, could come up with a big day. In the cotton Bowl at Dallas, Alabama will literally run all over Texas. I can’t help but think that Texas can stop the likes of Terry Bradshaw and the Texas Tech backfield. In the Liberty Bowl at Nashville, Auburn will squeeze by a tough Colorado team.

I might have gone for Colorado, but Auburn comes off that great upset of Alabama. In the Orange Bowl at Miami, I have a soft spot for the Fighting Irish. If ND can eliminate fumbles, interceptions and other inconstitencies, they will handle the Cornhuskers. Here is a list of the major bowl games for your listening and viewing pleasure.

Table Tennis

Team Crushes RIJC

Last Sunday, with several fine performances, the Bryant Table Tennis Team defeated Rhode Island Junior College by a count of 17-8. Bryant now stands at a record of 3 and 2. Of the five starters, Howie Dornfield, Larry Ostower, Neil Goldman and Larry Selvin have each won three matches. The other starter, Howie Schreiber, had a 2-1 record, but will be lost to the team with a knee injury.

Each player suffered only one loss, which was to Ed Rady, the Rhode Island State Champion. Some other highlights of last week’s contest, was Neil Goldman’s come from behind victory. Neil was down three points to RJC’s number two man, but he rallied to win the match 22-20. Rich Gendion has been named to replace Schreiber. Rich will be Bryant, currently holding down third place will face Rhode Island College in next week’s contest.

Bryant Gets Nipped
By Napping Timer

Quinnipiac College defeated Bryant College Friday night in Hammond, Connecticut, by a score of 56-51. Ray Depelteau hit two jumps to cut it to 56-55, trailing 58-55 Rick Stanley threw in a short shot to trail 58-57 and with 5.40 left in the game Depelteau's two free throws put Bryant ahead 61-59, immediately followed by McCormack's shot we had out biggest lead 63-59. The one impressive factor about Quinnipiac was the fact they never gave up and tied the score at 67-67, after a tough second the score was tied and no where of Walton's players threw up a desperation jumper from the right corner which cleanly went through. Bryant immediately called timeout but the timeout let it run from 67-69. After a tough second Bryant had the ball at half court with 0.4 seconds to go, Sorafine took the ball out of bounds and threw it to Bahan who took a desperation shot that hit the rim and fell off, in my opinion he was fouled by 6'9" Dale Bruckhart of Quinnipiac but the referees said no and Bryant lost its first 69-67. Raymond Depelteau played a superb game with 27 points and 17 rebounds but has to get more scoring help from Bruce Stewart. Hank Gonzales played a tough game with 12 rebounds as did Ned Bohan with 7 assists. This was a tough game to open up as two of the east small college powers clashed in a fiercely played game. The junior varsity also lost 74-72 despite outstanding performances by Charles Armstrong (24 points), and John Feeley 17.

Indians Smack Barrington Hoopsters

Bryant College's Varsity Basketball team earned their record at 1-1 with the 100-71 trouncing of Barrington College. Led by 6'8" Dave want 100" prevailed throughout the Bryant gym. Barrington followed with 16 straight points over a 3-minute period. The crowd got very shaky as the seconds ticked off and 98 still appeared on the board. Richard "Stretch" Lense, a 6'6" senior from Great Neck, New York, put up a howitzer from the top of the key and Bryant had its 100th point; and Stretch had his 11th point-his highest total in his three-year Varsity career. Impressive performances were turned in by all members of the team. Sorafine had twenty points in a half as well as Depelteau, Armstrong. The Jayees also turned in a stellar performance downing the Barrington Rockies at 66-58. John Feeley, Bill Gouda, Paul Melvin, Bob Pentia, Paul Fitzgerald, Joe Schnelz, and Joe Cooney are the Bryant A.V.S. who have done an outstanding job in their first two games. Why not go to the J.V. game at 6:30 as well as the Varsity game at 8:00? These guys are the vets of the future. See you Saturday at 6:30!
