Ornament making will benefit local children in need

Submitted by The Office of Student Activities

Imagine the wide, glowing eyes of a young child as they open a gift during the holiday season. A simple ornament can bring joy and hope. This year, Bryant College is making a difference in the life of a young child on Wednesday, December 4th by coming together to make a holiday ornament in the Rotunda between 10am and 4pm. For each handmade ornament that Bryant College makes for the holiday tree in Providence, Hasbro will donate a toy to a needy child.

Last year's Hasbro ornament making was a huge success. Let's make this year seven better.

Drum scandal at URI fraternity

A University of Rhode Island sophomore was ordered held without bail following his arrest on charges he sold drugs out of his room in the Sigma Chi fraternity house.

Michael Tancorra, 20, of Glen Rock, N.J., turned himself in to South Kingstown police Monday. Authorities earlier had found a half-ounce of cocaine, $800 in cash and a small amount of marijuana in his room, Detective Sgt. David Kenneally said.

Police earlier received a tip that drugs were being sold from a second-story bedroom. As the watched Friday, an alarm sounded, the fire escape entered the bedroom and came out soon after.

Police approached the man and found approximately three grams of cocaine on him, Kenneally said. James Lavan, 18, of Aberdeen, N.J., was charged with one count of cocaine possession.

After Lavan's arrest, police obtained a search warrant for Tancorra's bedroom. Tancorra was not there at the time of the search, but he called soon after, got an attorney, then turned himself in, Kenneally said.

Tancorra was arrested in District Court on one count of possessing cocaine with intent to deliver, delivering cocaine and marijuana possession.

He also was cited for violating the conditions of bail imposed after his arrest on Feb. 15 on a charge of assaulting someone while wearing brass knuckles. That case is pending.

He was jailed pending a bail hearing Friday.

Cpt. Granfield bids farewell

Danielle Porter
Editor-in-Chief

Captain Christopher Granfield of Bryant's ROTC will soon be concluding his duties here and migrating to Fort Drum, NY for his next assignment.

Born and raised in Melrose, MA, Granfield began his career in ROTC while attending Suffolk University in the late eighties. Upon graduating from Suffolk University in 1989 with a bachelor's degree in Business Management and a minor in English Literature, he was commissioned as a Regular Army Infantry officer and went to the Infantry Officer Basic Course at Fort Banning, GA, continuing a generation-old family tradition. He was only the second officer in his family, as attested by Granfield: "My next oldest brother beat me out." Upon commissioning, Granfield was assigned to duty overseas. He lived in Malmstrom, Germany for three years and worked in Clerical/Security jobs for the Army; training with the German, French, British, Italian, Dutch, Canadian, and Spanish armies.

Granfield returned to the US in 1993, truly understanding that the United States was THE best place on the face of the earth, and next attended advanced military schooling at Fort Banning, GA, and Fort Sill, OK, after which he worked at Fort Drum, GA, as the Executive Officer of the US Army Infantry School and as Aide-de-Camp to Major General John W. Hendrix. Granfield's next assignment was teaching ROTC at Providence College and Bryant College; he arrived on campus on November 14, 1994.

Granfield acknowledges, "I was impressed with the Bryant Community from Day One!" Granfield further comments:

"In my last two years here at Bryant, I have met many dedicated professionals, both faculty and staff administration. It has been the hard work, efforts and support of these individuals (I would love to mention you all by name but the list goes on and on) that have made my job here at Bryant less difficult and more enjoyable! I thank you all and value your friendship and counsel. The most enjoyable part of my two years here at Bryant has been my interaction with the students, and you know who you are! It has been my pleasure to teach each of you something about the US Army and the military as a whole. One of the ROTC students who walks among you now might very well be a future Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, afterall, General (Retired) Colin Powell got his start in ROTC in New York City. When both my parents passed away during the summer of 1995, I greatly appreciated the sympathy and condolences of the Bryant community. Thank you. It was my pleasure to provide "guidance," "shoulder to cry on," or a hot cup of coffee, and though I am leaving, SPC Stobb is a fully capable substitute.

"While teaching ROTC, Granfield attended graduate school at Providence College's MBA program, with a concentration in Marketing. In addition, he maintained his hobbies of restoring antique cars and furniture, backpacking, mountain biking, skiing, and reading. Regarding his fetish for cars, Granfield remarks, "The two loves of my life are a 1965 Mustang convertible and a 1967 Chevelle Super Sport."

Granfield's next assignment is in a troop unit back in the "main stream" Army, where he will be assigned to the 10th Mountain Division (Light Infantry) at Fort Drum, NY, approximately one hour north of Syracuse.

In parting, Granfield states, "I do not know how much time I will be spending in NY and how much time I will be spending deployed overseas, but the door in front of my house says "Welcome" (you just have to bring your own skin). Nevertheless, SFC Stobb will have my address, and I will appreciate hearing from some of you and seeing how your futures unfold.

"I leave you with one parting thought: Go Army...Beat Navy!"

Granfield's scheduled date of departure is Wednesday, December 11. He promises to be back for the 1997 commissioning, but please stop by room 261 in the Unistructure to bid him a fond farewell.

Submissions for the final issue of The Archway will be taken Monday November 25 from 2p.m. to 4p.m. in our office.

The Panhellenic Council sponsored a "Jump-a-thon" Wednesday in the Rotunda.

Students take their chance in Beta Theta Pi's sixth annual Putt-A-Thon.
Vroom

Driving: is it an adventure or a chore? Judging by all those frown outs there on the faces of your average licensed drivers (the unlicensed drivers are smiling), it sure isn't all that much fun, which is unfortunate considering that all the alternatives to driving are even less enjoyable.

Having a full two hours with nothing to do, I jumped for joy and hopped into the driver’s seat, Destination: Federal Hill (heck, I’d never been there before). What fun! I suppose I should have consulted the road map before even getting into the car. Nevertheless, the more I drove, the more grouchily and hostilie I became. When Nelly, my blood pressure is usually very low, what was happening here?

I have since realized that turn signals—rather, the misuse of them—are indeed a bit of a pet peeve of mine. I’ve come to rely on them (go figure). It would ultimately be a really great thing if a big neon sign would flash on the hood of your car whenever the habitual driver proceeding yourself did not use this handy mechanism, wouldn’t you say? And here emerges that hostility I was talking about.

However, if you were to question one’s intelligence (actually, it’s more of a sense of tactility) in such a case as afore mentioned, would you indeed escape the situation without a scratch? Take, for instance, the RI case of Mr. Emery (I forget his first name). While leaving a local amusement park, a car cut Emery, enraged him enough to follow the car (or what he thought to be the car) of the person who cut him off. Eventually the car pulled off to the side of the road (driver wanted to lose this creep on his tail), and, of course, Emery pulled over as well, with the end result being Emery murdering the driver. Ah, what say? Emery is now either beneath the Janestown bridge or guiltlessly frolicking in the shadows (hiding from the RI state police and/or FBI).

Another, instance of the small but unbridled state of anger enraputured in RI (elsewhere too, I suppose); about a year ago, while riding in a car with a friend, they were using hand signals to notify other drivers of their various turns (left rear light was out). Everything was going okay (lot of laughs from drivers-by; heh heh, yeah, we’re dorks) until someone did not see his arm sticking out the window. So he makes his turn and, in doing so, hears yelps and holiers from behind him. Needless to say, this really mad driver followed us for nearly half an hour until we eventually pulled over and apologized to no end. Scary stuff.

With that, I wish you all a nice Thanksgiving break. Oh yeah, what’s my point? Umm, be careful when driving out there; drivers are less and less forgiving. Leisure driving simply isn’t allowed anymore, so be serious all the time. No, actually, try to remember that driving is and/or can be fun. Smile when driving because of all the fun you are having. Drive safely.

Explosion levels house in Warwick

Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press Writer

James Sherman was taking leaves in his back yard when the car-ripping explosion hit. He turned around to see a cloud of smoke above a neighbor’s house. He didn’t wait to see it come down.

“He was screaming, “Get out, get out!” said Sherman’s wife, Helen, recalling the scene after a natural gas explosion leveled their neighbor’s home and sent shards of glass, plywood and roofing raining through their Warwick Neck neighborhood Monday.

With a cloud of dust in the air, the couple ran down the road, away from the blast and their home of 34 years, not pausing long enough to get in their car.

“I went through the second World War,” James Sherman said. “I’d bombs go off near us. It was nothing like this.”

The explosion reduced 391 Somerset Grove Ave., from a two-story house to a huge pile of rubble, ripped paint from the houses on either side and blew out the windows of a half dozen nearby homes.

Neatly manicured lawns were covered with glass, boards and twisted window and door frames. A power line was draped with tarpaper.

The 12:45 p.m. blast occurred after a construction crew disrupted a gas line, police and Providence Gas Co. officials said. A police officer working a detail near the construction site was slightly hurt.

There were no other injuries, though a dog that belonged to the residents of the destroyed home—Jason and David Hirta and their two children—was presumed to have been killed.

A crew from D’Ambra Construction of Warwick contracted by the city for a sewer project disrupted the line that feeds the house from a large underground gas main. A spark from inside the house then may have ignited the leaking gas. Providence Gas spokeswoman Barbara Hamilton Tranzor said.

“We don’t know how it came about,” she said. “There are pieces of pipe to look at, meters to look at.”

Michael D’Ambra, president and owner of the company, said a crew was excavating the street when a tooth on a bucket turned a gas line. It stretched but did not break, he said.

Frederick Mason, a Providence Gas spokesman, said a company representative had told the crew the approximate location of the line before they began digging. D’Ambra said the gas line did not fault Providence Gas, but he didn’t know for certain. The company does not fault Providence Gas.

“We do believe that D’Ambra Construction is at fault, but we’re not blaming the gas company,” he said. “It’s just an unfortunate accident and we’ll look at the bottom of it. We’re lucky no one was hurt and we’ve offered the (Hortas’) food, clothing, shelter—we told them we would do anything at all to help them.”

Part of the Hortas’ roof landed in the driveway of the house next door, where Margaret Dlugozima has lived for nine months.

“We knew we had to get out of the house,” said Dlugozima, whose windows shattered and walls cracked. “We pretty much grabbed our things and ran.”

The neighborhood was evacuated immediately after the explosion. All residents of the most severely damaged houses were allowed back later in the afternoon.

No fire occurred, which was fortunate because firefighters may have had a hard time battling a major blaze. Warwick was under a state of emergency due to a water main break Sunday in neighboring Cranston that cut off water to 80 percent of the city.

The Hortas family returned to what was left of their home and gingerly picked through the debris. A baby bassinet, curtains, furniture cushions, drawer dressers, clothing and other personal belongings lay strewn among splintered wood and pink insulation.

The Hortas did not speak to reporters. Janet Horta’s brother, Donald Livingston, said his parents had lived in the home several months while his father recovered from a stroke. They left two weeks ago, he said.

A similar explosion occurred during sewer construction in Warwick in January 1993. It, too, razed one home and damaged others. D’Ambra was the contractor on that project as well, John Pagliarini, spokesman for Mayor Lincoln Chafee.

Monday’s explosion occurred in a residential section known as Warwick Neck, located in the southeastern part of the city, near the former Rocky Point Amusement Park.
Water main break floods Cranston

Rachel Zoll
Associated Press Writer

A broken water main flooded city streets Sunday, submerging cars to their windows and forcing more than 100 people from their homes. Rescuers used rafts to evacuate elderly residents.

Authorities did not know what caused the 5 1/2-foot main to break shortly before noon, blowing a 15-foot hole in a city street. Muddy water gushed past homes and businesses for about a mile in this city of 39,000 before the main was shut off at 4 p.m. No injuries were reported.

"We were driving down the road and I had to take my glasses off," said Sonya Corbin, "I am hallucinating?" said Lori Antonelli, who turned her car around and went home. "It looked like the city was flooded."

The car driven by Jeff Roleck and his 2 1/2-year-old son was swamped.

"I tried to back up the car but it was flowing so fast I couldn't do it," said Roleck, who eventually left the car half-submerged. "It was unbelievable."

Deputy Fire Chief Robert Warren said the ruptured main caused a gas leak under a city street. The gas was shut off.

About 100 people sought temporary housing after leaving their flooded apartment building. Rescuers used rafts to evacuate 30 elderly residents from their assisted living home.

"I was frightened because I can't swim," said resident Mary Recchia, 87. "I was trying to keep from crying and getting hysterical."

Home administrator Brian McKaig said everything inside was soaked.

"All of our work is ruined," he said. "Everything these people brought with them, their special furniture, their personal belongings, is ruined."

Three teens charged with trying to set fire to boy on bus

The Associated Press

Three Chariho Regional Middle School students have been charged with trying to set fire to a 10-year-old boy on a school bus.

School officials already had suspended the three teens for 10 days and referred the case to police, who charged them on Wednesday.

The incident occurred November 4. The fifth-grade victim told police he was sitting in the back of the bus when a 16-year-old girl attacked a pin with a lighter and attacked him.

An eighth-grade boy then held the child down while another eighth-grade boy attempted to ignite the 10-year-old's pant leg.

The motive for the assault was unclear. The child's mother has said the older students seemed angry that her son was sitting in their normal seats.

The 14-year-old boy who attempted to set the younger boy's pants on fire faces a felony count of assault with a dangerous weapon and a fifth-degree arson charge. The other teens are charged with misdemeanor assault counts.

All three are in their parents' custody.

Jumping bean prices on the horizon?

Thanks to Glen Camp for forwarding e-mail from the EnviroNews service on today's subject.

Seems that environmentalists in Europe are getting windy over a recent development in the US biotechnology industry; genetically engineered soybeans. According to a November 13 story by Susan Lulka, Greenpeace and Global 2000 occupied the Australian Health Minister’s office for refusing to ban imports of US soybeans, and multi-national activists blocked the passage of the Zemla Zamojska, a Polish-registered cargo ship full of soybeans, into Belgium.

Soybean oil is useful in many more products than Springfield’s Summer. Back in 1998, back before the round-up resistant soybeans were commercial available to farmers, good for consumers, right?

Does the resistance gene pose a health threat to consumers or the risk of an environmental disaster? US companies FDA, (Food and Drug Agency) and USDA (Department of Agriculture) looked at Monsanto’s scientific data, collected over a five year period, and approved the beans for unlabelled commercial sale.

A naive by-stander might wonder why enviromentalists would foment over a technology that reduces chemical inputs into the food chain and thereby pollution from our drinking water supplies. Seasoned industry watchers like Hemp know that anti-biotechnology activists, “countermarketers” to borrow a term from Joe Born’s, dramatically oppose all biotechnology and all agricultural inputs to get media attention.

For Monsanto… adverse, caution, stick to scientific data, promote educational programs, and have a big legal staff to defend lawsuits. For the activists… screen “pollution,” “exploitation,” “health risks,” and “profits,” and the media will line up to protest free air time. No wonder Hemp is out on the Greenpeace boast; he’s having all the fun.

What do you do when you are constantly exposed to the bad vibes of a so-called bad person? Do you walk up to this nefarious being and say, “I hate you” and plot some minor accident that will be the end of this individual? But what could you do? Even though it did seem that he was, he was not exactly a wild and crazy guy. He really wanted his only hope now was to go into a cocoon. He must undergo another change; a metamorphosis. He must be reborn. It is a process that he must go through, with the help of the god. He must not be hurt, drink, go to the bathroom, or do anything that would break his concentration. He fought himself in a bitter battle for control; two personalities fighting for dominance over a single soul. But he couldn’t win, for everything that he ever wanted was on the line. He must be victorious here or everything would be lost forever.

And then, the fifth day, he got up, gathered together the little money he had made in the past months, looked at his little room in disguise, opened the front door, and began his struggle for a dream.

Going home

As Thanksgiving approaches, many students are looking forward to seeing their family and friends, and eating home-cooked meals. Of course, at the same time, other students are absolutely dreading having to go home, leaving their new-found friends and liberties. For first-year students, this may be the first time they’ve been home since September, and they may not know how to expect. Here are a few ways to make this holiday a positive time for all.

First, don’t spring everything on your parents at once. For example, if you’ve dyed your hair a new and interesting color, like blue, you may wish to wear a hat. The first day or two you’re home, just tell your parents you’re having an extremely bad hair day. Alternatively, you may wish to cut off some of your hair before going home, though, if you always had long hair, this may be a bad giveaway that something is up.

Second, remember that your parents probably had a reasonably quiet house long before you. Don’t expect people to listen to loud televisions or music. Also in the morning—they’re not likely to understand.

Third, no matter how broad-minded your family and especially your parents may be, they’re still going to be expecting a high school senior to come home. They will not be expecting someone with a lot more independence and autonomy to come home making his or her own decisions. So, to keep peace in the house, tell your family members where you’re going before you go out and the approximate time you’ll be back. While I know it may seem odd to do that after being away for just a few months, it will keep peace in the family, and isn’t that worth something?

Fourth, make a point of carving out some special time for just you and your family. This doesn’t mean you shouldn’t spend time with friends from high school or previous colleges, but just set aside some time so your family feels less like they’re houseguests.

Fifth, anticipate the experience you’ve had at Bryant. Now, if you happen to have done something really foolish—getting drunk on the day before an exam, for example—you may wish to pick and choose carefully what you say. (If you have gotten drunk on the day before an exam, I hope you’ve learned that you really need to be sobering up!) But, for the most part, talking about what you’ve been doing, who you’ve met, and how you’ve grown this semester is important to your family. They want to know that you will be a different and better person as a result of attending Bryant, and only you can share that with them.

Let’s talk Negotiation & Conflict Resolution

by Lorriane Harrison

Communication is the key to successful relationships. Conflicts are a fact of life. Everyone perceives situations differently. Separate people from the problem. Agreed that it is okay to disagree. LISTEN! I mean really listen! There is always more than one solution or option. Respect others opinions. Everyone comes from different background.

Second annual Writers’ Harvest

Last Wednesday evening, Bryant’s literary community prepared itself once again for the annual Writers’ Harvest. Sponsored by the Annual Writers’ Harvest, this event involves formal reading of various works of poetry and prose. This event also took place across the country in many locations. The Writers’ Harvest hopes to raise awareness of the hunger problem facing our country as well as raise money to fight it locally. All proceeds donated went directly to the Rhode Island Community Food Bank.

Many readers with various styles and methods read their works. Several published (or soon to be published) authors also read, creating a hint of mastery in the air.

The Writers’ Harvest is the English department and the Writers’ Harvest Committee for making this evening possible.

Who’s Who nominations solicited

For more than 60 years, students have been nominated for the Who’s Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges award in recognition of their student achievements. This prestigious selection by nominating up to 60 students to receive this honor.

Students can be nominated by any member of the Bryant community. The award is given based on the student’s accomplishments in scholarship, citizenship, and leadership in curricul and co-curricular activities, citizenship and service to Bryant College, and potential for future achievement.

The Bryant College Awards committee will meet in the near future to review nominations. No more than 60 undergraduate and graduate students will be selected for this award. Nomination forms are available in the Office of Student Affairs Office, the Graduate School Office, the Office of Residence Life, and the Office of Student Activities.

For further information on this award or other Bryant awards, please call the committee chairman, Richard Gluss, at ext. 6683.

Wanna Catcha Movie...Or Something?

By Nigel “Loquitos of The Borg” Futura

Once again, I have arrived to serve up a steaming hot helping of entertainment ideas. I have the ability in searches of movies. I am smuggled far behind enemy lines to seek out and destroy upward episodes to pose as music hands. I risk my neck time after time, only barely making it back cut alive. I meet with shadowy figures in dark, dank, and deserted alleys to discuss upcoming Broadway musicals. I pore over countless hours of video tape searching for any piece of celluloid trash that might pop up and annihilate your viewing nirvana like a half-eaten cockroach found in your strawberry kiwi Jello. On this week’s menu, we have many treats. Well, they are not so rare. Okay, they are pedestrian, but they’re good!

42nd Street 1/2

This Broadway musical, playing at the Providence Performing Arts Theater is a humorous flashback to more innocent and gay time in America. Somewhat gaudy, this play is about—what can only be described as—the shamangans that occur behind the scenes of a Broadway show opening. Witty, well-acted and contain an underlying message of the infinite possibilities of the courageous human spirit. The play, bright and flashy in its set design, artistic in its production, and brilliant in its direction and set changes, is something of a reality war into another life dimension. Not a bad dimension, just a different one from the beaver party, Tommy Hilfiger pants, dance, and grunge rock atmosphere of our generation. It is a good idea to step off the proverbial helicopter into a whole and take it in.

After the show’s opening, I had an opportunity to speak with Michelle Felton, who plays Dorothy Brock in the play. A tiny woman with a powerful presence, she took the time to describe the world she lives in: the long throngs of hours and constant travel (They have already done over 400 shows!). I asked her where she wanted to see her already successful career go. She replied that her dream was to star in Sunset Blvd, on Broadway. As the oldest member of the cast (34), she also remarked that she had to be something of a role model to the rest of the members (whose average age is 21). When asked what she sacrifices, she had to make to get where she is today, she spoke quite emotionally about not having a home (living out of a storage space and a suitcase), being on the road so much and having moved to New York only days before she started this job, she hadn’t had time to buy or lease a home. She also remarked on not having children of her own. As the youngest of several sisters, she recounted the ribbing she gets from her older sisters who have children of their own. Formally a professional equestrian, she says that her life is quite fulfilling and exciting. A truly happy and outgoing woman, Ms. Felton personifies the whole cast incorporated into something of a bi- semantic tradition. All you have to do is flip a couple of beer and space runs, and store that money for the theater. To look out for Miss Saigon is coming soon to PPAC. Also on the theater scene, keep an eye out for the Christmas classic, A Christmas Carol, starting soon at the Trinity Repertory Theater. Directed by Brian McEleny, these credits include the 1993-1994 season of Measure for Measure, and played by a great cast that includes Anne Scurria and Ed Sheer, this promises to be as good as it has always been. There are also special discounts for students, so give them a ring at 401-455-0000. On the movie front—General Cinemas is playing:

Larger than Life 1/2 (A more subtle Bill Murray) The Mighty Ducks III * (Soggy City)

At the Showcase Cinemas

Romeo & Juliet 1/2 (Mel Gibson just being Mel Gibson)

At the Showcase Cinemas

Ransom 1/2 (Mel Gibson)

The Mirror Has Two Faces

The Long Kiss Goodnight

The Funeral N.S.

The First Wives Club

The Mirror Has Two Faces

Space Jam  (Good to take your kid brother to. Not the hard edge Looney Tunes I remember. Still a bunch of fun.)

Coming soon—Jingle All the Way —Arnold tries his hand at comedy again. Set in middle America and about dad doing everything to get his son a special Christmas gift. We will all keep our fingers crossed that it doesn’t suck. Also starring Sinbad, which doesn’t speak well of this movie’s prospects. If you have watched any of the NS (Not Screened) movies and would like to comment on them, you can call me at ext. 6488 or e-mail me at <kfinbarra@acad.bryant.edu>.

Pavement

This field was where senseless kids fought. God, this scene breeds familiarity. Conflict, consumed with anger and aggression. Foolish, immature, saving of face, though it didn’t seem it at the time. Grass stains become battle scars. Crying for a guardian to step in and point reverence.

Although often a combatant, occasionally I was one of those who just stood back. Watching rank pink bloodspill. Children too young to bleed red, too young to do much of anything.

Sometimes I regret never stepping in, though I’m not too sure if I had the capabilities to. Those scars seem faint now anyway. Even though this field still holds so much, its newborn desolation doesn’t do it justice.

Pavement covers most of the trenches now. Standing nature replaced with towering light fixtures. Maybe, just maybe, if those lights were there before, scars would have been less. At least we all could have seen more.

Senseless violence at its purest, just a friendly rivalry to us. It makes me feel guilty— with no pavement to cover my memory.

On Wednesday, November 20, Maria Cruz from Pawtucket visited MSU to tell a very special story. Maria, who is 27 years old, was diagnosed with chronic leukemia two years ago while she was pregnant with her first child. Since that day, Maria and her family (which includes her husband, Winston, and daughter, Jordan, now 1 1/2 years old) have been on a quest to cure Maria’s leukemia.

Maria’s doctors told her a bone marrow transplant is a chance for a cure, but Maria has no one who matches her bone marrow type. No one, that is, in her family or in the National Registry of over 2 million volunteers. The National Marrow Donor Program (NMDP), created in 1986, is an organization which provides unrelated bone marrow donors to patients in need of a transplant. The NMDP Registry is searched when a patient does not have a family match.

Because a patient’s most likely match outside the family is someone of the same racial or ethnic group, patients from minority communities are less likely than non-minorities to find matched donors on the Registry. This is the case with Maria. Maria is from Columbia to her best chance of finding a match is from the Hispanic population.

Of the 2,453,678 volunteers listed on the National Registry, only 161,693 are Hispanic. In fact the combined minority groups (African American, Hispanic, Asian and Native American) only total 526,000, or approximately one-quarter of the entire registry.

Maria was invited by MSU to increase awareness about the serious need for more volunteers on the National Registry. To join is simple. At the blood drive in Janikies Auditorium on Monday, December 2, from 10am to 5pm, representatives from the Rhode Island Blood Center, the local office of the NMDP, will be present to answer questions about the program. Anyone between 18 and 60 years old and in good health can register by completing a short application/health history form. Then a small sample of blood is taken either with a regular blood donation or performed separately if a person is not donating blood. The blood test will show what a donor’s bone marrow (HLA) type is and then entered into the National Registry. While listed on the Registry, if a complete match is found, the donor is counseled about the donation process and given a physical examination after a thorough information session. The marrow is extracted in a simple hospital procedure using either general or regional anesthesia. Only 2 – 5% of marrow is extracted from the hip bone with a needle. The marrow then replenishes itself naturally, and the only ill effects are a sore lower back for a few days.

Maria urged the Multicultural Student Union to become involved in the “opportunity of a lifetime.” For more information about becoming a bone marrow donor, please call the Rhode Island Blood Center at (800) 283-8385, extension 564.

Deadline for next issue submissions is December 4.
Dear Bryant Community,

What’s up Bryant?! Well MSU’s been busy over the past couple of months and the we’re not even close to the “half-way” mark of our events for this year!!!

The forum on Interracial Dating was very successful, even though it wasn’t well attended. Thanks goes out to the panelists and all those who attended. The topic of Interracial Dating will be discussed at a later MSU meeting.

This month’s Unity Day was fantastic!!! We’re constantly thinking of ways to improve each month’s Unity Day and it certainly showed last Wednesday! There was dancing; there was music….it was just an all-out good time!!! Many thanks goes out to Rich Dankel, Sandy Sylvia, and the entire Bryant Center staff for making Unity Day such a successful event.

I hope everyone has picked up their bags of candy from MSU’s Great American Smokeout table in the Rotunda. On behalf of MSU, I would like to thank everyone who supported this nationwide event including our co-sponsors, Health Services.

Tomorrow is the big night!!! The MSU/KIX 106 Jam is going to be an event you don’t want to miss!!! A lot of planning and hard work has been put into this party and the Rotunda will never be the same again! Don’t forget, tickets are $3.00 at the door and the party is 18 or over (College ID required). There will be giveaways, prizes, and a whole bunch of other great surprises….don’t miss it!!!

It can truly be stated that MSU is non-stop this year. Bryant’s support is vital to the success of these events!!! If you have any comments, questions, or suggestions, feel free to e-mail MSU at MSU@acad.bryant.edu. See you at our meetings, Wednesdays at 4pm in the Bryant Center, Room 2A.

Yours truly,
Harold Peacock, Jr.
MSU President

Letter From the Editor

Dear Readers,

This is the last issue of Cultural Flavor for this semester. It has been a great experience to see the pages of Cultural Flavor filled with articles and poems that reflect what the Bryant community has on its mind. The response from the Bryant Community has been very positive. A very special thank you goes out to those members of the Bryant community that have made contributions, and to our readers.

The Cultural Flavor staff plans to publish the next issue of Cultural Flavor in January 1997. The deadline for submissions is December 4. If you’d like to make a contribution, please place it in the Multicultural Student Union box in the Multicultural Student Services office or mail it to Box 4508. The materials should be in Microsoft Word format, and should be submitted on disk. A hard copy of your submission is also required. I hope that you enjoy this issue and the issues to come.

Sincerely,
Louis Camacho-Rosado

The following selections ("Growing Up...") was submitted by Meg Springer, Assistant Director of Multicultural Student Services at Bryant College. It originally appeared in the Nov/Dec 1993 issue of Fellowship Journal, and was reprinted with permission in Oppression and Empowerment - Essays on Racism and Social Change Activism, a collection of writings by Andrea Ayvazian, an anti-racism educator with Communitas, a non-profit organization in Northampton, Massachusetts. It is intended to be a catalyst to encourage self-introspection and discussion around issues of self identity and worldview formation. The Multicultural Student Services staff welcomes you to stop by the office, 2nd Floor Unistructure, to share reactions, responses and further the discussion.

Growing Up
White in America

Not vicious.
No overt meanness.
Not in my family, my neighborhood.

Simply not noticing.
Not unknow. Just unaware.

At home, in school, at church
the messages were subtle beyond subtle.
invisible, undetectable
like oxygen
inhaled with every breath.

Who helped guide me?
Who helped me understand the meaning of my white skin of brown skin
black skin.

My minister, my teachers,
my pediatrician, my dentist,
my piano teacher,
my parents, their friends
All white.
They did not do or say anything racist.
But they did nothing to combat racism.

They pretended to be colorblind.
They said nothing.
They did nothing.

Whiteness was the standard, the norm
Why point it out?
Why discuss difference?

Left alone to understand race on my own.
I did not understand.

On Sundays I learned
"we are all children of God..."
It did not look that way
Monday through Saturday.

The author, a Quaker in Northampton, MA, is a war tax resister and anti-racism educator.

Growing Up
in White America

"And God gave his only begotten son
That whoever shall believe in him...."
(Jesus looks so Nordic
long blond hair, blue eyes, Wasn't he Semitic?)

Reciting with pride, rewarded with A's
"Slaves were happy, slavery civilized savages."

Cheerleading - chants from the sidelines:
"Pass 'em high, pass 'em low
Come on Redskins, Go, Go, Go!"
(Decades later a Native American woman asks me a pamphlet questioning the use of Indian names for sports teams.)

The brides and grooms on wedding cakes.
White wedding gowns.
White lies. Carte blanche.
Black cat. Black sheep of the family.

"Take out your flesh colored crayons."
The box from my ace bandage:
"...can be worn inconspicuously on arm or leg...."

The Little Rascals.
Amos 'n Andy, Step 'n Fetch It
(all Black people)
Father Knows Best
Leave It To Beaver, Ozzie and Harriet
(documentaries about American families)

Two white men hand on the moon
"One small step for....
One giant step for...."

Santa.
The President. All Presidents.
White men living in The White House.
White men on our money.
White White White White.
Angels. Halos.
God.

Beta Theta Pi
David Koestner
Our sixth annual Phil-a-Thon was this Tuesday and Wednesday. Proceeds went to the Muscular Dystrophy Association, and we thank everyone for contributing.

Thanks Theta for a good time on Beta Theta Night and for your help locating in the future, worry no more. Presence felt this weekend and hope this Tuesday and Wednesday. Welcome another edition of Delta Chi News.

Commuter Connection
Andrew Young

Howdy Commuter! For those of you who are stressing over where the Commuter Connection will be located in the future, worry no more. After a few field trips with Tim to visit the Smith House, it has been decided that we will not be moving.

Try to be on our office space in the Bryant Center. It was decided that the Smith House just isn’t the place for us.

Thanksgiving is right around the corner and with it comes the commuter run to Boston. The trip is on Saturday and anyone who would like to go but didn’t get their name on the list should check in the office, some people have backed out, making room for others who wish to attend. Of course you could also follow the bus in your own car. However, with Jessica and Mike driving, that may be difficult.

Be sure to keep your calendars for Wednesday, December 4’s the Commuter Christmas Party at The Junction. Afterwards we all plan to join the entire Bryant Community at the Festival of Lights. Keep all these great activities in mind; we hope to see you there!

Delta Chi
James Dow

Welcome to another edition of Delta Chi news. I would like to start this week’s column by thinking the Kappas for Friday night, it was fun while it lasted. Alumni made their presence felt this weekend and hope the turnout for this weekend is as successful. A thank goes out to DZ for Saturday night.

In sports, our hockey team has been doing well; however, the absence of F-Sharp will be missed on the defensive end.

Now let’s run down the brothers who made headlines this past weekend. Dutch and Newman visited Dorm 14 on Saturday night as we confined Goose to the floor. Stash missed Saturday night as we went to a GFI formal as Assumption. Wally is gearing up for the formal: BEWARE!

With all the new haircut and it actually looks worse than mine, Thanks Zeppe, Hey Dutch, don’t fool yourself girls.

Wally also bust myself in the chest, I’m still in the savior load.

Happy Anniversaries go out to Jotis, Els, & Zetas on the 1st, and Mack on the 2nd.

A congrats goes out to the “Hawks” for a good showing in the Bowl last weekends. Until next week...

Top of the Week: Just because something happened in the past, doesn’t mean it can’t change.

Quote of the Week: “Hey, did everyone get a piece?”

Prediction of the Week: After last week, I’ll take a week off!!

Economics Association
Jason Hollis

Hello everyone. The Association was pleased to feature a speaker from the Economics Speaker Series. Our guest speaker will be Mr. Eric J. Anderson, Deputy Director of the Rhode Island Economic Development Corporation. The Association is open to everyone regardless of class or major. We urge anyone with an interest in economics to come; it should be very enlightening as Eric is a very lively speaker. Dues will be collected and you will have a chance to meet the officers and discuss plans for the Association. Hope to see you there!

The Entrepreneurship Club
Michael Tuille

Hello to all of you. Our next meeting will be on Wednesday, December 4. The time, room, and speaker are still to be announced. Everyone is welcome. Look for signs around campus for information on the next meeting. This will be the last meeting of the semester. Next semester we are planning a Franchise Day, in which we will have speakers come and speak on starting up and running a franchise. It should be a good time. We will have more on this at the beginning of next semester. If you have any comments, concerns, or questions, please e-mail us at emcubed@acad.bryant.edu. I wish you all a safe and happy Thanksgiving!

Eunjo Lee

Hello, all members. With your help, International Students Organization has been hosting many events this semester. One of big events was The United Nations Festival. As you all know, it all took place at Bryant Center for visiting with us last Tuesday. They took Wista to Foxwoods to pay off their temporary loan from the summer.

Lainie, sorry for the battle wound and sorry to the poor hockey sticks that ended up broken. Hey, Ivy May, do you try to be a little more discrete, of all people we thought you had manners! Shila a.k.a. the leg O-Gates, Walt, that's all for this week. R.I.T top dog!!

Phi Sigma Sigma
Valerie Arndt

Hello. I hope everyone had a great week. First, we would like to congratulate Wendy on a great volleyball season.

Phi Sig would like to thank everyone who showed up on Friday night. Some sisters would also like to thank TFP for Thursday night. Speaking of TFP, do you guys have any music requests? Who knows that I can't even think of it. At least I know where the Euphrates River is located. Sunny, what's that hanging on your wall? You are still a stick. We're going to Nebraska, and if we can't find a Stop N' Shop, then we'll just have to compromise. Some of our sisters would like to thank Beta for Saturday morning. We had a blast, Hey Sahara, I thought the desert was supposed to be dry, Hey Blue Hornet, there's an emergency, find the nearest shower. Most of Smooth's celebration was spent on the floor. Elvis's architectural mastery? Sunny Dan, Chris were getting down to Bobby B. this weekend. Andrew for the quote of the week, "See that Tide? I'm about that clean." Billy Bob, that's all for now, I hope everyone has a great Thanksgiving!

Phi Kappa Tau
Ryan Foley

Hello everyone, hope you all had a good week. The associations are coming along fine. This weekend we enjoyed hanging around with Tri Sigma. We would like to give a special thanks to Kristen for her generous donations to all of us at Rente's. Street and Barrett had a movie night on Friday and found themselves stuck in the cold. We also enjoyed our vacation from Charles for the four days that they was gone. On Saturday, we had a special visit from our seniors of last year. They took Wista to Foxwoods to pay off their temporary loan from the summer.

We also enjoyed our special feeding of the thirsty. You are still a stick. 'We're going to Nebraska, and if we can't find a Stop N' Shop, then we'll just have to compromise.' Some of our sisters would like to thank, Beta for Saturday morning. We had a blast, Hey Sahara, I thought the desert was supposed to be dry, Hey Blue Hornet, there's an emergency, find the nearest shower. Most of Smooth's celebration was spent on the floor. Society for Human Resource Management
Jessica Burns

Hi everyone!! I just wanted to thank Mr. Steve Hines of Landmark Medical Center for visiting with us last Tuesday. He did a wonderful job filling in at the last minute for Mike Oliver of Norrell Staffing Services. Mr. Hines talked about all areas of HR, from starting out in the field to handling sexual harassment. For those of you who were interested in the topic to be presented by Mr. Oliver, look for his scheduled presentation next semester.

I hope everybody had a good time at Parent's on Tuesday, and don't forget, there is another Parent's Night coming up on December 3. Thanks for supporting SHRM!
SPB

Jeff Hill

Once again below everyone. I trust all is well. As you have probably read from my past articles, this is the time of year that have been working for the only a few more days until Thanksgiving break. Make sure you all enjoy it, final preparation degrees when we come back.

Thank you to everyone who attended the Philomena this past weekend. Everything went over very well. We had a few great activities coming up this weekend. On Saturday the 23, God Street Wine will be performing at the Strand in Providence, followed by a dance party. The show starts at 8 p.m. and tickets are on sale now at the info desk for only $5. Tickets will be available at the door for $8. Also on Saturday night and on Sunday, SPB will be hosting Independence Day in Jamaica. The cost is $1 on Saturday and $1.50 on Sunday which includes soda and pop. Enjoy all of the events and have a wonderful break.

Tau Epsilon Phi

Ray Belanger

The brothers would like to welcome anyone interested to come meet us on the third floor of Johnstone and/or at our townhouse, A6 and A7. Congratulations for some big wins on the football field. Between our two teams, we have only had one loss for the year. We still have a few spots left on the team for anyone interested. It was wonderful to see brother Kellogg up for one more weekend before he goes to North Carolina. It is also good to hear that Hyde and Wigger are doing very well overseas. This week was another wild one for the brothers.

We got a good start Friday, with a little help from Rico, nice to see business is going well for you. The town houses were the place to be this weekend with Phil-Top Friday, and "Shamrock it up" with Theta on Saturday. Money will be starting in the next edition of Dance Fever. Mrs. Wrench wasn't happy about the condition of the floor. Will and Drum started a new form of recycling. The mess of the works goes to Greenlaw, by default. Now we will leave you with the quote of the week. "Let's get one thing straight, I'm not number one; I'm number one!"

Greeting's Referral for MA591. Continue: If anyone is interested in helping out behind the scenes for MA591 with costumes, makeup, etc., please stop by our meeting on Tuesday at 5 p.m. in Room 20A of the Bryant Center.

In other news: Life is suffering from a sore back. Since when is Frankenstein Frankenstein? Is it really a compliment when someone says you make a great diet? The singing needs some work, thank God for Trappet. Watch out for Bryant, here come the MA591 dancers! Who says there wasn't Macnamara in the 50's? Thank you Allison for all of her help with this week's column.

Overall Ad: The cast of MA591 is practicing their look on phones."

The first ever immortalized Archway column (you'll catch on). Apparently, haven't written a column in a long while. Anyone? Bagdall is disheartened that the Archway has been off the radio for some time now. His last name to Miles (refer to last week's issue you were not interested in reading all the way through). Lies in all things that go wrong. Shaine Nigel (one half of a model American with one half of a game show host voice). Beside the absence of written representation, the station has been doing well aside from some minor explosions and hostage situations.

Upcoming Shows Information: Saturday, November 23, brings God Street Wine to the Strand by, these guys have come a long way from playing Bryant two years ago. TOOL and Psychotic play the Strand on November 26 (hide the small children). Also, mark your daily planners for Sunday, December 8, as Ranol Root and G Love & Special Sauce comes to Providence. Attack of the mainstream alternative (the 4-word brand at Lou's) Better than Ever play on November 23, Sponge plays November 24, and Woner brings their catchy (no talent) rock into town on November 27. For those seeking more intellectual stimulation (Bryan students?), Henry Rollins performs an evening of spoken word on December 3.

WJMF is also seeking talented, enthusiastic, booking on brilliant people to become DJs (actually, this is the basic, requirement). Vinnie and the multi-talented WJMF DJ staff upstairs (like MACG see somewhat talented). Contrary to popular belief, we play all different music from alternative rock to whatever else there is (don't judge a station by one show). So, if you have a desire to be heard by millions of people around the RI area doesn't ever tone? and have a few hours to spare between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. (Mon-Fri except holidays). We know you girls will do a great job, good luck!!

We hope everyone had this weekend. We'd like to thank Delta for a good time on Friday night. Too bad DJ Canasta had to run away from the game every two seconds. Deanna needs more practice for next time. Hey, Spartan, do it for Randy. Also, we would like to thank Beta for Saturday. Hopefully, next time no fire alarms. Hey Merlin, don't forget mums the word on the composite.

We hope that everyone is excited for Friday. It won't be the same without Punky falling down the stairs! Someone will probably take your place. We are going to have a great time!

Patriots corner: Week 11 Broncos at Patriots

Monday Night Football

Last Sunday, our beloved New England Patriots took to the field at Foxboro, Massachusetts for a marquee matchup with the Denver Broncos. Both arm chair quarterbacks and the sportswriters of the country were calling the game a battle for supremacy in the AFC. The Patriots entered week 11 tied for first place with the Buffalo Bills at 7-3-1 in the very competitive AFC East, while the Broncos stood atop the AFC West with the NFL’s best record at 9-1. The main concerns for the Patriots was the ability of their suspect defense (which currently ranks ahead only of Baltimore in yard allowed per game) to stop the potent Denver Broncos’ offense. Denver, led by future hall of fame quarterback John Elway at quarterback, has always been considered a dangerous passing team, however, that trend has flipped. Buffalo, a team with Denver acquired running back Terrel Davis, the once pass-happy Broncos are a more balanced, unstoppable offense. For the Patriots, who were coming off four straight wins against divisional opponents, it appeared that once again their offense would have to put up big numbers in order to keep up with Denver. Led by Drew Bledsoe at quarterback, the Patriots have an offense that sees the threat of potential. Assum ing score just 20 points combined in their first two games against Miami and Jacksonville, the offense exploded over the last eight games averaging a league best of 30 points per game. Therefore, everyone going into the game knew that whichever team’s defense could maintain some type of control would win the game.

Unfortunately, all the fanfare going into the game went out the window in the opening moments of the game, along with any hopes of a Patriots win. In the game’s opening series, the Patriots attempted a fake punt on the fourth down. For one brief moment it appeared things were going as planned (Patriots punter and third string quarterback) would fool the Bronco and the Patriots, but the Patriots punter, while going to the ground with just one man left, failed to make the tackle. Mannion was not able to get his body around the ball and gave Denver an instant 6-0 lead.

The second half looked just as bad as the first, aside from a Curtis Martin rushing touchdown midway through the third quarter. And, as if the gates of hell themselves had opened up to completely consume our Patriots, Patriots rookie sensation wide receiver Terry Glenn, the one player who actually came prepared to play, went down with a concussion in the third quarter during an attempted div ing catch. He is now listed as day to day and may not return (soon). Mercifully, the good Lord finally put an end to the distraction, and, along with it, the Patriots’ share of first place. Final score: Broncos 37 - Patriots 8.

Bill Parcells stated that after the game his team had been outplayed in every aspect of the game and had simply had their collective butts handed to them. However, I blame poor officiating, ill disciplined by Bronco players, rules designed specifically by the NEFL to stop the Patriots from winning; ump... poor passing becomes; the game is played with a ball that is bigger than a basketball.
