Sno' Queen Celebration Supplies Seasonal Spirit

by Steve Sellers

While the white stuff was melting outside, this year's Sno' Queen Celebration was a "cool" success. Bryant's Greeks and the Independents were treated to a weekend of activities including a mixer, the Campus Follies, and the culmination of it all—the Coronation Ball. At the ball, as might be expected, the Sno' Queen was crowned. This season's Princess of Precipitation was Stacy Schender of Alpha Phi Kappa.

News Wrap-Up
by Steve Sellers and Craig Perry

The Western States is suffering through the worst drought in recent history. Water rationing in California is a distinct possibility throughout most of the state and is already being practiced in many areas. Farmers are selling out, livestock are running out of feed, and irrigation systems are nearly dry. Cloud seeding is being attempted at strategic points in the Rockies, but has brought no relief. Consumers will certainly feel the effect of the drought in the cost of many products originating from the stricken areas.

A Nazi first-class gunnman, Gary Cowan, paralyzed the New Rochelle, New York area earlier this week as he returned to his former place of work seeking vengeance. Suspended earlier this month, Cowan shot and killed four fellow employees of the trucking company where he worked, as well as a 29-year-old policeman. After apologizing to the mayor of the city, he later turned his pistol to his head and shot himself. He also had a rifle which he had used to murder his victims.

Brycol Suffers Work-Study Funds Run Dry

by Steve Sellers

Unemployment seems to have caught up with Bryant Students as work-study funds are nowhere to be found for the use. The lack of funds is having a profound effect upon some students involved in the program.

The Financial Aid Office announced this week that due to circumstances beyond their control, employers of work-study students could no longer draw upon the finances which normally last a full year. Glenda Godfrey, Assistant Director of Financial Aid, told THE ARCHWAY that the supplementary funds which the College uses to pay the work-study students for their on- and off-campus jobs have been diverted to another section of the country. What funds the College did receive this year were much smaller than normal. The end result has been that as of February 18, 1977, all of the funds will have expired. Godfrey pointed out that the condition was temporary and that the work-study funds are allotted on a yearly basis. After June 30, 1977, more monies will be forthcoming. She noted, however, that some summer session students would also be affected by the lack of funds.

Continuing, Godfrey noted that in order for the financial aid students to keep working, they would have to work out an arrangement with their employer as to how they will be paid. In a hopeful tone, she stated that most work-study students would not be too handicapped by the situation, for many of them have already earned their allotments for the entire year.

A survey of various employers of work-study students generally affirmed Godfrey's contention, with one notable exception.

John Hannon, Director of Library Services, stated that he would be able to keep his eleven work-study employees. He said that his budget was such that he could absorb the loss of funds for paying the students.

Perhaps contrary to popular belief, SAGA stated that they do not employ any work-study students. The students they do employ work for a regular wage, as opposed to the work-study wage. Their experience goes back years when THE ARCHWAY contacted BRYCOL, the student service organization at the College. Executive Director Michael Hammer stated that the loss of work-study funds has hit BRYCOL the hardest, for they employ between 20 and 25 students in the program - more than any other employer. BRYCOL has not had to lay off any students as of yet, and Hammer hoped that the measures already taken will prevent the necessity of doing so.

Finally, he promised consistent service from BRYCOL, despite the "tight" situation.

Internships at Bryant

by Craig Perry

Ilan Palter arrived at Bryant this semester to begin a program designed for students who hope to pursue a career in law, government, or college teaching. The program involves experience in government in action. Applicants must be enrolled in one of the accredited colleges or universities in the State of Rhode Island. Once accepted into the intern program a few academic credits must be spent with your sponsor and a weekly seminar on Mondays must be attended.

For over five years Bryan has been involved in the internship program. The coordinator of the internship program is Dr. Elizabeth Palter. When Dr.

Next Week
Greek Pride

Dear Editor,

Last week’s ARCHWAY contained several personal ads aimed at pledging. I would like to take the opportunity to comment on the overall purpose of the personal ads and especially two that concerned the G.L.C.

The first personal concerns the correlation between SAGA and the G.L.C. During the past year the G.L.C. has worked to help the March of Dimes and the Multiple Sclerosis Society. We will soon be putting their efforts towards the Epilepsy Fund. Students and faculty have helped out various other organizations. I would also like to make this point: the majority of the parties on campus are Greek-run and all the judging and forms that many independents attend are all Greek-sponsored. If that gives anyone gas then their system is backed up.

The other personal, obviously written by someone very naïve is equally ridiculous. How can someone say that the only thing gained in pledging is pneumonia and a used wool hat? That person is not in a position to judge the MANY benefits of being Greek. In fact, he has never taken the time to find out what those benefits are. To explain them (the benefits) would take more space than this column can spare. I only have this to say: “Don’t knock my lifestyle until you’ve tried it.”

My final point is this: The purpose of the personal ads. I feel the personal ads should be used for purposes other than the present ones it is used for. If you want to humiliate someone, there are other means than the school newspaper, such as booster books. The ARCHWAY’s purpose is to put the students the goings on at Bryant and not the degrading the students. What you would like to see the personal ads removed or altered to serve a more meaningful purpose.

Time For A Change

Dear Editor,

When I entered Bryant, as I’m sure you have, I was filled with vicarious pleasures it had to offer. True, it is an architectural wonder, the Unstrung Hall looks like something from Star Trek and the ultra modern dorms and townhouses make living here a unique experience.

All I heard the first few weeks was that Bryant is a party school, kids don’t have to study. But now, a year later, I found that many people are studying French Revolution, that one can’t live on vicarious pleasures alone. I know that they are decided to look at Bryant as an overall unit and not just part of it.

First, I looked at communications. I decided that they are here for one primary purpose: being educated so that one day they can use their education here at Bryant. But I’m one that believes that our 54,000 a year student should be able to get us more than occupation. We may be cogs in a machine but you must remember a machine will not run without those cog wheels.

We are a Business School and as you know business is highly diversified and constantly on the change. The only way Bryant seems to get change is through tension. Tension is the way we get our new President, and it seems tension is the only way we are going to get anything else. It was just used again in last week’s Archway when I decided to go before the Student Advisory Committee questioning the administration on promises that are already six months late.

It also seems that past decisions become routine or rules for the future. This was exemplified in my Public Administration class when talking on this subject. The professor told us that the reason why we do not have classes between the hours of 1-3 in Providence, the city required that all cars be removed from the street by 3:30. Now that we are in Smithfield, we don’t have that problem but we also don’t have classes between these hours. As it remains it shows that the school has a resistance to change.

To this day, I am still amazed with the Student Center. Recently, students have been asking for some trivial things compared to the Student Center and have to wait months and years to get them, such as new carpeting for the Rotunda, which I expected to see last December. What is it? Also, what about office space for the students, plants and dividers for the Student Center—to name only a few. So my question is, Why was the Student Center “ok’ed” and built so fast? “I don’t feel it was done for the students sake but it was really done for the faculty and administration so they would not run and show them. We are a Business School and as you know business is highly diversified and constantly on the change. The only way Bryant seems to get change is through tension. Sexism in Secretarial Textbooks

Sexism in secretarial textbooks currently being used at Bryant College results in a distorted and unrealistic view of life. This view of women's lives is demeaning and could be detrimental to our future goals.

The first book I wish to discuss is Business Mathematics, published in 1976, written by George Kevorkian. This book is only used in the secretarial program, and that seems obvious. Without a doubt situations a secretary might encounter on the job. One main characteristic noted therein is that Henry Bell. Bell's Sport Center is used for every business rather than production. What exactly is going on in "Sexism in Secretarial Textbooks?"

Supplementary problems at the end of each chapter are found to be predominantly salesmen, executives, etc., with the use of the third person "he." In one specific problem dealing with how money is earned, a salesperson is asked how they receive a settlement. And Mary Dell sold her furniture to a lawyer with whom she is married! The author finds it necessary to inform us that she is a wife with two children, when it has no bearing on the problem itself.

The second book I wish to discuss is English for Modern Business, which is currently used in English Composition courses. Selected examples from this book have shown the male in the executive role and the female as a subordinate. Specific references can be made where "Mike Wallace" is chairman of the board, "Jim Baker" is president of the corporation and publisher to the legal system head. Females, on the other hand, are always shown as clerking types, and receptions taking direct orders from their male superior. "Mr. Smith asked me to bring him the coffee for tomorrow." Another part of this book which excludes females is the section dealing with inside addresses and personal titles. All the references made in this section are made toward the person. There is no mention of a woman.

These books should involve more women-oriented situations, where the women are not classified into stereotyped secretarial jobs. Considering that a large number of girls are enrolled in the secretarial program, they should not be discouraged by books, by seeking executive and administrative careers. Government ministers have been arrested in an alleged attempt to overthrow U.S. President Idi Amin. The men admitted to the plot and Amin's troops shouted "Kill them! Kill them!" in a ceremony announcing their arrest.

Four young brothers were killed in their mobile home in Indiana. Their mother, who was also shot, feigned death until the gunman left. After robbing the occupants and ransacking the home, they shot each victim in the back of the head.

Theyer magazine lost its hospitality this week when Larry Flynt was sentenced to prison. He was imprisoned for five months on a $35,000 bail after six days in a Cincinnati jail. He is appealing his case, his jury trying to save him from going to prison. The jury found him guilty of engaging in organized crime and "pandering obscenity."

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company reports that studies indicate that Presidents' wives have lower mortality rates than other women in the general U.S. population. The wives also have a lower mortality rate than the Presidents themselves - even taking assassinations into account.
This week the Inquiring Photographer asked various people what they thought about pledging.

"I think it's stupid, but funny." Craig Ovian

"...How do you think I got this way..." Ralph Hortenshiappe

TO SAGA
I ate your meal on Valentine's Day.
It made me stop and wonder,
I think I know your deadly scheme,
To put us six feet under.

TO SAGA
I like to soar,
I like to fly,
I eat your food,
I'd like to die.

TO SAGA
Everyday,
You have much waste,
That shows you how,
Your food does taste.

TO SAGA
We eat our meals,
Through thin and thick,
But every one,
Still makes us sick.

Late last week, Spring Fever hit the campus as the temperatures soared past the freezing point up to the unofficial campus high of 63 on Friday. This long awaited thaw brought visions of the approaching Spring to everyone's mind.

Tuesday's snow, which arrived eight hours later than predicted last week, brought us back to the realities of Winter. When it does become warm again, we won't be able to enjoy it right away because of the melting snow and resulting mud.

Experts have predicted that there is a chance of flash flooding if the warm temperatures are combined with a steady, heavy rainfall. Barring this combination, a natural melting of the snow should cause no problems. However, pit students should keep a watch, just in case. Meanwhile, the severe drought in California continues with no relief in sight.

Extended Outlook For Feb. 18-24

Three day weekend: Sunny skies; Tuesday: Partly cloudy; Wednesday: Cloudy, chance of a few snow flurries. Thursday: Sunny. Daytime temperatures should range between 35 and 45 for the entire week. As for the remainder of the month, no major storms are in sight, but there is a chance of a few inches of snow. Temperatures should be near or a bit below normal.

Average length of days for week: 10 hours, 57 minutes, first quarter moon, Feb. 22.

On Monday, Feb. 28, Venus will reach its greatest brilliancy (-4.3), making it the brightest "star" in the night sky. It can be seen as the star nearest to the horizon which sets three hours after sunset.

The announcement on the part of the Federal Government of a cut in taxes often rests favorably upon the American conscience. After all, isn't an element of our national heritage to repel against even the mention of the words "tax" and "increase"? Our national "Boston Tea-Party" and the slogan "no taxes without representation" have left an indelible mark upon the American morality. Many people seem satisfied at the reporting of a tax cut and eagerly await their extra spending money. But there are a few of us who question such a move and ask, when is a tax cut not a tax cut?

The answer to this question is twofold: 1. When the so-called tax cut only offsets a rise in tax rates produced by inflation; or 2. When the so-called tax cut is accompanied by a larger rise in government spending than in prices.

To ascertain the connection between inflation and taxes suppose a tax rise by 10 percent and your income also rises by 10 percent to match. Your real way of living has not increased as the government has increased its tax, and it appears that you are breaking even. But your personal exemption of $750, as well as other fixed dollar items, will amount to a smaller fraction of your income, and your income will be pushed into higher dollar brackets taxed at higher rates.

Building a deeper layer of deception in the talk of a tax cut at a time when government spending is scheduled to increase more rapidly than prices. Suppose the government spends $400 billion and raises $350 billion in funds labeled taxes. Where does the remaining $50 billion come from?

The government has means of collecting the difference other than through taxes. If the government finances its deficit by creating money (simply printing more dollars) this will impose a hidden tax of higher inflation. If it finances the deficit by borrowing (Note: this is done by the federal government selling bonds to the public, in order to induce the public to purchase these bonds the federal government raises the interest rates on them. This increase in interest rates creates a situation known as "tight-money" in which investors are discouraged from borrowing expensive funds, the government gets the funds that would otherwise be available for building houses or factories or machinery.

Now that the fallacy of a tax cut has been exposed in two directions I wish to make a social comment on another subterfuge of a tax cut.

Taxes can often be classified into two categories regarding their ultimate effect upon the American taxpayer. There are the so-called progressive taxes such as the Federal and State Income Taxes in which a person pays a greater percent the higher his income goes. This results in some people even receiving money from the government to bring their income up to a minimum standard all the way to the very rich who could possibly face tax rates of 50 percent. A regressive tax is one that has an opposite effect. The richer a person is the smaller the effect on one's income. A good example is that of a sales tax in which all consumers face the same percentage but since the poor pay a greater percent of all their income and the richer a person becomes the greater the ability to save, it is the poor who subject more of their income to these taxes.

Returning to a tax in federal taxes. Whenever a progressive tax is cut one is doing away with a sound and rational means of paying for government goods and services. Unfortunately, a cut in these taxes often calls for a more rigid reliance upon regressive taxes to fill the void and lead to further inequalities in a system already bloated with poverty and starvation amidst a land of affluence.

The meeting of February 9 was called to order by Pete Kistenmacher at 3:30 in Room 342. The minutes from this meeting of January 26 were passed unanimously.

John Oakes said that the co-chairmen have been given out and if anyone has any question, contact him. He also reminded the Senators to select their choice for the Outstanding Senator of the Year. Tim Tracy said he had taken on Carolyn Davis as his assistant treasurer. Howie Sigal announced the Senate Banquet is to be held on March 5 at the Cock'n Kettle in Uxbridge, MA. Pete Kistenmacher said that the SPB is in the process of arranging the calendar for this semester and next week he will have the list of dates and their costs.

Tickets will be available for opening day when Red Sox play Cleveland. The GLC will probably pay for the buses, and the ticket prices will be $3.50 or $4.00. A motion was made to allocate money to the Tip Committee. It was passed unanimously. Ann Marie Smith brought something to the Senate received by Student Affairs concerning a radiation for the Leukemia Society. It was decided not to sponsor a mixer for this charity. Election for the new Student Council will be held on Monday, February 28, in the Rotunda. Howie Rapoport suggested having a Las Vegas Night in the Student Center to either raise money for a charity or to start a Student Scholarship Fund. His idea was looked into further. Kathie Foley announced she is going ahead with Faculty Evaluations and she would like some help in doing them. It was decided that the Executive Council will look over the Constitution and bring back any major changes to the Senate. The meeting was adjourned at 4:00.

Ever take a good, close look at a career in life insurance?

Maybe, like a lot of people, you've discussed the thought of a career in life insurance without a thorough investigation. We'd like you to take a good look at it; you may be surprised at what you see.

We think you'll see a career with unlimited potential for high income and personal satisfaction. A career that combines unusual independence with a very real opportunity to be of service to others. If this sounds good to you, we'd like to tell you about our unique Sales and Sales Management Training Program and the opportunities it can offer young men and women. And we'll be frank about the pitfalls, too.

Although we've only known each other a short while, it has been long enough for me to know that you are someone with whom I could spend a lifetime with.

Love is being completely at ease with one another. Able to express one's feelings without fear or apprehension. It consists of trust; that love is true. It is loyalty; a desire to be with no other. It is the ability to admit one's mistakes knowing that it will not hamper their relationship. Love is understanding and forgiving another's wrong doings and overlooking their faults - Loving them nevertheless.

Aloha, readers and weepers. It seems that everybody is after poor, little Lucky. I can't figure out why! For example, here's a note our ever-smiling editor left me the other day:

MEMO
To: Ian Pierre
From: P. Denres

Ian, let's use a little discretion with word choice when writing your articles. Tact might be in order. Last week's column had the Greeks in a riled state with many personally asking for you. Let's not get out of hand, okay?

Thanks, Paul

So the Greeks are after my person. YO HO! That's not the half of it. How about this baby I received in the mail:

Dear Lucky,

After reading your answer in last week's ARCHWAY to a question referring to Security, I feel you don't really know what Security's function is. When in doubt, always remember these two simple rules:
1. A Bryant Security officer is never wrong.
2. If Bryant Security is wrong, refer to rule number 1.

Yours truly,
Bryant's Finest

P.S. Keep your eye on your car, Pierre. It may be next.

Threats on my body and threats on my ear. I should have pledged. OOPS! Alright, now for this week's feature story. It seems that at every meal the only thing there is to eat is hamburger. Hamburgers with cheese. Hamburgers without cheese. Quarter pounders and SAGA's very own "Half-oncer." Nothing but hamburgers! So this week as a special, I bring to you Swiner's Corner.

"Good evening. Tonight on Swiner's Corner we will be discussing that question that is on the minds of every person nationwide. The question being, that's right. What is Beef Ragout? Tonight's show has been brought to you by SAGA, where sick people have more to get sick from.

Our panel of experts this week include Professor Horton Beschoppleer, Rear Admiral Neprhon Glitz and the Editor of RAUNCH magazine, Ms. Agatha Balflair. So let's get started with Professor Horton Beschoppleer. Professor, what is Beef Ragout?"

"Beef Ragout is very hard to describe since it is a non-existing concept."

"Could you perhaps give us a little more detail?"

"Well, some argue that Beef Ragout is an economic interpretation of Pavlov's Dog Salivation Theory, but in my opinion, it is more than that."

"Therefore, Professor, you feel Beef Ragout is..." (long pause)

"Sickening! No, no that's not the word. It...it's more than sickening...it's...it's the greatest form of self-abuse since pledging was instituted."

"Thank you, Professor Horton Beschoppleer. Ahh...Rear Admiral Glitz, have you ever encountered anything like Beef Ragout in all your years in the service?"

"Lucky, my boy, I'll tell you, only once have I seen the likes of Beef Ragout. During the sixties when I was working the Biological Warfare section, the boys down in the lab came up with this stuff that had the same effects as two helpings of Beef Ragout. It would attack the lower intestine of those tested and render them helpless for several hours."

"That's very interesting. I've always wondered, where do you test out these new weapons?"

"This particular weapon we tested at a small college somewhere in Northern Rhode Island."

"Oh, that explains a lot of things. Thank you, Admiral Glitz, for your time. And now for our last guest of the evening, Ms. Agatha Balflair. Ms. Balflair, could you tell us your experiences with Beef Ragout?"

"Off the record, Lucky, Beef Ragout is the only thing that has ever grossed out RAUNCH magazine. We have some real hard-core stuff crossing our pages, but Beef Ragout has got to be the worst. Even our prettiest got it.

"That's really something, Ms. Balflair; and we'd love to hear more, but we've got to get moving on. I'd like to thank all my guests and invite all of you to tune in next week when our topic will be "Vegetable Pie: The New Ballisticogenic."

And now it's that time we've all been waiting for. No, it's not the end of the article; it's time to see what else we have in our magazine bag. Here's one from a 32-year old student who was just released from debtor's prison last semester. Read on!

Dear Lucky,

Now that the book rush is over, I am forced to read your column. Don't get me wrong. Lucky, I enjoy the cultural value of your exploits, it's just that I'd also like to read the Providence Journal or another daily paper. My problem is simple...I'm out of money. Books were so expensive that I had to sell my roommate in order to take Law I.

Being an Indian (i.e. Bryant Indian), I realize that we have been ripped off ever since Manhattan Island was bought for $24. Now I can't buy books for one course without spending $24. Well, I know that I'll weather the storm (although others won't make it through the year) even if I don't have a social life. Right now I can't afford a ticket to the Harry Chapin Concert, and the only thing I look forward to is the "Book Buy Back" in May. At least then I'll be able to get toll money for the $150 worth of books that I bought in January. Continue with your column, Lucky, because it's the only reading material besides the library that I can get free.

Signed,
Johny Cashless

Dear Johnny,

You are not alone in your plight. I bet you didn't know that all those nice ladies working in the dining hall are really mothers of students that couldn't afford books. So you see, you got lucky and only lost your roommate. But you are right in saying that prices are too high. The major reason that so many courses weren't offered this semester was because the teachers couldn't afford the books either. I have found through experience that it is cheaper to photocopy a 400 page book rather than to go out and buy it. If you think the prices of books are bad, have you bought any toothpaste lately?

See what I mean, Lucky! Business Affairs just won't rhyme with "hot." Could you help me?

Dear Sir,

I wouldn't touch that poem with a ten-foot pole.

LUCY

And now for a real weird letter I found in my secret box: YO HO!

Dear Mr. Lucky, Sir:

Hey there. I'm writing you this here letter about letting you use my car on your test course. My car is a Ford, and I have heard around that you have a high speed bump on your campus. I really freak out on the little testing section right at the bump. That mechanical man is pretty realistic, too. I like the way he waves on the next car to be tested.

Then there is the brake test. I like this because you get to park your car on that white ramp and leave it for a few hours to see if the brakes hold. The way you make that ramp is pretty good, too. Who would ever think of leaving snow in unneeded parking spaces?

The final thing I like about the campus is the white van which takes you from and to your car. I notice that it is especially busy on rainy days and that only certain test drivers are given the right to get taken to and from their cars. All I can say is that they must pay the boss a few bucks. I noticed, though, that these same people have a special garage on the campus to have their auto's repaired. I have to repave mine at home. I guess that comes when you pay the boss man a few bucks again.

So what I want, ole' Lucky, is a rate card of all these special services on the campus testing grounds.

Signed,
U. Auntsit

Before I explain the rates to you, let me expand a little more on just what you have been seeing. That white van is not a taxi. It's really a S.W.A.T van disguised as a Good Humor truck. They cruise the parking lot looking for members of the S.I.A., Communists and enemy warships.

That thing you drive over is not a speed bump, but rather a tank trap designed to stop any Townies that decide to invade the campus.

As for the rates to use the other "riders" in Bryant World, they vary, depending on whether you want to live here or just want to spend the day.

LUCY

Well, sports fans, I think it's time to wrap up this week's garbage before we get too fouled on the play.

There is no paper next week, but we'll be back in a couple of weeks with some great updates and a secret report. YO HO! Till then, just keep this proverb in mind while walking around the campus: "You can lead a horse to water, but wet horses sure do drink."

Introducing: A New Game of Pocket Billiards - "Equal Offense"

Each player shoots ten innings of twenty balls each. Balls made on break are spotted. Player takes cue ball in hand behind the string and attempts to run twenty balls. If a player misses before twenty, he is credited with his count at that point and then moves into inning two to begin anew. There are no safeties. A cue ball foul or scratch, of course, means that the player is finished for that inning. All shots will be called. If any other ball falls in when the called shot is properly executed, player will be credited with two points, etc. It is my belief and hope that this new game will bring more enjoyment of Pocket Billiards to all of you.

Hockey Indians Win In Fight Shortened Game

In one of the roughest games in College Hockey, the 141 Bryant Indians surged to a 6-2 win over the New Haven Chargers. The game was so violent that play had to be stopped with more than two minutes remaining.

Bryant scored early in the game as Mike Florio rammed one in at the 2:42 mark, assisted by Matt Dwyer. Less than two minutes later, however, New Haven retaliated with a goal to tie the score at 1-1. Bill Trinque put the Indians up on top six minutes later, though on a nice goal with help from John Goyderick and Dave Walenty. Walenty opened up period number two with a goal off of a play that in that period, Bill Trinque and Bob McCabe assisted on that. Six points were awarded in that period to go with the eight called in period number one.

The third period marked the beginning of the end as the Indians had and sticks began swinging. Mike Florio and Matt Dwyer scored early for the Indians to put the game out of reach, but not the tempers. 15 penalties were handed out in the final 20 minutes, including four game disqualifications. DQ's went to Johnny Grimm and Mark Jolly of the Indians and to Matt Droyf and Leroy Salvatore of New Haven. The game got out of control that the referees had to call the game with 2:17 remaining.

Intramural B-Ball Update

Bryant College Intramural basketball continued into its second week of action as last year's playoff players came together for their seasons with victories. Winning their first games were the X-L-Dinkers, Phi Sig Nu A and Phi Ep A. The Dinkers defeated Delta Sig A 48-17. Disc Coach Jim Kaplan outwitted opposing coach Jeff Kussen as the Dinkers came out of a man to man defense that completely stifled Delta Sig's offense. The Dinkers were led by Gil Jeffery's 16 points and Magic Gardner's 12 points.

Phi Sig Nu pulled out a squeaker over a tough Invalid team by a score of 27-21. The highlight was Matt Perry's tough zone defenses by both teams. Phi Sig's balanced attack was led by Karl Banner's 8 points. The Invalids were sparked by Mark Redi who pumped in 13 points. There are two tough teams, both of whom are expected to be seen in this playoffs.

The Swellers, last year's semi-finalists, are off to a fine 2-0 start. They defeated Solid State Corp. Tuesday night to keep their winning tradition intact. They have been led by forward Tony Germano and center Bob Ellsworth. The Swellers are a very deep team, with a rushing attack led by the Lea Gehrig of Bryant Intramurals, Mickey Perlow. Mickey is known for his backwards shot and his ability to contribute to Newport Jail.

In other action, the Ballstars defeated KT A 47-32. In this game, Pete Larkin sparked the Stars as he came off the bench to score a quick 8 points to put the game out of reach. The scoring was kept low for the Ballstars.

Legder Photo

The Indians are now 13-12 for the year and have won 7 out of their last 10 games. The Indians travel to Lowell Mass., tomorrow night to play Lowell Univ. followed by a Monday night game against Assumption College. The Indians return home Wednesday night to play the University of Conn. and end up the season next Saturday against Bridgewater State.
