Another Day In The Life....

by Eileen Poluski

A new Committee has been added to Bryants already long list of College Committees, but this one could have a very positive effect on us all. The Quality of Student Life Committee has been formed to assess the essential nature of student life here at Bryant College. The Committee's basic task is to attempt to identify the "campus personality," determine if it may be extended and changed, and to make recommendations for remedying problem areas. Among the factors to be considered are alcohol and drug abuse, security of persons and property, effectiveness of resident directors and resident assistants, honor dorms, fraternity doing it right, and so forth.

The Committee is composed of representatives of the student body, faculty and administration. The Committee consists of John Hannon, Chairman Gaytha Langlois, Samuel Raymond, Stewart Yorks, Kevin Munsen, Daniel Landerling, Howard Falmum, Stephen Stahl, and Mrs. S. Renza.

The Vice President for Student Affairs, or his designate, will serve as the ex-officio member of the Committee and the entire Student Affairs staff will be available to the Committee in a resource or advisory capacity.

Assumptions and beliefs about student life differ markedly among members of the Bryant Community. Life styles, values, attitudes and opinions undoubtedly vary greatly within the student community. Consequently, the Committee's basic task is to attempt to identify the "campus personality," determine if it may be extended and changed, and to make recommendations for remedying problem areas. Among the factors to be considered are alcohol and drug abuse, security of persons and property, effectiveness of resident directors and resident assistants, honor dorms, fraternity doing it right, and so forth.

GLC Blood Drive Dear Editor,

Once again, the Greek Letter Council of Bryant College has sponsored a successful blood drive. It was held yesterday in 286 A and B from 3 to 11 p.m. The Rhode Island Hospital Blood Bank was the organization that received the blood. Few weeks after the blood has been recorded, students that donated blood were notified if his or her blood is protected for a year, if they need blood for any reason. Approximate alternatives for faculty and administration donors were previous yesterday to the GLC function. The GLC thanks once again the Greek Letter Council for the thoughtful donation of the coffee, juice and donuts.

Points of Information Dear Editor,

I must admit that after reading the letter to the editor that submitted by Sumner D. Knox which appeared in your October 25 issue, I was impressed with the manner of ignorance of facts shown by Mr. Knox.

Although Mr. Knox may have different opinions to be anechoic; I could not get around the geography of the area (an area which Mr. Knox claims to have rather limited amount of data) and be responsible for the essay of this person who is responsible for the essay to make statements about things he has no knowledge about.

Mr. Knox feels that Mr. Nader is being the problem of alcohol and fast driving to cut down on driving deaths. Mr. Nader has worked to make seat belts available for individuals to avoid his own death. However, these are individual choice which do not change. Whether or not Ralph Nader nor any of his consumer groups can control, Mr. Nader did not have a seat belt, and the morals of Automobile Manufacturers, not the social dispositions of the individuals themselves.

Morals now. Some facts are Alan A. Knox, Mr. Knox implies that Mr. Nader makes a great deal of money from lecturing and organizing, and that he is the only one to benefit from his preaching. If that is the case, then Mr. Knox should take his message to the church and the way to the door, he would like to reflect on its morality.

Anyone who knows anything about Ralph Nader knows that he does not make a lot of money, and no more than $5,000 per year, and he is not interested in the church and the way to the bank, he would like to reflect on its morality.

From the Editor's Desk

Last Sunday was a driving down Route 7 and I noticed that something was very obviously missing. As I got up to the intersection of Routes 7 and 116, I saw no STOP sign in the middle of the road. Now, I am not accusing anybody at Bryant of ripping off these signs, but it is relatively common knowledge that college students are notorious sign stealers. And these stop signs are very dangerous things to steal.

The Smithfield Police Department knew about the missing signs late on Saturday afternoon but notified the state (these being state roads) to put new signs there. The state couldn't get the signs put there on Sunday; supposedly because these signs have to be mounted in conical. At least this is what was told to me when I visited the Smithfield Police Department on Wednesday morning. The state was supposed to replace these signs on Wednesday. Mr. Knox was supposed to replace the signs before the inevitable happened.

That's right, folks; there was an accident at this intersection on Monday morning. One person was admitted to the Foggary Hospital in Smithfield. (We don't know who, and how they managed to get out of the car on a Monday.) This accident was not severe. There was a fracture and a few cuts. The person was not taken to the hospital and was not known to the hospital, and could not have possibly known about this intersection. These people were very fortunate, indeed, to have escaped with such minor injuries.

We all know about the hazards of the intersection of 7 and 116. Many of us have tried to get to the Town of Smithfield and the State of Rhode Island to put traffic lights at this intersection. But it all comes down to one thing-money. It seems that traffic lights are very expensive. Are they more expensive than human lives?

The thing that I really don't understand about this whole situation is that if the Smithfield Police did in fact contact the state about the missing signs, knowing the state's procedures, the state should have arrived at this intersection and put the signs back up the same day. If there are enough officers of the law to set up speed limits at this intersection every week, why aren't there enough of them to direct traffic there when the signs disappear? Traffic lights could probably be installed at the intersection from the revenue that the Town would receive from the issuance of traffic tickets at this intersection.

Until traffic lights are installed at this intersection, stop signs will probably remain stolen and knocked over. And more and more accidents will occur.

What will it take for a traffic light to be put at this intersection? Will Bryant College have to pay for it itself? That's sure what it looks like.

The Student Senate

It's Benefits, Detriments, and Alternatives Dear Editor,

I would like to speak out on behalf of the number of students who feel that the present Student Senate of Bryant College is inadequate. I don't intend to demean the Senate, because this is determined, at least in theory, by vote of the student body. What I do intend to say about is the problems, complications, and possible obsolescence of the Senate structure itself, as seen by some of the people it supposedly serves.

I myself, being a third year transfer student, am relatively new in the school and was anxious to find out what Bryant offered the student other than an educational experience. At the Student Newspaper, yearbook, and radio station. Many other activities, of which I was interested, was that the student electorate were limited in either scope or number. The consensus seemed to be, "Join a frat." The situation was more or less for the Student Senate but haven't been necessary, a replacement for the Senate structure as it presently exists.

The only remnant I can remember of the time was the sponsor of the social life afforded each student.

Thank you, John R. Topper

Death Is

Deer Editor,

For those of you that we enjoyed the Halloween adventures in dining on Halloween, Tuesday, October 30, 1974, I had to be one of the best examples of sadism shown any college where we know of. In the rear of the dining hall were two caskets, one containing a human skeleton and the other containing an employee of ARA, alive, prone in a corporeal position. There is no way that we would rather see during a meal than two caskets, one of them containing a human body on display. We see no purpose in having these containers of death on display for all to see, especially while dining. Halloween is a holiday and though related to the supernatural and the world of the dead, it is celebrated in its present form as an occasion of fun, not death. Death is a matter not to be taken lightly. It is one of deep human emotion and saddening. We would like to chose to forget until death touches our lives, the presence of calorie in food and the reasons to events and things we find and eat.

We hope that ARA will take into consideration the effects of action before plans another such "Adventure."

Work Together So Bryant Will Be What You Make It

Dear Editor,

I feel that I was treated more like an adult in high school, than here at Bryant College. I am a graduate of the class of 1974, from the following schools: Preparatory School, a christian, non-profit, private high school, in Stony Brook, Long Island, New York.

Back two years ago a major change occurred at Stony Brook. In the Spring of 72, there was a lot of tension between the students and administration. We, the students at that time, felt that we had no voice in matters similar to the ones we are now facing here at Bryant. The Administration wouldn’t allow us to incorporate, and we wouldn’t give in to their demands. At the climax of our petition, one of the trustees noticed the war for power and the tension building amongst students. When he inquired as to the issues at hand, he heard two different stories: one from the administration and the other from the students. It was then brought to the attention of the Board of Trustees that we knew nothing about what was happening at Stony Brook. From that point on, Stony Brook Administration and student body changed from similar here at Bryant to the following:

A "Board of Prefects," consisting of 13 currently enrolled senior students, who worked and ran different phases of the administration according to their leadership and ability. Since that time, student and student administration offices were abolished and no longer recognized. (Example: Student Senate and Student Affairs)

The student members of the board were held responsible for their actions and the actions of the area prefects to the followings boards: Board of Trustees, the Headmaster, Associate Headmaster, Dean of Students, the student body. For the above reasons, the new board were the associate headmaster and Dean of Students. The student body, for its part, endorsed the new board.

The Head Prefect (male), Associate Prefect (female), Honor Committee Prefect, Chaplain Prefect, Unins Prefects (two people), Admissions Prefect, Extra-Curricular Prefect, Assembly Committee Chairman, Curricular Prefect, Welfare Prefect, Scholarship Prefect, Alumni Prefect.

It would take me too long, in this article, to explain the functions of each department. Instead I will explain the Extra-Curricular department, as I held that position last year. To make it simple, my area dealt with student’s life not connected to the classroom. Delegation of authority was up to me. In some cases I appointed the head (Example: Snack Bar Manager); and in others I allowed the committee to choose their heads (Example: Social Committee).

Before returning to Stony Brook in my senior year I had to set my goals and objectives for the year. They were to be written and given to the Board of Trustees, whereupon I received my budget. It was then up to me to proceed with my resources and provide the students with a campus life that brought togetherness and enjoyment.

As you can see, there is nothing to compare. When Bryant today, Owing Freshman Orientation here at Bryant, we were told by both administration and old students that Bryant is what you make it. Those were the same words that were used at Freshman Orientation last year at Stony Brook. The difference of Stony Brook was that those who really wanted to get involved and make the school as good as they could. Whereas you have only the pref, med men, and others.

Do the members of the Senate really feel that they have made Bryant what they want? Does the Administration really care about the students? My impression is not. It seems that there are a lot of problems trying to run the business end of this school, much less the students. We are here to learn good business ethics, at the same time being educated. Yet, Bryant is not practicing what it is teaching. Since when is it a good business practice for an institution not to automatically give a receipt for bills paid by check? I wish someone in the Administration would explain the difference.

Kevin McGarry fought quite hard last Spring to get an increase in the student movement fee. Now he is fighting with Dr. Fullerton to have student control of the money. After such a big production about Student Senate, I should think McGarry could find better things to spend it on than cocktail parties and limousines.

One party was supposed for Senators and the Administration to get acquainted, at the cost of $40.20 taken out of the Senate budget. The second was a reception for Ralph Nader to the tune of $118. In addition to that a limousine was rented to drive his group for $40.

Why can’t these people mend without the social crutch of liquor? Couldn’t another car have been used instead of a limousine at the airport? McGarry, just who are you trying to impress?

I really hoped the increased student movement fee would be good use, but once again I have been robbed of good services by the administration. If McGarry, or you like cocktail parties, why not some status involved in having them-- use your own money and NOT S 20!!

Sincerely,

Deborah L. Swanson

Mismanaged Money

Dear Editor,

Sexual Decision Making At Bryant College

By Dr. Gayla A. Langis, Science Department

Earlier this Fall, the issue of responsibility decision making in the area of human sexuality was discussed in an Archway article. It was proposed at that time that women, as men, should apply rationality and openness to decisions about sexual and reproductive health. More recently, at the Colleen’s Column, Women, students indicated their strong desire for an expansion of the current programs in sex education, gynecological services, cancer screening, and birth control methods. Many students feel that, as students at a college of this size and sophistication, they are entitled to medical services normally considered to be the purview of other medical facilities. Yet, Bryant is not practicing what it is teaching. Since when is it a good business practice for an institution not to automatically give a receipt for bills paid by check? I wish someone in the Science Department could explain the difference.

For such services is within the responsibility of the College.

A proposal for the development of an integrated program in gynecological services, birth control counseling, and V.D. testing and treatment is currently being synthesized by Gayla A. Langis in the Science Department. The only way that such a program can be properly designed is if students know their demands in this area. What do you want as part of such a program? What are your needs?

If any of these questions concerns you, fill out the form below, and drop it in the campus mail, directed to Dr. Gayla A. Langis in the Science Department.

Cancer screening (self-examination techniques, PAP smear, mammogram)

- Medical services, including pelvic exam, breast exam, etc.
- Information on Venereal Disease
- Information on birth control
- Access to birth control methods at minimum cost
- Off-campus
- Pregnancy testing, off-campus
- Counseling by qualified counselors
- Abortion Information and/or Referrals, off-campus
- Other (describe)

Please check one of the following: Male, Female.

All of the above services would be provided in a strictly confidential setting, with a minimal cost and high-quality medical care.
Phi Ep News

Phi Ep's football team had a convincing win over ADO last week, although cold weather kept the game in close contest. We then battled for a 0-0 tie against Beta. If our team continues to play well in the last few games, we will have a shot at the playoffs. Phi Ep is now tied for second place.

On Tuesday, a few of the brothers in Phi Ep were invited to Governor Phil Noel's dinner party at the 1025 Club in Cranston.

This year we would like to welcome five new social pledges. Two are transfer students, John Iggo from SMU and Dave Bartlett from Princeton. The other three social pledges are Mike Andrews, John Gahan and Bill Robbins, all Bryant sophomores.

Plans are in the making for a Christmas Party at the Carolina Supper Club. All freshmen and independents will be invited.

Greeks News

Tau Epsilon Phi

The Brothers and Little Sisters of Tau Epsilon Phi would like to take this opportunity to welcome and introduce our five new social brothers.

Alfred Truxton is a finance major who is interested in anything and everything. He's TEP's combination disc jockey, bartender, and all around good guy.

Vincent Smith is a management major. Vanzie is interested in all types of sports. However, he can always be seen displaying his favorite sport down at the Rat. Challenge him to a chugging contest and you'll see what I mean.

Steve Woodruff is a law enforcement major. Steve can be seen down on the field during the track season throwing things around; namely, the shotput. However, he's not too bad at shooting the bull either.

Dennis Nelson is also a law enforcement major whose main goal now is becoming a Rhode Island State Trooper. Although he is rugged on the outside, he has proved to be the Little Sister's perfect gentleman. Cherney is not dead!

Robert Karaman is an accounting major. Kash is often seen running around the track; however, he'll jump hurdles for a good pair of legs!

After they had accepted their pledges, we spent the rest of the night at the Rat drinking our way through 23 pitchers.

Last weekend we journeyed to Western New England College in Springfield, Massachusetts, to join our fellow brothers and Little sisters for a party and picnic. Next weekend they will be joining us for our annual hayride for more good times.

See you at our next party—Dorm 1. fourth floor.

Sigma Iota Xi

Congratulations to SIX-A for defeating BSO last Thursday night in volleyball. Both SIX and BSO played an equally skilled and spirited game. It was a real close game—the score of the third and winning game was 17 to 15! Good game, BSO!!

The same night SIX-B was defeated by Crook's Jocks. It was a good game so keep up that great spirit because we're behind you all the way!

Phi Upsilon

The Sisters of Phi Upsilon would like to thank everyone who came to their annual Smoker and made it a huge success. We know that everyone had a great time.

We would also like to congratulate our new social pledges and welcome them to our sorority.

Sigma Iota Beta

Volleyball season for SIB is becoming quite intense. SIX-A lost their first game Monday night against the Pigs. It was a close game, but because of a carry, SIX-A lost the winning point. SIX-A now has a record of 3-1. Their spirit is still high and will continue throughout the rest of the season.

Thursday, SIX-A won against Crook's Jocks, and SIX-B lost against SIX-A. Although SIX-B played their best, SIX-A claimed a victory over them.

SIX-B's Smoker, which was held last Tuesday, was a great success. We want to thank all of those who attended for making it such a success. We hope you had as good a time as we did.

Kappa Tau

The intramural football team is doing well. We are 6-1 with three games remaining in the regular season. The intramural bowling team is in second place with a record of 11-6.

On November 7, 8, and 9, Kappa Tau and Beta Sigma Chi will sponsor Personality Weekend. November 7 is the judging. November 9 is the dance marathon and a mixer. We appreciate your support.

It is having a party this weekend in Dorm 2. Second floor. Everyone is invited.
Spacedout

I was flaying out. It was about one in the morning. I was really too high to do anything but dream. Instead I went out cruising in the woods. No one was outside and it was cold and the sky was a clear spot above. The moon was my lamp. A silver contrail cut two-thirds of the sky. Venus shone green. Dogs barking echoed through the woods. Rabbits and unseen critters scattered as I spaded along the path. All in all, it was quiet. My footsteps seemed louder than a quadriphone at level ten.

I slaved up at the stars. I kno'ed one of them has a planet orbiting it. On that planet is another space-cowboy looking at the heavens. He knows I am here and I know he is there. I waved at him and I imagine he waved at me. I hope a spaceship holds in that field one night while I'm there. I want to go along. To get off this crazy planet-I want to experience a new view. I want to be able to live as a new man once again. I want to enjoy life without social security, inflation, job scarcity and nuclear warfare. I don't want to see another rich-man, poor-man, French-American man. I want to see people alive and thinking. I want to see all those fantastic ideas for new lifestyles come to pass. I want choices alternatives to this place without having to rip apart the old, rotting structures that linger. I don't feel I have the strength to vote for another Nixon. I can't continue this-so come on, space babies—do something.

"Hey Mister Spaceman
Won't you take me along
I won't do anything wrong,
Just please take me along
For a ride."

Byrds—'67 or so

So I asked him a question. He asked me what did I mean? I asked him what do you mean what do I mean. You know exactly what I am talking about. You are using a tactic in your conversation that is very immature. You are constantly asking for definitions for rephrasing for me to interpret for you in three or four ways what I have said. You are unduly sensitive to disagree with scholars in their specialized language.

Yet you can't speak with and understand me.

It seems to me that you are playing a game only you can lose. If you constantly pretend to not understand those having some disagreement with you, you lose valuable counsel. You have become isolated from the people around you in a strange way. They will smile at you. They will converse with you and agree with you. They will not openly speak their minds. You have turned a vacuum in which change is difficult if not impossible. You will try to exempt yourself from change.

Darwin, as well as socialist historians, has shown what happens to those who do not change adapt. They do not live. They are gradually replaced by those more successful in a dynamic environment.

Please be careful. I said. Try and understand an environment too large for your understanding. See what is actually happening around you—listen to others and then judge for yourself. Get high, get straight. But most of all, evolve. Evolve as your environment (the people, mostly) does.

Do not become anachronism. You're not the king, you know.

Eldorado—
A symphony by the Electric Light Orchestra

Each one of us is probably capable of tracing our own musical development and tastes. It probably started out with those little records, the ones that come in a myriad of colors, everything except black. They really didn't amount to much, but it served to introduce us to a new realm of entertainment (records) that would be with virtually all of us for quite a number of years.

The first time any of us really entered the music market ourselves was probably in relation to what's commonly called "top forty." After all, here was a type of music that provided a sense of identity, aspiration, and most of all, a sense of belongingness. Most of us eventually developed preferences for certain types of music not especially part of "top forty," and closely related.

All this has resulted in an extremely narrowed down view of music by most people. All one must do to realize this would be to inspect a few friends' record collections. Rarely is any diversification of music found, and one likely, the collection is apt to be so specialized that every single record of a particular group may be found, but none of another group just as good, if not better. For most people, somewhere along the line, classical music just didn't quite make it. Interestingly, the converse also appears to be true. Those who enjoy classical music rarely have anything to do with the more popular segments of the market. Eldorado, a symphony by the Electric Light Orchestra, would be construed by most people to be classical, simply because it is orchestrated. While parts of the album do in fact display characteristics of classical music, for the most part it might best be called progressive rock. That catch-all label that people tend to call music when it's not known exactly what type it is. Eldorado combines the most forceful aspects of classical orchestration with the modern technology of a moog synthesizer. With the leading vocals of Jeff Lynne and Richard Tandy, the net result is a unique style of music not like anything else.

Eldorado contains some superb music that is different, if nothing else. Safe one of the album is exceptionally good with two songs worth special attention: "Can't Get Out of My Head," a very mellow tune, and "Blue Man," a hard rocker.

The Electric Light Orchestra has combined elements of classical and rock to an extreme of perfection. Nonetheless, the album is substantially different from what most of us have been listening to, and because of that, may not enjoy strong popularity. But if you think that your musical consciousness could stand some expanding, this is one album worth your attention.

On the Necessity for Questioning Assumptions

by Elizabeth Palmer

On August 21, 1974, the world ended. It was not the end of the world as we knew it, but the end of an era, as the saying goes. The end of the world as we knew it was the end of the world as we knew it, and the end of the world as we knew it was the end of the world as we knew it. And so it went, day after day, until finally it was all over.

The end of the world as we knew it was not an event, but a process, a gradual decline, a slow erosion of the world as we knew it. It was a process that had been酝酿 for years, decades, perhaps even centuries.

And yet, even as the end of the world as we knew it approached, many people continued to believe that the world as we knew it would continue as it had always been. They refused to see the signs of the end, the warnings, the omens. They believed in the power of the world as we knew it, in its ability to withstand any challenges, to overcome any obstacles.

But the end of the world as we knew it was not a sudden event, a cataclysmic occurrence. It was a gradual process, a slow, steady decline. It was a process that had been underway for a long time, and that would continue for a long time to come.

The end of the world as we knew it was a process that would continue to unfold, even as we knew it. It was a process that would continue to affect the world as we knew it, even as we knew it. And so it went, day after day, until finally it was all over.
Neal Fisher, a somewhat paradoxical person, could be described as a pseudo-student with his brash exterior; yet within him are deep-rooted thoughts providing evidence of his real orientation.

In accordance with typical "Neolithic" profundity, Neal said that he "works for Daddy" in Rochester, New York. Doing a bit of everything in the family's business, Standard Hardware Supply Corporation, officially Neal is Special Assistant to the Sales Manager. Upon completion of his program at Bryant, he plans to continue in the family's business and aims towards its diversification. He confidently stated, "I'm aiming for 2 million by the time I'm 25. Everybody says their first million; I'm shooting for 2 million!"

An active member of the Bryant Community, Neal plays varsity basketball for Dorm 10, is the coach for Dorm 10, Inc., a girls' volleyball team, and is a representative to RSAG from Dorm 10. Commenting on RSAG, Neal stated that the President and the Vice Presidents are the management, the teachers are the employees, and the students are the customers. When asked what the product was, he remarked, "The product is a service provided to the customer, the service being an education which manifests itself in a diploma."

I asked Neal what his thoughts were on Bryant's student body. Neal said, "I think the student body is no different from any other student body, but the managers have diversified the people you would have at a university or liberal arts school." Neal feels that the students here are plagued with a severe case of boredom. He said, "This is one of the reasons you have as much drug use on this campus as you have. I think that if they concentrated more on providing activities for the students rather than increasing the severity of the drug laws on campus—I think there would be a decrease in the frequency of the use of drugs on this campus. I think the main reason kids use drugs is because of boredom." Neal says that he has no real answer to the problem, however, he expressed the feeling that increased activities and an expanded sports program would help and he'd be in the right direction. Neal added, "As for the kids themselves, the major problem is that there is never a quiet bunch of kids. I've been a member of Dorm 10's alumni association for four years and it's a very close-knit group of people as you well know, Paul."

When asked to comment on why students seem so detached from intellectualism at Bryant, Neal answered, "The main reason for that is in the emphasis of the instructors here at Bryant in their tests. The tests tend to be objective. When people study for an objective examination they only study the facts; not the reasons behind the facts. I don't think the fact that there is not any intellectualization by students is the greatest part of my business. I feel that I have come out of the very fact that there is not any intelligence in the students of Bryant. Neal feels the school could provide intellectual stimulation if it only would get off the campus. I've never known a serious bunch of kids. I've been a member of Dorm 10's alumni association for four years and it's a very close-knit group of people as you well know, Paul."

BRYANT COLLEGE ACCOUNTING ASSOCIATION MEETING Monday, November 4, 1974 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.
Room 306 A FILM: HOW TO TAKE AN INTERVIEW

Neal Fisher

MBA HIGHLIGHTS

Here is a sample of the many questions that are asked of the Graduate Office. Perhaps they are the very questions that you had but never got around to asking.

When does the Spring, 1975, Graduate Semester begin? On Monday evening, January 6.

Where will classes be offered? Besides the on-campus programs, off-campus at the Bayside Company Plant in Portsmouth and at the BIP Plant in West. After your application, test scores, and college transcripts have been received you will be contacted to come in for an interview. At that time, you will be informed what classes you will be taking.

Can I go full-time? Even though the great majority of students are part-time students because they are employed during the day, the Graduate School welcomes full-time students. A full-time student is one who carries nine or more semester hours of class work per week.

MBA requirements only

How long will it take to acquire my MBA? If you are a Bryant undergraduate you will not need any foundation courses, on a part-time basis two classes per semester for two years. If you are a full-time student, you should complete the program in two years, and on a full-time basis four per semester and two per summer, you should complete the program in one year. The more foundation courses you need, the longer it will take.

As an undergraduate, how can I plan now to reduce my graduate class requirements? By checking the outlines of the programs in the Day and Evening Course Bulletins and with the Graduate Office.
Diving at Brown?
by Craig Bogar

How far does an athlete have to go before people consider him dedicated? As far as swimming goes, one might say, yes. The paradox here, however, is summed up in a sentence. Because of the inadequacies of our pool and diving board, our divers have been going to the Brown University dive practice for two years in a row. It is fortunate that Coach Susman and the diving coach at Brown, Dave Silas, have worked out an agreement where Coach Silas has not only given Brown diving permission to use the pool free of charge, but also free instruction.

Even with this gracious contribution by Coach Silas, our divers still have a huge burden upon their shoulders to make this one-hour, round-trip journey five days a week, without remuneration for gas.

The Swim Team has three divers this year: senior letterman Joe Haydu, and freshmen George Foley and Scott McShane. Last year was Haydu's first year of competition, without his previous experience. With Coach Silas' instruction, he made rapid improvement and set the state record. When asked about the conditions of the Bryant Pool, Haydu replied, "It's a wasting time practicing at this pool. It's not only dangerous because of the lack of depth, but you also get the feeling of diving off a piece of wood." One wonders why an athlete would go to this trouble to compete. Haydu stated, "I took on an obligation and committed myself to do the best I can. The merits make it worthwhile because it is the only time when both the swimmers and divers work together."

Foley competed on his high school varsity team for two full years at Cape Elizabeth High School in Maine. He, along with Haydu, practices at Brown two hours a day, five days a week. Foley came to Bryant with the intention of diving but was disappointed when he saw just a "sand pit." He decided to continue diving because of the competition and hopefully it will offset the hassle of going to Providence.

McShane captained the Lincoln High School Gymnastics Team in his senior year before coming to Bryant. Having no previous diving experience, he would apply his gymnastic ability to the diving board, because there isn't a gymnastics team at Bryant. He, like the others, hopes that competing in the meets will make up for his efforts.

Hopefully in the near future Bryant will have a facility of its own so its swimmers and divers won't have to go to other schools to practice. Tomorrow's Swim-A-Thon is a good idea for students and faculty to show they appreciate these efforts by sponsoring the swimmers. It is high time that we recognize these athletes for their dedication for not only trying to improve themselves, but also Bryant's gymnastics.

Swimming Short: Freshman Paul Ruby from Newburgh, New York, came off the disabled list last Thursday and unofficially broke the school record in the 200-yard freestyle with a time of 2:10.95. His clocking bettered Tom Dejonge's current record of 2:14.0. Rolli and basketball.
