Entrepreneurship club visits Harvard Business School

Steven Manning
Entrepreneurship Club Treasurer

On Saturday, October 26, the Entrepreneurship Club visited Harvard Business School for their 13th annual Entrepreneurship Conference. The Bryant College Entrepreneurship Club is very proud to be the only group outside of Harvard expressly invited to this event, which is sponsored by the Harvard Small Business and Entrepreneurship Club. Although entrepreneurship is already well-established at Harvard, the theme of "Breaking the Mold" refers to the non-traditional role that entrepreneurship has assumed among business schools and the increasing support of entrepreneurship as a legitimate and viable career choice for the business student.

At the conference, we heard from several very distinguished speakers and panelists who shared with us their experiences and insights on where they are today and how they got there. The first keynote speaker was Todd Krasnow, who is the Executive Vice President of Sales and Marketing at Staples. Mr. Krasnow is also responsible for Staples $450 million catalog business, as well as company-wide marketing, communication, and advertising functions. Staples recently announced an agreement to merge with Office Depot, forming an organization, with 1996 revenues of $10 billion. Combined, the companies operate in 12 countries and employ 55,000 people.

Mr. Krasnow hit on some key points in his speech, including:
1) entrepreneurship is incredibly hard work and that nothing you can do will ever fully prepare you for the reality of it; 2) you have to love change because you will have to change and adapt in order to survive; and 3) you must enjoy and believe in what you do and have complete commitment so you will succeed.

Surely Mr. Krasnow can be given a good deal of credibility since those who originally invested in Staples have received 70 times their money!

The second keynote speaker was Charles Cauter, who has been President of Brita Products (a subsidiary of Clorox) since July 1995 and is the company's senior manager responsible for the manufacturing and marketing of Brita water filtration systems in North and South America. Mr. Cauter especially focused on the characteristics of entrepreneurship, which is basically entrepreneurship within the context of a large organization. He described the merits of the open minded approach that entrepreneurship can provide to the often constraining bureaucracy of large corporations. Another notable speaker was one of the panelists, Tom First, who is a founding partner of Nantucket Nectars, a local company that produces all natural high-quality juice products. Mr. First's humorous and informal approach to business success was inspirational and inspired all who attended the conference.

The Entrepreneurship Club would like to thank our advisor, Professor Jack Keigwin, for providing this opportunity and also Jamie Bergeron, a 1992 graduate of Bryant currently attending the Harvard Business School. Jamie not only accommodated the club while we visited, but he also spoke to us regarding the rigor of the Harvard program and what it takes to get into this prestigious school of business.

The Bryant College Entrepreneurship Club is looking for new members who want to join this exciting program. Anyone who is interested can feel free to call me on campus at 2208, or e-mail the club at entclub@acad.bryant.edu.

Truth needed for ASAP

With the Associated Press working harder and harder to bring the news straight to you, sometimes signals get crossed and otherwise private information becomes common knowledge. It is like this when you, as an avid reader (or watcher) of the daily news, must decide between guilt or innocence for the unsuspecting criminals. The trouble is that, like in soap operas, the facts surrounding the case are intertwined with, by both law enforcement and the press, to play upon your own emotions. Guilt is associated with the suspects from the very start, and because of this, assuming innocence—before anything is proven in a court of law—has become a thing of the past.

For instance, the June 27 Centennial Olympic Park bombing was initially thought to have been caused by a security guard, Richard Jewell, employed at the site. With accusations that he had caused the bombing so that he would be seen as a hero, people's emotions were toyed with, and he became coined as a sick man, etc. However, just this past week, Jewell was released from custody and dropped as a suspect from the investigation since he was clearly innocent. In a means of restitution, the officials working on the case stated that he would play a large role in finding the criminal truly responsible for the planting of the pipe bomb. Jewell, however, was rather proved; can you blame him? In a press conference, he stated, "I felt like a hunted animal, followed constantly, waiting to be killed." He went on to stress the fact he was made out to look like someone with a few pretty severe character flaws, all of which were lies used to support his arrest. And, as he put it, "While the government can tell you that I am an innocent man, the government's letter cannot give me back my good name or my reputation." What's a doomed man to do? He's no O.J. Simpson, who had tremendous financial and social support; he's Richard Jewell, a former law official with only a small family to support (mentally) him during this whole ordeal.

In another case which is much closer to home, over the summer, Warwick Police's Detective Scott Horoff was finally found guilty of the murder of Victoria Cashman after nearly a decade of some serious cover-ups. Cashman, who had been Horoff's extramarital affair victim as well, finally was allowed the chance to rest in peace (so to speak). For someone to slip past the authorities (his own co-workers) for such a long period of time mystified a great deal of RI natives. Perhaps a little more investigating could have taken place in this particular case; indeed the exact opposite of Jewell's case.

The question is, can we discern between what is true and what is not when reading news stories, which should be presented as all facts? In last week's Archway, the front page story accusing a 9-year-old boy of arson was in fact false. Though it did not mention the young man's name, the truth was not told. In fact, two fourteen-year-old boys were the culprits. The sad fact of the matter is, people's emotions were toyed with, and the story was made up to look like someone with a few pretty severe character flaws, all of which were lies used to support his arrest. And, as he put it, "While the government can tell you that I am an innocent man, the government's letter cannot give me back my good name or my reputation." What's a doomed man to do? He's no O.J. Holistic education for students: Paving the way for career success

Billie Jean Sanders, a Bryant student, posed the fol lowing question on Bryant on November 15, 1994:
As a student I sometimes have to reach for an understanding of the relevance that some courses have in the business world. I am taking Statistics I now and plan on taking Statistics II next semester. I like the course much more than hu manities. I think it makes more sense to me because it applies to business situations. How does reading Gogol prepare me for the business world? The only purpose I can find for courses such as humanities and other liberal arts courses is to force a student to be intellectual. My question is: If you don't do well in liberal arts, does that mean that you aren't smart?
The question Billie Jean asked is important and, along with other faculty, have heard it from hun dreds of other students. Listed be low are the spontaneous responses to Billie Jean's questions which came the next day on Bryant from a professor teaching business (yours truly) and another teaching politics (Professor Glen Camp). I have made minor addi tions to my original response. The students should find these answers be informative and instructive.

Dr. Harsh K. Luther's re

Dr. Harsh K. Luther: A college education should ide ally develop all parts of an indi vidual. A business education, on the other hand, prepares you for a career in business. A broad liberal arts education goes beyond training you for a career but trains you to learn for life, that is, to learn how to live fully and be good citizens and good human be nings.

It is often difficult for some stu dents to imagine what applications the liberal arts component of their education will have in the future. But to have a "rich future, " you must have a love of learning. Of course, focusing on a career is vi tal, and I recommend to all my human Resource students that they start planning in their junior year.
However, there is no substitute for having depth in the fundamental life issues.

We need managers who are not only functionally trained, but who are sensitive to political, ethical, cultural, philosophical, sociologi cal and psychological issues fac ing us as a society and as individu als. Such a manager, from his or her language of speaking and from the richness of his or her ideas would tower over other man agers who are only "trained" in business but do not understand that organizations are embedded in a much larger system. Ultimately, there is no dichotomy in all of this.

Lichens are observed to grow on substrates, like rock or tree bark, which are inhospitable to other life forms. Since they provide their own energy and nutrients, they require little external nourishment. They spread from pieces of existing li chens that break off and are by the wind or animals to new sub strates. They could grow virtually anywhere, but since they grow very slowly, in richer environments other life forms, which grow faster, quickly overtake them.

Lichens serve as food for rein deers in the Arctic tundra, the source of the wool-yell ochil and lichens, the famous acid-base dye, and a dandy indicator of air pollution (li chens are tough, but they cannot grow in smoggy air). On the down side, the fungal partner in a lichen typically acquires acids that begin the process of degrading rock to soil, slowly mimicking the degradati on that organic-causing microor

ized countries.

I'm tempted to draw parallels between symbiotic organisms and the community culture of our col to right to write, nor would I like to lightly liken lichens to the night

In the beginning, there was trouble between Billie Jean and me. Our first interaction was rather heated. She asked what was wrong, and I told her I was tired doing the laundry. She asked why I didn't do more laundry. I said I was too busy studying. She asked what was "study", and I told her "study" was when you read. She asked why you read, and I said to learn. She asked what you learn by reading, and I said "knowledge". She asked what knowledge is, and I said "information". She asked what information is, and I said "facts". She asked what facts are, and I said "true facts". She asked what true facts are, and I said "really true facts". She asked what really true facts are, and I said "really, really true facts". She asked what really, really true facts are, and I said
"impossible to be sure".

Dr. Harsh K. Luther: Perhaps that's why our Board of Trustees (largely successful busi ness people) as well as AACSB (our accrediting agency for busi ness schools) demand that, roughly half of all courses taken at Bryant be in liberal arts and humanities.
As for being smart and intellec tual — what's wrong with a smart and intellectual man? My best friend is a Rhode Island CEO who graduated from the Harvard "B" school, and he's both! He thinks deeply about is sues and feels he has to in order to be a good businessman and a good citizen. Lastly, what do you do if you are narrowly technically trained and when you graduate you find there aren't any jobs in your field? Starve? If you are broadly trained you can find a good job and can also "jump" to another career if you are not technically locked into a nar row specialty.

Does this help, Billie?

10 Questions: An interview with Jill M. Quarlate

10 questions with... Jill M. Quarlate

Kenneth Wakefield

American Management Association

Jill has been very active in Business Journal activities. Besides being in the field hockey club, she is also a member of Sigma Iota Pi Sigma and the president of the Panhellic Council. Kenneth Wakefield: When did you first notice your leadership skills? J.M.Q.: It was in charge of a team in elementary school when there was a group and it needed a leader, I was that leader. That natural instinct of leadership has followed me through the majority of my life. Kenneth Wakefield: What is the most important event you have led in your life? J.M.Q.: I think the most important thing I have done was organize an event for all Greek women to help the community.

Kenneth Wakefield: Where are your leadership skills most used effectively in your daily life? J.M.Q.: The Panhellic council is where I think I use my leadership abilities the most effectively right now. I have been a vice president and active member. We have a website where we get people interested in events and then members organize what they want to do with events. J.M.Q.: Are there any other leadership skills need as president of the Panhellic Council? J.M.Q.: Yes, it takes a lot of creativity to come up with new ideas. The most important thing is to encourage enthusiasm among the rest of the group. Sometimes they might not have the same enthusiasm as I do about a project or event. I also have to be responsible, can’t be a slacker, have to manage time.

Kenneth Wakefield: What are some of the ways you improve your leadership skills? J.M.Q.: I learn mostly by watching the other leaders and admire the way they handle situations. I ask questions and listen to the majority to see what they want, because if nobody is behind you on what you’re doing, it is going to be tough.

Kenneth Wakefield: How do you feel being a student leader has affected your life? J.M.Q.: It really hasn’t affected my overall life, but I have learned many of the skills I will need out in the real world.

Kenneth Wakefield: Do you feel that influential leaders have any influence on your being a leader? J.M.Q.: I think being given an opportunity to become a leader, with less of someone else’s neck in the game, and also having the ability to build a team with people you trust and have a higher level of accountability.

Kenneth Wakefield: Are you the leader of the Bryant community? What are the things you would like to see changed? J.M.Q.: I would like to see Bryant become more of an environment where everybody can live in peace. There is a lot of segregation on this campus, I think. I think people are a little selfish. I think the Greeks get stereotyped. All people need to work on the things the Greeks do more work on.

Kenneth Wakefield: With which message could you give to potential leaders? J.Q.: Don’t stress about leadership. It doesn’t have to be stressful, just try your best to make things work, try to be a team player, and people will respond positively.

Kenneth Wakefield: Who is your hero, and why? J.M.Q.: My mother is my hero. I learn from her mistakes and look to her successes for reference, and she is always there to guide me in life.

“...The Fortune 500”...more than just a listing

Most students are aware of... or have heard of Fortune 500 companies termed “The Fortune 500.” This ranked list of America’s largest corporations is printed each year in an April issue of Fortune magazine in a special feature by the same name. The feature is available in both hard copy and electronic form in a format using a URL http://www.fortune.com.

For an idea of how the performance of the companies in the Fortune 500 can be measured, consider the following:

The final section of the feature... attempts to explain a 1995 Fortune 500 ROE of 14.6%, a phenomenon high that should reflect the current fiscal performance of rich Richard Teitell, author of the section, asks us to refer to a formula stated by E.I. du Pont de Nemours senior accounting executive, Donald Brown, in 1903 to determine what is driving Fortune 500 earnings. Brown’s formula multiplies profit margin (profits as a percent of sales) and turnover (sales as a percent of assets) and adds leverage (assets as a multiple of equity) to the formula to factor in the effect of financing costs. What is happening today with profit margins, turn- over, and leverage? Teitell believes that leverage and turnover are high and profit margins are going weak. He points out that since 1990, nearly half of all profit growth has come from faster margins and that faster margins profit impact ROE proportionately. What’s happen- ing in corporations to explain all this? The author suggests answers are: 1) Ambitious efforts in the 90’s to cut costs and boost; 2) the continuing addition of automation into the workplace and the resulting increase in efficiency; and 3) a fall in the after-tax cost of debt fueled by lower long-term interest rates; and 4) increased in the time inventory practices which have enabled companies to increase sales with fewer inventories. Another useful point is also that high because assets have been rising modestly while equity has been decreasing modestly and stock-buybacks. That is not enough information to evaluate the claims presented above and to determine company industry, and comparisons of the relevant data.

Soaring

Now that the first round of exams is over, it might be helpful to reflect on the semester you survived. How were your exams? Of course, I ask that question of many students, the response I get from nearly all reflects improvements, the results of their first round of exams were anything but “fine.”

One of the first things faculty members tell students when handing back final grades is how much they’ve learned. How many students performed poorly. They encourage students to reexamine themselves during their off-hours, and even think of studying methods students might employ to improve their exam performance. (Continued on the next page.)

The course I am sure you hit this was... no I don’t find it so daunting. The second is this. I would like to remind the remainder of the semester, and then talk about your own progress. For example, you may find that you are not up until two days before your research paper is due before you begin your research. In addition, you should back up your work and do not take it for granted. That’s all about — learning how to soar.

One more connection

F. J. Talley, Ph.D.
Vice President for Student Affairs

On Monday, October 28, President Machtley addressed the College community to discuss the upcoming strategic planning process. He wanted to inform the community of who would serve in key roles in the process and re-acquaint faculty members, staff members and administrators with his vision for Bryant College. In short, the President wants Bryant to be student-focused. His belief is simple: If we can find ways to make our students successful in college and beyond, Bryant will be successful as a result.

To help accomplish this, he announced a new initiative that I want to tell you about. He has asked all full-time employees at Bryant—f aculty members, staff members and administrators—to "connect" with five students. Research tells us that among successful students, all or almost all can identify one staff person at their college or university with whom they have made an important connection. This person could be a member of the faculty, a custodian, a Resident Director, an adviser or a secretary. But it is someone who cared, and that's the point.

There are other initiatives like this at Bryant. Our Adopt-A- Floor program, in which faculty members and freshman floors "adopt" each other, is one way for first year students to make a connection with our faculty. The Avenues to Success course, coordinated by the Learning Center, is another vehicle for linking students with employees.

So, don't be surprised if you soon receive a call from a Bryant employee who wants to get to know you over a cup of coffee. Whether you participate or not is your choice. And if you don't receive a call in the next couple of weeks and would like to participate in the program, give me a call at 232-6046, and I'll have a member of the faculty or staff call you.

This program is not designed to replace our counseling or advising system, nor is it going to duplicate any existing support program. It's really just another way to help you make a connection with Bryant. I hope you'll consider participating.

Hypocrisy and revenge

Myron Garman
Archway Staff Writer

Well, murder is murder no matter how you put it and no matter how you say it. The dictionary defines murder as the unlawful taking of somebody else's life. That is an invalid definition, for the mere fact that it's against the law doesn't make it murder. A better definition of murder is the deliberate taking of somebody's life against their will or without their permission, without a present threat on one's own life or an immediate other's life from the person killed, in which there's no other immediate option other than to kill them. Does this define murder? It's a little hard to define revenge, because that's entirely the law. So many times have justice and revenge been mixed up so much that people have been made to do what's wrong in their lives. Everyone says they want justice, they are really saying they want revenge. How is it to distinguish: Justice is merely doing what is necessary to make sure that someone is no longer thought of by anyone else, which obviously includes retributing that person and, revenge is getting back at someone; mostly using the same medium as the person who you seek revenge on. You steal something from me; I steal something from you; you kill my sister, I kill you to avenge her. Revenge is, if you can; I can see you, etc., but in many cases, especially when it comes to the criminals taking revenge and stealing and taking revenge, I think of revenge. I mean from me; I send you to jail for ten years, and just sending them to jail doesn't mean you are informing the police, etc. You can steal from me; I send you to jail for ten years, and just sending them to jail doesn't mean you are informing the police, etc.

Sure the belief that one who takes another's life deserves to die is quite valid and one that I share, but when we take it upon ourselves to enforce that belief, forcing our victims to do the same, we become murderers. And the death penalty is nothing more than legalized murder. Basically what we're saying is that it is Ok to commit murder we agree with but murder we don't agree with, damn the murderer to Hell. We manage to convince ourselves that it's no murder to approve our desire to injure another person. As long as we're not the one being injured, we can think this is correct.

In truth, the death penalty is nothing but legalized revenge. Basically what we're saying is that it is Ok to commit murder we agree with but murder we don't agree with, damn the murderer to Hell. We manage to convince ourselves that it's no murder to approve our desire to injure another person. As long as we're not the one being injured, we can think this is correct.

This is not to say that we shouldn't take action; just action. The above argument can easily be consumed as a rejection of the entire criminal system all together; it's no so that every day many innocent people go to jail and many guilty people go off free. I'm merely saying that going as far as to take someone's life is unacceptable. Once the sentence carries out it's over. No taking it back or reversing the decision. No undoing what was done or making up for it. Just a dead man who did nothing to deserve such a permanent fate. Giving the police a life sentence would at least allow that person to live, but of course, I'm against that too. Justice is making sure that someone is no longer a threat to anyone else, which means you inform a murderer (or any other criminal) and keep him/her separated from the rest of society until you no longer think him/her to be a threat (which could be for the rest of their life or a few years, whatever it takes). Do we prize life so little. We don't condone someone stealing from a thief, except of course, Robin Hood. We don't condone a con man being coned. We don't condone an assailant being assaulted; a rapist being raped; and so on and so on. But we happily condone a murderer being murdered. By our own government. Painting their blood unspeakably upon our hands. Casing us quietly, with our blind eyes, into Hell's ferocious fire, and cursing our eternal souls with the foul stench of death. For Heaven's sake, I hope we come to our senses before the world dispenses within a burning blaze.

The Mad Sage: The dream of Gods

Myron Gormham
Arts & Entertainment Staff Writer

Now cleansed of the beast, he decided to rest. He was near his objective, but still had a ways to go. As he reclined his resting place under the stars, all the surrounding animals, as if they had just been released from the most diabolical of tranquilizers,Inactiveitter into the shrubbery of the woods. He fell asleep once more knowing that soon his quest would reap him the ultimate reward; he would achieve what others merely dream about.

As he closed his eyes, like flitting on the channel on a TV, he instantly opened them back up. He was standing in the middle of a barren field with no sign of any kind of life anywhere. He thought to himself, "Is this a dream?"

Then a cold wind came upon him, freezing him still. But as quickly as it froze him, it released him from its icy grasp. It was as though it was copying his physiology, but more like his inner physique.

As he looked, it was as though he was watching a painter skillfully creating his next masterpiece. Suddenly their were trees, flourishing in the dance of the wind, as flowers blossomed and the bumblebees harmonize, Air, there was now air. He just realized that there was no air before; how could he still be alive? Then he look at the sky as the blue beauty emerged untainted by civilization; it was mesmerizing as its light blue dilated with the gentle grace of white. Then his attention was brought to the ground a smooth running river flushed undamaged by the will of others. His eyes become blazed as he witnessed the mighty explosion that brought forth the sun, and as his eyes cleared, so did his mind. Then from the sky came a st领导干部e of glistening sand, and it plunged deep into the river before him, every last grain.

Suddenly, from the river emerged a vivid life, life of all kinds from the furthest corners of the earth. This was the same old Steven universe. He realized that though he was reborn, he was still dead. And now that he was about to begin his new life, he fully understood it all.

He woke up from the dream with a big smile. He looked at the water一股 more time and whispered to the wind, "Yes, I can breathe again."

"Life is best served on buttered bread, rich with inhibition."

"Like Adam and Eve, let no man (God) deprive you of the fruit."

Greek sponsor children's Halloween party

As bride, a lion, butterflies, Dracula, Elmo, fraternity and sorority members, and much more, They all combined for a great time at the Annual Halloween Party for the Bryant employees' children sponsored by Greek Life. There was a great turnout with about 50 children altogether. There were many games and activities for the children to participate in. These included pictures for the kids to color (which made the Greeks also have fun doing), a doughnut-eating contest, pin-the-nose-on-the-pumpkin, and the Halloween movies that were being shown throughout the party. The kids were also greatly amused by an entertaining magician. One of the best events of the day, however, was the Best Costume Contest

Wanna catch a movie?

Nigel "Dead in Denver" Fubara
Arts & Entertainment Staff Writer

This week in entertainment we have been blessed with a plethora of tasty entertainment choices. Movies, plays, concerts, videos and, of course, we always have the option of playing video games in a dark room until we have Nintendo thumb and the shape of the characters are burnt into our retinas a that we see; experience; one summer I played so much "Resident Evil" I would see in pieces falling in my dreams and I would wake up begging for the long red piece. Speaking of video games, next week, a new writer will be reviewing the new Nintendo 64 and other hot new game playing platform forms, video game releases and much more, so be sure to look for it.

On the movie front, I have three new movies to review; The Ghost and the Darkness starring Kirk Douglas and Val Kilmer, High School High starring Jon Lovitz and Tia Carrera, and Steven King's, Thinner, starring nobody in particular (or at least no one you would care about).

As for The Ghost and the Darkness, this is definitely worth your time and money. This story, set during the western colonization of Africa, is about a bridge builder and the unique problem he encounters, in the way of man eating lions. This is one of the best movies of the fall. This Val Kilmer animal movie makes the last Val Kilmer animal movie (The Island of Dr. Moreau) look as exciting as a shadow puppet at a very lame party. The special effects will make you wonder; "How did they do that?," and the acting and writing are excellent. Catch it. Now on to matters less agreeable; the Jon Lovitz movie sucked!! This spoo of Dangers Mind and the incredibly awful, The Substitute was not funny; it wasn't even vaguely amusing. There were a few light chortles, but this nasty piece of celluloid trash would leave the untrained filmmaker in the fetal position begging to be shot. The addition of Tia Carrera's eye candy (very pleasing eye candy) cannot cover the horrible badness of this wretched movie. Steven King's Thinner was the same old Steven King horror movie. I am now making a plea to all readers. Please ignore Mr. King. I am hoping that if we ignore him and ban him totally from being horror fiction and film producer he will either begin producing better products (not just haunted coat- ers that want to rule the world and burn down a little town near Bangor, Maine, it's always in Bangor Maine), if he doesn't produce a better product he may actually stop, which isn't a half bad idea.

As for plays, there is Les Miserable's playing at the Providence Performing Arts Theater, definitely worth the rather expensive entrance fee. I would warn you though, it is rather long and there is no thermometer device being used to threaten the happiness of the planet (that seems to be a necessary plot device in film today). Sylvia is playing at the Trinity Repertory, A good time would be had by all. It wouldn't hurt to check out the coffee shop district on Theatre Street at the same time, and while you are in the area, you could check out the bands playing at "Fados" void of nothing (Beef). Last week, Goodie Mob, Phishbone, and De La Soul played at the Strand (I did a back stage interview with all three bands after the show—one of the perks of being a WMPF deity; excerpts of the interviews will run later). In the coming weeks, The Pharcyde, Susan Vega and Luscious Jackson will be playing at Lupo's Tune in to 88.7 WFME during the week for ticket giveaways and to listen to taped interviews of the bands. Really cool to check out video, Faces of Death. I went down to our friendly Major Video this week and picked up this little gem, among other videos (which I can't mention it this conservative paper unless all them instructional anyway). Faces of Death is a mind blowing (literally) trip through the grotesque and macabre. Check it out. Enough talking and on to the doing. I'm off to continue spreading vicious and heroic gossip through the halls and to propagate ignorance while starting commentary debates about Albert Einstein and how Tupac Shakur isn't really dead. As you can see I have my hands full. Till next time, young Jedi may the force be with you.

Stereotyping is an automatic way of thinking. It encompasses who we are, where we all come from, family background, and, if you will, inclusion of all the ingredients of diversity (and or sameness). Stereotyping means that we have made up our minds about someone new to us, or strange to us without the knowledge of that person or group. It means that we have formed an opinion before we have all the facts. Basically, and easily explainable, a stereotype is a belief that we harbor within that all people of a certain group have some common quality. For instance: All blondes are dumb. All Arabs are terrorists. Boys are better at math than girls. Blacks are natural athletes. All old people are politically conservative. Stereotyping, or as we who are in the business of diversity like to say, cultural biases, or stereotypes is sort of like a road map, only we call it a mental map. Such mental maps influence one's perception and judgement. That's when you hear people making statements like: Oh, she's from Mississippi- that means she's a bigot, because all southerners are bigots. Like the maps that are made for our travel experiences, we need to improve our mental maps - vis a vis, by obtaining reliable knowledge of the territory. One way to do this is by first hand knowledge. Get to know the territory. The more experience we have with certain things, the more reliable is our knowledge of them.

Most people are not interested in this mental map alteration. Why? Because most of us believe, or assume, that our beliefs, attitudes, and opinions are correct. And they are the right conclusions to have. I listen to inform you, or anyone within earshot of any lecture that I give. NO ONE IS BORN WITH BELIEFS - THEY ARE LEARNED. Developing our mental maps (our beliefs, opinions, attitudes) goes on for a lifetime.

To change the course means CHANGE. And we, members of the human race, resist change. (In some parts of the country it is worse than other - New England, for instance is known for its lack of change.)

What does the map-territory tell us about stereotypes? Road maps are changed sometimes weekly, sometimes monthly, or even yearly, because it is learned that the map no longer matches that territory and therefore is NO Good to the user. Bad maps lead us to jump to conclusions, or make bad decisions, that will result in bad experiences or just plain mistakes. By creating and using mental maps that are a good match to the territory we can avoid bad experiences and encourage more successful life experiences. This just doesn't happen overnight; it requires programming and it takes careful building of reliable knowledge of new territories. And it is important to state, creating the map to fit the territory. Ex: Remember the stereotype about all old people being politically conservative? Investigating that territory, we need to observe MANY older people before creating a mental map about them, which could turn our view to be erroneous. Also, we will soon discover that using words like ALL or EVERY should be eliminated from our vocabularies - WHY? Because no matter how far we travel, how smart we perceive ourselves to be, no matter how old we get, we will never, repeat NEVER, have the opportunity of meeting ALL or EVERY old person, or ALL or EVERY person or thing in a specific territory.

Creating a sound mental map means that we choose our words carefully in forming the map. We will soon discover that meeting scores of people will wake us up to the fact: People in the same group are different from each other as well as from me. If we have this kind of awareness of our own limitations, vis a vis, our mental maps, coupled with the desire to change some things about ourselves such as stereotyping, we will reduce the chance of jumping to the wrong conclusions about other people - those people that are not necessarily a part of our every day life.

The Gunman’s House Niggers

by Herman F. Thomas

I am a slave tin, Against my own will,
Done so by the stress and pain,
Tying my brain into knots,
Because my brothers work hard for a cot and three hot,
By any means necessary they “buck” their shots.

They are only the weapon, they do not pull the triggers,
When the genocide is through the gunman will turn around and call them “niggers.”
A just reward for a job well done,
While the rest of us slaves fry in the sun,
Working the fields from 9 to 5,
That is all we can do to stay alive.

Trying to “stay up,” trying to “maintain,”
Grieving and crying over the brothers and sisters those “House Niggers” have slain,
They remain, in the house of the master, the so-called man,
This I can not comprehend, this I can not understand,
Why do they give their brothers the left instead of their right hand.

Prolonging our enslavement, stretching our hours in the field,
Shining his shoes, serving his food and polishing the gunman’s shield.
Black only by color, minus the pride,
You could not tell they were black if you looked on the inside,
Under the master’s roof is where they reside,
In the gunman’s holster is the place they hide,
They relieve the gunman’s itch by aiding in genocide.

In anticipation they cock their hammers and ready their triggers,
Ready to do their work as the “Gunman’s House Niggers.”

New Kid on the Block

by Jennifer Carvahlo

New Kid on the Block
see if you can find a friend in me
I’ve lived here all my life and only made enemies

They all want to come and play
but I’m to be their toys
They don’t like to share and they pull on my long hair
It’s no wonder why I hate boys

Mama says I gotta get along cus’ one day they’ll be put to good use
All he does is stick out his tongue and give me cooties
What could possibly be worth the abuse

She says they’ll lay me down and make me a woman
Instead of pulling, they’ll run their fingers through my hair
She say at age 23 they’ll stop drooling and find the ambition to share

I guess you can come on my swing as long as we both have a turn Bear with me I’m trying to make friends with the New Kid on the Block something I’ve always found so hard to learn.

BACCHUS
Leanne Manzer

Hello everyone! First of all, congratulations to Doris on her upcoming two awards. Just a reminder, the sweaterman vender will be coming to Bryant soon, so save your money! He will be here Tuesday, November 12, so look out for him!

Don’t forget, nominations for upcoming elections are coming up at the next meeting. Be prepared if you want to run for office. If you want to vote, you have to pay your dues, so pay up!

All members, please fill out your turquoise papers so that we can all get to know each other a little better. These will be put together in a newsletter that all members will receive.

I will look forward to seeing you all at the next meeting on Wednesday, November 6, in room 2A in the Bryant Center!

Betatrha Pi
David Koestner

Hello again everyone. November is approaching us shortly as the semester is flying by. Our annual put-a-thon will be coming in a few weeks. The brothers of Beta Theta Pi encourage all to help us raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

We have nine new names facing our Fraternity. Our pledges consist of Fletch, Jethro, Protector, Boyd, Stout, Angus, Snyde, Chio, and Wilson. Oscar made a new friend Friday night, Robin thought he was very polite. Merlin now has a blind side thanks to Flip. Cobb found the new bathroom on Saturday night. Bionte is thinking about going to Six Flags. Ren found his belongings somewhere other than in his room. Hey Ots, I don’t think you will ever make a good bartender.

Quote of the week: “Thanks for the selflessness of Gumer, we have here tonight!”

Darwin’s sleep quote of the week: “The reaction I get now thinking about it looking back... Maybe one or two of them... We are just running around freaking out, and just leaped into my soul period, and their still in there.”

BOAC
Bryan D. Magnus

Hello everyone! I hope you enjoyed the great weather this weekend, but don’t get too attached because it’s gone! That’s right, it’s ski season. People have already been skiing for two and a half weeks at Killington and Sunday River. So what better time to start/keep coming to BOAC meetings? Avi will need tons of help planning ski trips, and there is plenty of administrative things that need to get done. Also, it is a great time to get in on some of the trips, like indoor rock climbing for only $5.

Well, I know that this is a short one, but I am saving all the good stuff for Thursday’s meeting. See ya there at 5 p.m. in room 2B of the Bryant Center.

The Bryant Players
Megan Mirkovich

Happy fall everyone! Congratulations to the directors of the dessert theater, Rob and Susan. Make us proud guys! Good luck to everyone who tried out for the Bryant Players’ production of M*A*S*H.

In other news, Becca, Don, and Jason were very excited when the Yankees won the World Series. Let the celebration begin! Becca, though, wished that she could be at the parade in New York City instead of being stuck in class. Hope everyone takes full advantage of the Fall Weekend activities starting on Friday. Some of the Players will be taking a trip to Providence on Saturday night, which should prove to be an interesting evening. Till next week.

Delta Chi
James Dow

I’ll begin this week’s column with the D-Chi sports report. In football, our A-Team remains in the playoff picture, while our B-Team currently holds the 2nd place spot in the division and awaits the post season. Our volleyball team (if we still have one) has made the playoffs easily and plays this week (I think). Thanks to the Softball Team for Friday afternoon. To Jane & Jamie; Ego & myself want a re-match. Hey Scooter, when is the wedding? A happy B-Day goes out to Magoo, not Magoo. It feels like he never left if you walk past Buckley’s room. Also a thanks to Duke & Lefty for stepping by this weekend.

Saturday night was in the townhouse, as K6 hosted the non- invite party. Stiltz turned in early, while Hoey should have. Newman will now take the long way back to the floor, as he learned that he was the first way on Saturday. Scooter had an unnecessary visit to the side of MJ, while Tully and Soto stepped by late night to announce the outcome of the World Series. A thanks goes out to Delta Zeta for a great time on Saturday at the Dungeon Party.

A personal question I would like to address. How do you get kicked out of the same place twice? Personally, I have been kicked out of better places than Foxboro Stadium, right Buckley....

Our AM’s are doing well. Keep going guys, it is well worth it. Hey P-Nut, never leave your door unlocked. Commander, Barchule, & Baloo took off to Swanson’s on Saturday. Wait, let me guess, Beak got made fun of. Walker talked about Tyson, and Pong looked rough as he did two years ago. Goose & Tony reminisced about last year by gracing their old room and the residents in it. Goose, try to stay out of the freshman dorms; you live on the floor!

A good time was had by all the tailgating crowd at Foxboro on Sunday. Oh yes, F-Sharp was in attendance, while JoBu and the Commander supervised the operation. Also thanks to Harry for the grill and the aggravation that followed.

Lastly, congratulations to the Greek Community for putting on a successful Halloween party on Sunday. And especially to Tanya, for all her help to make sure the event was a huge success; next time I’ll be the feed Tea... Until next week, born at Foxboro and leaving for good!

Prediction of the Week: Bulls over Celtics! 120-94, Friday Night at the Floor.

Stat of the Week: Anything Wally has said this weekend, take your pick.

Tip of the Week: Never take another shirt at Foxboro without permission (JD).

Delta Zeta
Nicole Greenlaw

The sisters of Delta Zeta want to welcome our National Representative to Bryant College. We hope your stay in New England is a memorable one.

Good luck to all the new members in the Greek community. We want to wish everyone a safe and fun Halloween.

Well, here's the story... We were excited to have many alumni come up this weekend: Smiley, Wheeler, and Chad all graced us with their presence. In the mean time, we had a great time on both Friday and Thursday night. Saturday saw Sandy get invited everywhere. The night, nonetheless was still filled with excitement. The real excitement was our Football game on Saturday morning. Ryan, Pete, and I reffed, and often had to conference on many difficult calls. The game was intense at first, but after the half-time break, we seemed to think everybody was a bit more mellow. Still a great day for football. Sunday night, we went to the Pats, and I didn't have to sit in the "little room." Instead, it was "Get your souvenir mugs here!" Not much else exciting going on other than the fact that I'm anticipating graduation. Oh, yeah... Muffins came up one night at like 2 AM, and left around 6. I don't know when, but I'm pretty sure it wasn't just a dream. I hope everyone has their costume picked out already... Time is ticking.

Now for the part you've all been waiting for... With the assistance of my Staff Writer, Ryan Deloney, coming straight out of our central office in Cleveland, Ohio... The top 10 reasons why they're taking so long to build their so-called "Pizza-Hut"

10) It's not really a Pizza Hut, it's Faculty Suite I., or as Late-night... That is where all of the cool Faculty hung.

9) The Info Desk is building another Info Desk, soon to be called the "Low Down" Because it is located on the first floor. New facility will provide the students with the real information.

8) Construction Delays, as Tupper's old inventory is being counted for an old IRS Audit.

7) Franchise Conflicts involving name disputes. It really should be called Pizza-corner. I mean it's more a corner than a hut... isn't it?

6) Construction was temporarily halted because toxic waste removal units had to move in to remove what was originally thought to be Tupper's Tomato sauce.

5) Due to the inappropriately actions of upper level management, Brycol Lost their Pizza license.

4) The only thing really built back there is the stage, lighting, and Special Effects for the Ozzy concert on December 3rd in the Bryant Center.

3) Its just like the Coke Machines... Apparently somebody is not doing WHATEVER IT TAKES.

2) Sandy, a Loyal Tupper fans and advocate, gained vengeance recently by infiltrating the Pizza-Hut mainframe, and deleted the accounts payable to Construction... NO pay, NO Pizza... It's all about Tupper.

1) By day they build it, and by night... Ole' Man Tupper tears it down...

Well that's the way the cookie crumbles ladies and gentlemen... Well before I go, I read something this weekend... it was Abraham Lincoln... I'm paraphrasing, because I don't remember word for word... but it goes a little something like this... "Things do come to those who wait, but only what is left by those who hustle." Well... Later.

Hello everyone! I hope everyone has enjoyed their week. We would like to start by congratulating Belen and Melissa on their interviews and Nikki on her second interview. Good luck, we will be thinking about you. Toscas, please get better soon, we love you. The sisters would like to thank Tyler from EZ for contributing to our Jail N Bail, we appreciate it. Happy 21st to McCarron, we love you Hadji and hope you enjoyed your birthday.

This weekend was wild. We'll start by thanking TEP for their wine and cheese, we had a great time, they have any questions. We would all like to congratulate Mike and Ken for earning their brown belts. It seems that several years of hard work has paid off. If we all continue to work at the pace we have lately, hopefully many more can join the ranks.

With Halloween this week, it should be a note not to dress as Karate Fighters. It is also not a good idea to try kick solid objects such as doors and cement walls.

Everyone should stay tuned in class for word of future weekend events. Hopefully, there should be a bit more left in us this semester. On a final note, we should remind Keith that you do not need to dress up in a costume to scare anyone. Like the Hitman, being yourself is usually the best approach. Until next time, BKKA!

Sorry Phi-Tep didn't make the finals, but watch out for next season. And here's to the NKOTB. As for Friday night, we all had a great time at the dance. Thanks to DZ and KT for driving, we really appreciated it. Thanks also to the Smithfield Police for chauffeuring us. The sisters took a trip to Foxwoods on Saturday night. Thanks to Nader for everything, especially Frankie M. And the three magic words are: Keep it on!

The ghost man has disappeared once again. Sunday, Sahara says I love you and "hey baby." Congrats, Divine, for the awesome two nights in row. Spencer, we will miss you, especially the presence of Kurtis. So long Captain Red, Sunny and Jesus. Rock on Gibraltar, what an enlightening show! Can anyone tell us exactly what was going on in the bathroom that night? A random trip to CT was made...watch out for flying bats. Wheels, how the heck do you work that VCR anyway?

It must be Sunny proof. Maybe you need to read the wine book to figure it out. Nice kitty! Hey top of four, rock on. Lush, have you found your shoe? While you're looking, watch out from above; but hey you're the smartest man alive, Sunny and Spreech. Don't make Sunny mad because you'll never know what will come flying at you. And now for the quote of the week, "It was flagrantly flying in the wind!" Ohar. Is the suspense killing you, Woody? You'll have to wait till next week...

Society For Human Resource Management
Jennifer Parkhurst

Hi everyone! I hope that everybody's midterms went well. We wanted to thank Mr. Rick Smith, Vice President of Fleet Bank, for joining us last week. The topic was the role of the HR Generalist in the corporate environment. His talk was both informative and interesting, while giving students a view of the application of Human Resources in the real world. We would also like to thank Professors Pollard, Luthar, and Sinclair for attending the meeting and supporting our organization, as well as the great turnout from the student body. Mr. Michael Oliver of Norell Staffing Services will be joining us on Tuesday, November 12. As usual, the meeting will be on room 2A in the Bryant Center at 4 p.m. Free pizza and soda will be served. Everyone is welcome, we look forward to seeing you there.

by May Kule

Hello, how is everyone doing this week? Happy Halloween! Things are pretty good on the Sigma front, except for the fact that someone stole our Banner! We want it back ASAP!! We have our annual Crush Party tomorrow night. I can't wait; it's gonna be a good time! Watch out for punches, though. Jamie, Brenda and Jamie are coming back! It was great to see Finn on Friday night when she came to pick up Glumpy (AKA, Tonya) and bring her home. Hey Maureen and Gina, TGI Friday's must chocolate chip is a good time; I don't think you're supposed to finish the whole thing in one sitting, though. Miller night was a good time at Rents; can't beat free T-shirts and glasses. Mel, what was that face? Do you think we have enough tickets? If we sit here long enough we'll all win. Cider Jack night was too cool, thanks to Larry and Holly. I got a shirt, and we all got glasses. Hey, is this Bobby Brown? Closet Cheezie bail! Hey, watch out for those people! Gina, I think you should have driven.

Thanks, TEP, for a great time on Thursday, Sarah, you left me! Friday night late night was cool. The name of the game is Sarah. "I'm brain washing you." The video camera is a good time; thanks Gina, Cobb, you said you weren't taping. "Cindy loves the camera."

Saturday was cool; too bad our game didn't work out. Sa rah, how's that new jacket treating you? Hey guys, our plan in 15 didn't work too well.

Tonya would like to thank a few people for a great turkey dinner, and a certain townhouse for eating all the leftovers; sorry four the mistakes; you were still welcome. We were also grateful to anyone who cares "Don't try to be a cool kid like me and spray your ankle twice in three weeks, its not as fun as it looks." Thanks to 18 for the new table.

Michelle, it was good to see you Saturday, but you left too early! Maureen, do the Olympic rings? Mel. Michelle, I know you loved the magician.

Last but not least, thanks to Delta Chi for our Pumpkin; it's awesome! Oh by the way, how far do you guys live from home? That's

DPS CRIME PREVENTION TIPS

HOUSE/APARTMENT
- Equip the house/apartment with solid exterior doors, tamper-resistant hinges, and deadbolt locks. If the landlord hasn’t provided them, ask for them to be installed.
- Keep a radio and lights on during absences. Put auxiliary locks on sliding doors and a spacer in the tracks to resist lifting.
- Make sure the area by the front door is lit properly. If the apartment or house cannot be seen from the street or parking lot, ask the landlord to trim the shrubs.
- Stop newspaper delivery and have the post office hold the mail if you plan to be away for more than a few days.

VEHICLE
- Have a roadworthy vehicle and do not allow your gas tank to get low. Learn how to change a flat tire.
- Plan routes before leaving. Let someone know where you are going and when you’ll return.

- Park in well-lit areas and always lock all vehicle doors. Place belongings in the trunk or on the floor covered up.

- Whether at home or on the road, you are primarily responsible for your own safety/security. Be aware of those around you. If something feels wrong, get away from the situation immediately.

- Call Ginnie Bowry, DPS Crime Prevention Specialist, 232-6001, if you wish to borrow books & videos on personal safety for men and women, or ask to have DPS give a safety/security presentation for you and fellow students/faculty/staff.

This weekend was rather bad, and I went home. See ya next week! (I have to write something because Chumpy is here watching me.) From what I hear, this weekend was the absolute best weekend in Bryant history, but I guess every weekend is (Ya right!).

Enzo, come on now, there are many PIUSHS in the sea, no need to rape over one. Luca, I was starting to worry a bit about you, but all those worries ended this weekend when I saw the remnants of this weekend's guest AA Gal Ga Gal! I'm sure HOOTERS was a treat, fellas. A nice way to start off Friday night with a great meal at a fine restaurant. Of course, you were only interested in the fine cuisine.

I would like to thank DZ for full TKE attendance at the Dungean Party Saturday night. Well, that's all folks.

Oh, Capt. Cassanza, did I mention the floor enough? I wouldn't want to leave you girls out.

For grand finale I would like to thank Cecil for the lovely, thoughtful present he left me! It was so nice of you. I'll have to think of someway to repay you.

Women's Rugby
Summer Wallace and Erica Wright

Hey Ruggers! We hope to have our Literacy community service project in order soon. We hope everyone's parents had a good time after last week's game against Brandeis. We showed them that we have class. We put up a good fight on Saturday girls, but it just wasn't enough to beat Stoneshill. We'll make up for that this Saturday. We play URI away, this Saturday, for our last game of the season. Thanks to Stoneshill for showing us a good time—just kidding— but as always, we found our own entertainment.

We hope everyone had fun on Thursday. We'd like to say good riddance to the coaches after they tried to clear us out of house and home, but we were happy to sing our favorite song for the last time. Lencord, I'm glad you didn't fall off the sunshine mountain. Trish, I'm glad you didn't fall out of the window.

Deanna, we were glad you could join the "bunch" on Saturday. I think we got a little bit too into character, girls. There were also sightings of the cast of Hec-Haw at Scoobie's party. Shorts, what were you supposed to be again?

The Hunger Coalition
Shane Schaefer

The Hunger Coalition is about helping local churches feed the homeless population of the Providence area. We have our meetings in the Bryant Center Room every other Tuesday. Our next meeting is Tuesday, November 5. Feel free to come down if you are interested. You can call Brian at x8300 or me at x4138 for more information.

Tip of the week: Little things can make big differences if you see them through.

Pizza Hut

Students interested in earning and learning with Pizza Hut.

Training provided. We'll do our best to provide flexible schedules. If interested, pickup an application from any Dining Services location.

Harry's Training begins on Monday, November 4th.

Bryant's ice hockey team started its season on a winning note last weekend at non-league opponent RISD. Bryant jumped out to an early lead with a goal by Jack Edward, who was assisted by Steve Delaney and Dave Zielinski. Tim O'Brien added another goal in the third period. Assistant coach Kevin Parke shot for the Bulldogs' second goal. Paul Dube scored an insurance goal early in the third period. Hann on and Dave Dolph. Bryant then held the lead as Pete Somers and Vin Di Golia combined in net for 25 saves and a 3-1 win.

In their second game, Bryant visited non-league opponent Wheaton College. The team showed off its offensive firepower in steamrolling Wheaton 10-2. Bryant received an outstanding performance from Zielinski, who recorded three goals and 3 assists. The team raced out of the blocks scoring 4 times in the first 10 minutes on 2 goals by Seth Anderson and 1 each by Hann on and Zielinski. Bryant's potent offense got help from several players: Dube and Delaney, 1 goal and 2 assists each, Edwards, 1 goal and 1 assist, and Shawn Tyler, 2 assists. Assists were also credited to Brian Turtolato, Eric Toussaint, O'Brien and Somers. The play of the game came when Eric "The Sniper" Toussaint wired a bullet the length of the ice catching Wheaton's goalie completely off guard. Di Golia, 15 saves, and Somers, 19 saves, each made several spectacular plays and combined to limit Wheaton's offensive production.

Bryant will host its first home game of the season this Saturday, November 2, at 7 p.m., against league rival, The Coast Guard. This is Bryant's first league game, and they invite everyone to come and show their support. The team hopes to see you there!

Directions to Burri¥ville (Home Games): Take Rt. 7 north (left at school entrance) for about 6 miles. Turn right at blinking yellow light. Athlete of the Week

Michelle Motolla

After two weeks off, this cross country runner posted her best time of the season at the Stonehill Invitational last weekend. Motolla's time of 19:44 was good for a second place finish at the meet. Her continuing improvements throughout the season has helped the women's team turn it around after a poor start. Good Job, Michele!

Volleyball Cruseto Halloween Classic Title

The Bulldogs (15-8, 5-2 NE-10), who rolled to five consecutive victories last week, captured their second straight Bryant Halloween Classic title.

Bryan was led by tournament most valuable player Jennifer Carvalho (E. Providence, R.I./Providence) in her first action since October 16. Carvalho paced Bryant's 3-0 opening round win over St. Rose with 29 assists and five digs. Her best performance came in the second set where she turned in a 35-assist, 12-dig effort in a 3-0 triumph over Sacred Heart.

Wendy Jackson (Guilford, CT/Guilford) was named to the all-tournament team. The junior defensive specialist sparked Bryant's come-from-behind win in the finals against Springfield College, recording nine digs.

Men's lacrosse takes title match

Steve Tully

The Bryant men's lacrosse team is off to a fast start. After barely dropping the Bridgewater State Tournament opener against RISD, the Bulldogs have made their case. On Saturday, October 19, the Bulldogs beat Dean College 5-3, and then went on to defeat Mount Ida in sudden death overtime, 5-4. The team was led by Dean College co-MVP, Todd Partridge, 2-0. After this, though, it was pure offense and simple determination and desire set in. Fueled by single goals by Anthony Pettigrew, Bert Alvarado, Steve Tully, and two by Frank Pepe, Bryant scored five straight and never looked back. The key to their attack was the defense, and Goalie Mark "Wheels" Frantz, who had 16 saves. Coach Chris Libutti was very impressed with their second half play, "They were tough, made the hits when we needed it, and most importantly, controlled the ball. These guys deserve to win; they practice and play harder than anyone."

The second game vs. Mount Ida took a different approach. Bryant went up 5-0 at halftime and was halfway from winning the tournament. However, as they expected, Mt. Ida stepped it up in the second half and, with less than a minute left, tied it up at 5-5. On overtime, they battled and, with 20 seconds left, Steve Congalo found Frank Pepe, who shot the ball with his back to the net, and the Bulldogs won! Bert Alvarado, Steve Tully, and Todd Partridge also had goals in the tournament clincher. These are the first games Bryant has won in five years, and they are not content yet. Next Saturday, November 2, they will close out their fall season with a home game against Nichols College at 3:30 p.m. Please come and support their efforts. Their record stands at 2-2, and with another week of hard work, they should be ready to take on Nichols.
