Part-time and professional development programs host information sessions

submitted by Suzanne H.

On Wednesday evening, October 16, the Graduate School, the Center for Management Development and Admissions for Non-Traditional Students held a joint information session for prospective students. More than 30 people attended the event and explored Bryant's part-time programs and professional development courses. This is the first time that the three departments have collaborated on a cooperative event and it was a distinct success.

"We were very pleased with the turnout," said Stacie Levine, Assistant Director of Admissions for the Graduate School. "It's clear that working people are interested in all of Bryant's part-time programs and want to explore their career options."

"Cathy Lalli, Assistant Director of Non-Traditional Programs, added "This was an opportunity to spread the word that Bryant College offers flexible scheduling for people with full-time lives. The people that attended our sessions had done their homework about our programs and knew what they wanted. We provided the details and encouragement to help them follow through on their goals."

The three departments made brief presentations and current students in the programs were on hand to answer questions.

"Based on this positive response, we are already planning several information sessions for the spring," said Beverly Mountian, Assistant Director for Corporate Training. "We're looking forward to letting even more people know all that Bryant College has to offer."
Sharing electrons

Registration time is here; the much awaited time of year when you plan out your spring schedule has finally arrived. This will be the first time registering for many of the freshmen out there and the last time for a lot of the seniors; how exciting for both groups. Now is the time to get the low-down on the classes, teachers, and times offered from your peers and academic advisors. Regardless of your registration number, this is something that really should not be taken lightly; your decisions now will rule your life for the entirety of next semester (you know this already). When deciding your schedule, be sure to make adequate time for studying, working, eating, sleeping, and traveling. A schedule which exists on only Mondays and Wednesdays (is this possible?) looks really nice on paper, but when it comes to exam time (especially midterms) this type of arrangement can prove to be rather difficult. Understand your own limits and avoid overextending yourself.

In choosing extracurricular activities, be sure not to take on too much responsibility at one time (there is certainly a lot of opportunities available). Some people out there can handle multiple tasks very well, but if you have previous responsibilities, be sure to avoid doing everything yourself. Having a nice resume is fine, but too many activities can be detrimental to your GPA, which should be your main purpose for even being here. Let your superiors (bosses and other people whom you must answer to) know your time constraints, etc.; letting them know your own situation gives them a better perspective of where you are coming from. If your grades are going down the tubes (because of other obligations), now is the time to admit to yourself that you need to rearrange your schedule. It is better to give up nonacademic activities and regain stature within the classroom when you have the chance; the loss of ego suffered when someone else admits your defeat for you is much worse feeling than the admittance of self-defeat to yourself. Efficiency is our main goal in life, but aiming too high often produces a subpar result.

Also, don't be afraid to ask for help. Humans working together produce a synergistic effect (McNally 10/23); others out there may have already experienced something similar to a present factor in your life, and their advice might encompass other factors which you never considered. Getting advice is not succumbing and shouldn't be looked upon as a very last resort to solving a problem.

So go out there and break a pencil; choose classes which interest you and meet your degree requirements. Heck, be a little gussy and take a Saturday class. Don't be afraid to ask other students for their opinions on a class. See the professor and ask them to get an idea of who you'd like instructing you in a particular course. If you have a really high registration number, don't fear; add-drop can be the savior in your life next semester. Have fun.

Darwin disproved at Bryant

The faculty and administration here at Bryant have done something amazing: They have disproved one of the most well-known theories ever. Charles Darwin concluded that only the strong will survive. Yet at this fine institution for business, this is not the case. On the contrary, many weak (primarily core business) courses, such as Mgt. Theory, CIS, MIS, BU400, and POM, which have survived for too long. The courses themselves are not necessarily the problem, but at least not in intent. Rather the problem lies in the being so corrupted with technology that is out of date, terminology which is unnecessary, and other forms of busy work, that they are no longer of service to the student. Too many students wonder, "Why did I bother coming to class today?" and, what's worse, too many of us seniors wonder, "Why did I realize this problem is not unique to Bryant. Actually, it, like many other problems here, is shared by several other colleges and universities.

I alluded that in theory some of these classes have potential to be something more than pointless. In fact I feel that a course not reaching its' potential is the fault of the instructor. Instructors who, due to their tenure, have become complacent and lost the initiative to change the curriculum and actually provide a "real world" education. Instead they keep on providing a theoretical, virtual-education,-based, curriculum which most of the students have long forgotten by graduation day. I also feel that it is in part the academic administration's fault for not fulfilling their commitment to the consumers (i.e. students) by ensuring a proper and practical education via a stronger and more relevant curriculum (excluding Pres. Machley, who has the potential to turn this problem around). I would be a fool not to mention the student body's guilt, too. We, over the years, have learned to "beat the system" and give the teachers of these courses what they want, not really caring about the education itself. But who can blame us; if we are to succeed in the business world, we will have to grasp all the opportunities we are presented with.

The college does recognize several of the problems in fact; why else would the administration pay several thousand dollars to answer the question, "Who are we?"? By the way, had I been consulted, I would have suggested the question, "Why don't the students like who we are?" instead. I will be graduating this May, and, looking back on those classes, I began to answer my own question as to why I do not feel I have received a proper business education here. I felt that the solution involves more practical, not harder, course work.

On that note, I have a challenge for the faculty and administration: Create an institution which provides a valuable education. To do this, the administration is going to have to do their part by requiring some members of the faculty to change their stagnant curriculums and following through with changes suggested by student surveys and the like. If the change is not due the system is unfortunately here to stay, the administration will have to be creative in developing a method of controlling faculty performance.

The faculty, on the other hand, is going to have to conquer the effects of tenure, and will have to lift their eyes up from the text book to see the world around them. Furthermore, the faculty will have to get over the feeling that 'the students do not care' and make us care. After all, some of us will hopefully be successful business people someday, and if you want a donation for your precious endowed, you are going to have to earn it. I have brought my concerns to the administration before, only to get the run around. Meeting with several department chairs, I was turned down. But I was told by another professor, who then told me it was an issue to be taken up with the professors themselves. So if any members of the faculty or administration would like to meet with me to further discuss my concerns, feel free to call me. I'm in the book.

Dissection not for everyone

Approximately seven million vertebrate animals are killed each year for dissection in US biology classrooms. To illustrate the magnitude of this many animals, consider that if you lined them all up end to end, they would stretch more than twice the length of California.

And for what purpose? What gains are made when students cut open and explore the insides of frogs and cats and fetal pigs and dogfish sharks? The Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) believes that whatever benefits might arise from dissections, they are far outweighed by the associated costs. Allow me to explain.

First, there is the animal suffering involved. Investigations into the dissection trade have been documented; among other abuses, cats were being drowned ten at a time. In 1995, about 10,000 cats were dumped into crowded gas chambers, rats emblazoned with formaldehyde while still living, dozens of live frogs piled into sacks for days or weeks without food, and sickly turtles kept in filthy, overcrowded holding tanks. These sorts of conditions appear to be quite commonplace, and though they are excusable and sometimes illegal, they are perhaps not surprising in a business where the "merchandise" is going to end up dead anyway.

Then there are human social concerns. A principal goal of life science education is to teach respect for life. Dissection is an intrinsically violent exercise; it involves killing, preserving, cutting apart, then discarding an animal. However well-intentioned an instructor’s desire to teach respect for animals, the typical dissection exercise will tend to undermine it by devaluing the lives of other creatures to the level of expendable objects. I have personally spoken with hundreds of bright, compassionate students who find dissection ethically repugnant; their response is sometimes to turn away from careers in such fields as human medicine, veterinary medicine, or nursing, where compassion is most needed. On the other hand, less sensitive students may be hardened by the exercise, the consequences of which are open to question.

There is also quality of education to be considered. Teachers who continue to use animals in dissections or other invasive classroom exercises are apparently unaware of the recent moves in medicine away from animal experimentation.

“Since 1990, more than a dozen studies have been published showing that students using humane alternatives learn anatomy and physiology as well as or better than those who use animals (the HSUS will provide an annotated list of these studies to anyone who requests it). Abundant resources are available for teaching anatomy, physiology, genetics, toxicology, and other animal-related fields that do not require the use of vertebrate animal subjects.”

These include films, computer simulations, models, books, or a trip to the local veterinary office. To anyone who simply cannot bear the thought of dispensing with hands-on contact with a preserved animal, human cadavers offer the full-scale experience without the associated ethical problems (people are not killed for the purpose of dissection; the patient voluntarily donates his/her body).

Even the economics of dissection do not argue for its use. The HSUS recently did a cost comparison and found that, for all five species we looked at (chicken, rat, pig, cat), the cost of a range of alternative materials was lower than that of purchasing animals to dissect. For 270 students (two students per animal) over a three year period, money saved ranged from $344 (bullfrog) to $4,342 (cats). If you want to save even more money, just borrow the alternative. The HSUS, for instance, operates an Alternatives Loan Program that currently has over forty items available on a temporary, fee-of-charge basis.

Finally, there is environmental protection. Many of the animals harmed or killed in classroom use are part of a large-scale trade in which millions of frogs and sharks, for instance, have been seriously declining in recent years, and while the specific impact of their capture for dissection use is not known, it is certainly not ecologically beneficial. Moreover, the world needs people who value environmental stewardship and compassion for life; dissection fosters neither.

Perhaps there are a few fields, such as veterinary medicine, for which cutting open and examining the insides of dead animals is indispensable. But how ironic that healthy animals would be killed for students whose professional goal is to save lives and ease suffering. Even vet schools don’t need to deliberately kill animals to train their students.

Conducting surgery on animals from the animal shelters, and procuring dead cats and dogs from local animal control centers are among the ethical ways that growing numbers of vet schools are procuring animals for their training programs. And as for the use of animals in medical school, consider that 27 of the nation’s medical programs don’t use animals in their curricula, and at all but one of the remaining schools, the animal labs are optional. Using animals to practice surgery has been illegal in England for more than 100 years.

With all the suffering in the world, should we really be adding it to our education programs? Is dissection necessary when other teaching methods have been shown repeatedly to effectively replace it? Is there any justification for animal dissection when it has so many counts—animal killing, animal suffering, violation of students’ sensibilities, mediocre educational merit, and environmental disruption—against it?

We think not.

Curfew smurf

Myron Garban
Arts & Life Staff Writer

In one of the lamest and most blatant disregard for the rights of the young, our government seems to be getting strongly towards imposing curfews on our youth. Many states have already imposed them and many others are currently considering following suit along with the federal government's talk about a national curfew. Now this is obviously absurd, but our government states their reason is to be curbing teenage crime as well as protecting our kids from the crime that is being committed at night. But what it really is is our government trying to control, once again, the lives of citizens of this country (children, the easiest target of all). The government needs to solve the problems of society instead of merely tarnishing them.

Basically, what curfews do is prevent many teens from having the chance to do certain things at a certain night. If you don't have the opportunity, you can't be out there doing anything wrong. Though many might argue that the bad kids are going to be out regardless, they still will be picked up (visibly, like criminals) and taken to some community center or another. This gives them bragging rights to claim that teenage crime is down significantly in their state and/or city. Violating the rights of children just to be able to put up the pretense that the problem has been solved and to receive a pat on the back for that pretense is rather self-defeating.

The question is: Is it even right to punish the whole for a few? Because some teenagers are bad seeds and get off, for some reason or another, on causing damage, trouble, and maybe, that is no grounds to punish an entire generation. This is something that would never have even been thought about for a millisecond if children had the right to vote. I'm sure that all these adults who support curfews and do have the right to vote would be enraged if the government even began to utter, free a second, about putting a curfew on adults; they become hypocrites when they happily support the same thing happening to their children.

Curfews are further substantiated by the argument that it will keep our kids safe. Now that's a sneaky load of crap. In a society where many schools aren't even safe for our children, restricting their freedom to enjoy themselves while they still can doesn't really safe-what's more less safe. What the government needs to do is start understanding the problem and make both the streets and the schools safe. Curfews just removes opportunity, which leads to crime, but only by caging up kids in their homes. This is a free country, isn't it?

The only reason curfews seem to work is that kids are required to go to school in the daytime, so they aren't in a position to commit crime at that time, and at night, they have to adhere to a curfew again, removing opportunity.

Many people, including the President, have talked about, time and again, how when they were young, they had to be in when the streets lights came on and how if they weren't, their parents were waiting at home with punishment. This gives the lie that this isn't what they were young. If their parents didn't trust them enough to let them stay out late and didn't think they were responsible enough to stay out late, do their homework and chores, and come in at a time in which they knew they had to, and/or to stay out of trouble and have clean fun, then why is it today's parents trust their children to do this, the government has no right to degrade that trust in any way. It violates both the parent's rights as a parent, and the child's rights as a citizen of this country.

Parents are the only people who are responsible for their kids. The government has no right at all. If police just want their kids out at night, they can put a curfew on their child and enforce it as strictly as they want. Unless the government can undeniably prove that awarding a child freedom to live and enjoy their youth is directly detrimental to a child's growth, development, and/or well being, they have no right to stick their noses into matters that they have no true jurisdiction over.

Many would argue that it does concern them; these kids are out committing crimes against them and they have a right to stick their noses into matters that they have no true jurisdiction over.

The simple fact is that curfews are being proposed as well as every other citizen of this country. Knows this. The government just does it an easy way to claim to put a dent in crime. Since so many adults seem to agree with them, here is a way to virtually drive crime to extinction: If they put a curfew on adults, the adult crime rate would drop just like teen crime. But why stop there? If they prohibit anyone from ever leaving their homes altogether, crime will quickly wither away. Sure, there would be those who leave their homes anyway, but they would be easily caught by the only people allowed out, the police. Of course, no one else but the police would be able to go to work. The family will die off too, unless families start incest, and the government would have to go out and force every citizen, for they were imprisoned in their own homes. Then, the right to crime citizens would be violated and this country would go down the tubes in no time, but at least there would be no more crime. That is, until we're taken-over by another country.

Eric R. Hands

This coming spring in 1997, Bryant Senior Eric Hands will be par-taking in history. The economics major from Bridgewater, NJ will be attending a very unique program at the University of Hong Kong. The study abroad semester consists of four academic modules: Module A: Twenty-three hours of traveling seminar to Taiwan and all of mainland China. Week I: Nine weeks of international course with the following:

American professors and regional Asian professors.

Module B: Five week supervised internship with Hong Kong multination corporation based in Hong Kong.

Module C: The week summary symposium and project presentations from the travel seminar will win-

The official opening ceremony between the United Kingdom and China.

The senior's interest in British-Sino relations was sparked when studying abroad this past spring semester in London, United Kingdom. Eric took a class on Economic and Business Development in East Asia taught by an expert professor. "I really became interested in how the Hong Kong scenario was going ever so I decided to pursue a major in economics and business. I'm presently in my final year of school and am going to study at the University of Hong Kong this coming spring. I'm very excited about this opportunity to study in Hong Kong and to work with an East Asian culture. I'm looking forward to the experience of living and studying in this exciting city."

Like the freedom of nature, he decided to rest under a blooming tree. His odor didn’t seem to surround him, as he was not used to the matter of fact, it seemed to draw them to him. His smell to that of apple pie, the air was thick with it, and they saw him as one of them: a wild animal, unique and rare. It was wafting above the tawny walls as if it were infected with life.

The sound of the running water was too familiar to him, and he clenched his teeth to clutch the thrust of his unbathed body. He could almost hear the water falling again, as it did the first time, he saw the most beautiful waterfall. It was like it just suddenly and mysteriously appeared.

You have established your smell, now you must promote it. And the only way you can do this is by wearing it with society’s smell. You must merge the two smells into one; then, and only then, will your smell truly be truly unique.

Coffee Talk

Coffee Talk is a program that was developed by BACCHUS to provide support and comfort to the freshman class. It is designed to help freshmen know that they are not alone in the experiences that they are going through. The upperclassmen have been through the experiences and they are an excellent source to help get them through.

Every Tuesday night at 9:30 p.m., in the lobby, Hall 15, upperclassmen and freshmen gather to share free coffee from The Junction, meet new people, and discuss the topic of the evening. The program has been extremely successful with regular and dedicated participation each week.

Some of the topics and activities done in the past are as follows:

- Homework problems
- Introduce self
- Discussion about leaving home
- Wrote down confidential concerns which will be returned at the end of the year
- Novelties
- Played Alcohol Jeopardy
- Prizes were awarded
- Stress

Coffee Talk encourages everyone and anyone to attend. Upperclassmen are asked to come and share experiences or any helpful hints that you wish you knew when you were a freshmen.

Next week’s topic (October 29):
Nutrition and Eating Disorders

Free Coffee, Coffee Free, Food Free

Coffee Talk: Tuesdays 9:30 p.m., Hall 15 Lobby.
International flavor

Over the past ten years, many at Bryant have heard the term "internationalization" mentioned time and time again, but what exactly does that mean, and how will Bryant be different after becoming internationalized?

On Saturday of Parents' Weekend, the International Students' Organization, with the generous financial and emotional support of many individuals and organizations, held the first annual United Nations Festival. The Festival was a wonderful collaboration of exhibits representing the many cultures of our students and faculty, complete with food vendors, a fashion show, and entertainment. Those of you who weren't in attendance missed a great program.

This program was particularly important, as Bryant seeks to help every one of its students develop a truly global view. You see, New York is not the financial and cultural center of the universe; nor are New Delhi, Shanghai, Lisbon, Rio de Janeiro or Tokyo. It is the common link between and among these great cities that make up the financial and cultural world. I tell our students frequently, that whether they work in Manhattan or rural Iowas, their work and their business will depend on international connections. Whether people from other countries are their customers, suppliers, or simply their co-workers in a multinational corporation, connections to the global marketplace will become increasingly important for successful enterprises. To help all members of our community understand this will take more than simply admitting more international students or hiring more faculty with international backgrounds. In fact, we want our domestic students and our international students not only to be acquainted with students from other countries, but to have a sense of how successful relationships - both personal and professional - are formed and nurtured throughout the world.

To accomplish this, we will have to continue encouraging American students to get to know our international students, and to encourage our international students to get to know our American students. If this sounds like a different Bryant than the one you're accustomed to, you're right. I am seeking nothing less than the transformation of Bryant College into an institution in which we all can expect to encounter people who are profoundly different from us, yet we will be capable of understanding how they view themselves and our world.

Being part of an internationalized campus doesn't mean we think that Americans are wrong and international students are right, and it doesn't mean that we believe that international students who don't do everything American students do aren't playing by the rules. An internationalized campus implies that all of us will take the risks of trying to understand the world views of other people - whether those people are from India or Panama or Connecticut. It means that we will embrace transformation and be afraid of it. It short, it means that we will have a profoundly different Bryant College - yet still one of which we can be proud.

10 questions: An interview with Kate E. Beckman

Kenneth Wakefield
Archives Staff Writer

Kate is a Junior and an R.A. in residence hall 16. She has also been involved in the Bryant Marketing Association and Big Sisters of Bryant.

Wakefield: When did you first notice your leadership skills?
Kate Beckman: I first started noticing them in my freshman year of high school. There was this program in my school known as Peer Leadership; I ran for and won a position on the Electoral Board. This led to my involvement in the Cape Cod Youth Council.

W: What is the most important event you have ever had in your life where you needed to use your leadership skills?
K.B.: I feel that one of the biggest events in my life so far is being a Big Sister. When you see how happy you make the children of Smithfield, it makes it all worth the effort.

W: What do you feel is the most important thing you do right now, where your leadership skills are needed to be used effectively?
K.B.: That would definitely be my R.A. position. I have to use leadership in every aspect, ranging from things like having floor meetings to rushing to get everything ready for the night in the gym.

W: What are some of the leadership qualities that are needed to be an R.A.?
K.B.: The ability to speak effectively and articulately is an important one, along with the ability to build trust with my residents and staff. I have to be able to trust them and want them to trust me.

W: What are some of the ways that you improve your leadership qualities?
K.B.: Practice. Every time I speak in public, I get better at it; the more times I face a confrontation, the better my leadership skills become. I have to be self motivated, willing to take on responsibility.

W: How do you feel being a student leader has affected your life?
K.B.: I think it helped me get a lot more involved with the activities available on campus. It has given me more confidence in the things that I try to accomplish.

W: Do you feel that Bryant has had any effect on your becoming a student leader?
K.B.: It did not start my skills, but it definitely helped them progress in the right direction.

The season of the Jewish holidays has concluded. Even so, another new beginning has been marked with celebration. At the very end of the holiday season, Jews begin the reading of the Torah again. This week we are in the portion called "Lech L'cha." In which Abram (later, Abraham) leaves his home to make a new beginning for himself and to inaugurate a promising future.

The Torah contains lessons in living. Abrams legacy of courage and dedication, to a larger purpose endures because in a sense we are his future; we renew ourselves, as we renew our cycle of Torah from year-to-year. Our new year is unfolding quickly at Bryant, and I look forward to meeting you. I am usually on campus Wednesday afternoons in the Campus Ministry office, or you can call me at 325-6045 or 325-6110.

Tis the Season...

No wonder that the Jewish sages seldom speak of "reading" Torah, but rather of "learning" Torah. More than words on a page or, traditionally speaking, on a scroll of parchment, the Torah contains lessons in living. Abrams legacy of courage and dedication, to a larger purpose endures because in a sense we are his future; we renew ourselves, as we renew our cycle of Torah from year-to-year. Our new year is unfolding quickly at Bryant, and I look forward to meeting you. I am usually on campus Wednesday afternoons in the Campus Ministry office, or you can call me at 325-6045 or 325-6110.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Internship Update
Spring 1997 listings will be available to all students on November 1. Binders containing full job descriptions will replace the board of postings inside the Career Services Office. Internships with early deadlines will be posted in the board with full job descriptions found in the binders. Accounting and Actuarial Majors have serious deadlines in October for some excellent opportunities this Spring. Check out the binders this month.

Join The Archway staff! Come see what we're all about. Our meetings are Thursday's at 7:30 p.m. in our office located on the second floor of the MAC.

"Lock Up"

submitted by the Muscular Dystrophy Association

Over seventy business people throughout Smithfield have volunteered to be “locked up” by the Smithfield Police to benefit the Greater Rhode Island Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The Smithfield Police “Most Wanted Lock Up” will be held on Wednesday, October 23, at the Elks Lodge (Rt. 104) from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The “jailbirds” will be sentenced to an hour to raise bail in the form of pledges. Some of Smithfield’s most notoriously nice citizens will be locked up including town officials, local industry leaders, and Bryant administrators and faculty.

This fund raiser would not have been possible without the support of Police Chief William McGarry and the assistance of Patrolman Richard St. Sauveur.

All monies raised are used to provide medical and support services to MDA clients and their families in Rhode Island, and Bristol County, Massachusetts.

Don't forget to Fall Back this weekend! Turn your clocks back one hour Saturday night.
Hello from BACCHUS! Just a reminder for those who forgot or those who are new to the school, BACCHUS stands for Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students. Not much has been happening lately. Coffee Talk started successfully. Topics such as relationships, home sickness, and stress have been covered. Nutrition will be discussed at the next Coffee Talk. Feel free to join the discussion.

Trick-or-Treating for canned goods will be on Sunday, October 22, at 12:30 p.m. in the Room 28 for all those who wish to participate.

All those BACCHUS members who haven’t chosen a date for low ropes, call Ky at 233-9544 as soon as possible. The dates are Friday, October 25; Friday, November 22; and Saturday, November 23.

Don’t forget, the next meeting is on Wednesday, October 23, at 5:00 p.m. in room 2A of the Bryant Center. Hope to see you there!

BETTY THETA PI
Christopher Strand

What’s up Bryant College! Parent’s weekend went well, and we would like to thank everyone’s parents who came down. The candle sale also went well, and, along with our advice Dr. Doug Levine’s help on Wednesday, we are making a good start on contributing to our philanthropy.

The mud bowl was fun, and now that we scored our first touchdowns, we are favorite to take the whole thing. Veto will come out with next week’s spreads on Monday. They might not be found in the Herald.

Cranes were impressive on his 21st birthday. He might have thought it was his 22nd, though. Aply modded a new line of fancy clothing. Thanks Theta for an interesting time on Friday. Hey Keegan, can we hear some more childhood stories next Friday? Spalding was looking for a tips from Ragoon, but Ragoon was holding out on him. Maybe Ragoon wouldn’t have held out on Mercedes.

The pet fly Pezo is dead, funeral services will not happen due to the rain. Lewie took out the pinball machine at Parent’s. Otis’s parents grabbed dead beat parents of the week when they stood him up. Shop and Spalding went on a voyage Saturday night. Hey Colker and Nick. WHAT HAPPENED. Don and Tommy were caught doing god knows what in half 3. Sorry Darwin. I can’t read a bloody word of your handwriting.

Congratulations to both casts and the directors of the Parent’s Weekend. They were a great success! Thanks to everyone who helped with the play by working on the sets, costumes, and helping at the floor. In other news: Andrea and Erin got some interesting balloons during Parents’ Weekend. Now what were they really supposed to be? The guys in J1 would like to send a special thank you onto Ken. Would you like a seat, Ken? Jay received the Academy Award for best director. We love you man! The makeup had an enjoyable evening with physical plant. Kelli, would you like an apple?

Overheard: “Melt in your mouth!”

COMMUTER CONNECTION
Andrew Young

Hey Commuters! Here’s a quick update about what’s going on. Ellen has been elected to be the new vice president of our group. Darryl will become the historian. So with all the officers chosen, we are ready to do some major planning to make this our best year yet. Be sure to attend our next meeting being held on Wednesday, October 30. The meeting will be held on the third floor of the Bryant Center from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Of course pizza and soda will be provided. Topics of the meeting should include the planning of the trip to Boston in November. With Jessica and Mike driving, the bus ride alone should be an adventure. So be sure to sign up if you are interested. Also, a trip to New York is in the plans for December. Don’t miss out on any of this or other important information, be at the meeting!
Other things going on include our participation in the intramural volleyball games. They can best be summed up as we win some we lose some. It's finally here; Friday night is the big hayride and walk through the haunted forest. That's about all for now. Stop by the office and see us!

I would first like to congratulate our new associate members: Kyle, Quentin, John, Joe, Joel, Chris, Dave, Keith, Eric, Scott, Brian, Rob, Mike R, Jeff, Joel S, Mike S, & Duane. All the Brothers are behind you guys as you journey towards brotherhood.

Now onto the weekend recap: A thanks out goes to Phi Sig for stopping by on Thursday Night at the townhouse. Parents' Weekend went well, as we hosted our annual reception for parents on our floor. Thanks to the "rough" suite for hosting Friday Night. We were back on the floor for Saturday and finished what the parents didn't!!!

Delta Chi Sports are going pretty well this season. Our A-Team won their last game convincingly over Phi-Kap 29-8. Great plays were turned in once again by the combo of Hollywood & Broadway. Our B-Team remained in a winning pace while posting a W over PKS-B last week. However, the B-Team suffered a loss of weight on the line, but the season goes on just the same...

F-Sharp was again MIA this weekend; Shady!!! Killer was tired of the mainstream weekends and took off to New York. Goose, Speakerman, & Zippo leashes have been shortened and are not allowed to "tramp." The freshman dorms are more mature. A belated congrat to Jolli and Ego for winning the tournament last weekend. Finally, I would like to congratulate all the pledges of all the Greek organizations and wish them luck. Hey P-Nut, remember you're my ...

Great job to Tyler and the rest of Sigma and Parent's Weekend!!! Thanks to J2 for being such great hosts!!! You guys did a good job!!!

On Friday, we had a very happy hour! Apollo is personally training anyone who wants to learn how to do her dance in the bathroom. Val thinks the foliage is awesome! Janna - did we mention that the three of us combined make the perfect woman? Pierce & Phoenix. Harley, you taught me everything I know. Apollo, stay Dave Z., caught in a little uncomfortable situation on Saturday night! Val and Silva. Thanks to Beta, we had a great time. A little wet, Gru-McGee. Mattie and Silva want to know what JFR means? "This is the best turkey I've ever got, I'll say that" McGraith.

Parents' Night Out!!! Come out and support Rhode Island's School for the Deaf. Happy 19th Birthday Apollo! Welcome Home Jimmy James!!! You were missed!!! Quote of the week: "OH YES!!! Silva!"

Entrepreneurship Club
Michael Tuttle
Hello to you all. First some old business: Last Wednesday, we had a meeting in which Dr. Peter Domalavage talked to us about technology in today's marketplace. On Thursday, lunch of us went to the Brown Venture Forum. It was very informative, and I suggest you go to the next Venture Forum. On Tuesday the 22, we held Entrepreneurship Day. It was very fun and informative. We had a large turnout. We heard from recent Bryant alumni, who told us about their own successes and failures in starting their own businesses. For those of you who missed it, you missed a great time.

Now to new business: On Saturday October 26, we will go on the trip. Only paid up members will be able to attend, so if you want to go, please contact one of the members of the e-board or send an email to entclub@acad.bryant.edu, and we will get back to you as soon as possible. We will be meeting at the circle at quarter to 8 in the morning, so be there if you want to go. Last year's trip was fun and informative and a good chance to do some networking. On Wednesday, October 30, we will have our next meeting. It's at 4 p.m., with a room still to be determined. The guest speaker will be Mr. Vascemella, who is in the technology industry. If you have any questions, comments, or concerns, please email us at entclub@acad.bryant.edu.

The I.F.C. has been very busy as of late. Please keep posted for events taking place in your neck of the woods. Anyway, this Sunday, October 27, Greek Life will be sponsoring their annual Halloween Party for children of faculty and administration. Please RSVP as soon as possible, just call the Greek Life Office. All chapters will be attending and participating in this festive party; please join in the fun. Next Tuesday, October 29, there will be a Scholarship Seminar in Papato at 5:30 p.m. We ask all chapter Presidents, Scholarship Chairs, and Membership Orientation Officers to participate. This will give all chapters a chance to improve their chapter's scholastic ability. Pizza and soda will be provided. Please come to listen and share your ideas. Anyone wanting to have their events posted in public, please see me; I will be glad to assist you. Until next time, see ya.

Pit Son! After a week of writer's block, I figured that would be a good time to write another article. Hopefully everyone's parents who came up for the weekend had a worthwhile trip. If they did not, they should have stopped by A3 on Saturday.

As usual, everyone did a great job in the demo. The whitebelts were especially impressive, since that was probably the first time they really performed in front of an audience. Hopefully this is an indicator of how the rest of the year will go.

We all wish Keith a belated congratulations on the performance at the tournament a couple weeks ago. Maybe, later on we will try and compete.

It seemed like everyone had a great time on Saturday night. It first seemed like we would be left with plenty of leftovers, but luckily the reserves showed up to give us a hand. Quote of the weekend: "Drink for making my mother drink." Until next time, BKKA!

Greetings and salutations to all. I hope everyone had an eventful week, I know I did. This week was rather exciting. I know everyone has been bogged down with work lately, but don't let it get the best of you. Let's see here... Thursday night was not only was it 21st birthday but also a great time. We partied with Thetas and that was hopping. Friday we partied with Tri-Sig, and that was out of control. Saturday with Tri-Sig was a blast as well. We had a lot of excitement making the preparations for Saturday night; you cannot stop us, you can only hope to contain us. In other news, Delaney polished off a bottle. The weekend was a blast. We played our annual Game for the Lion on Saturday. It was a good time. Speaking of a good time, we would like to congrats all of the new pledges of all of the sororities and fraternities. Good luck to you all. Up this weekend by popular demand were Wheeler, Eddie, and Burke. Thanks for the support. OK... Well, I'm very busy this week, I'm going to have to keep it short... AND NOW comingstral out of our office home in Cleveland, Ohio. Composed with the assistance of Ryan Delaney... Top 10 reasons why the soda machines are always empty:

1. They're slowly weaning us off of it; every notice that they're empty for a week, then full, then empty for 2 weeks, then full, then empty for 3 weeks, then full, and then empty for a month and a half. That was their mistake; they jumped the gun, and this time we caught 'em.

2. Every notice that they're Coke machines; may be Pepsi is the choice of the next generation.

3. Conspiracy from the Bagel Wagon.

4. Now that everyone knows about the pool, they're taking all of the Coke's poolside.

5. Distribution shortage because they had to recall all of the white topped Cokes, and replace them with red caps.

6. That Wacky Coke Guy, always playing those practical jokes, he outs two bottles in every rack, and then fills the Diet Coke rack.

7. The official soft drink of the New England Patriots is Pepsi.

8. I'm now 21, so what do I care.

9. Government mind control. That means we have been bad; we have been really bad, we get Diet Coke.

10. Sandy, manipulating the information Highway to do his evil bidding, has apparently resorted the tracking instructions to his room, in order that he can own all of the Cokes. Now if you want a Coke, you have to go to him. It's all about power...

Well, that's about all I can say. Once again, good luck to all of the new pledges of the Greek Community. And also (this goes for everyone), I don't know who said this, but I like it: "Luck is all opportunity when opportunity meets with preparation." Bye now.

Hello everyone! First off, we would like to congratulate all of our new members: Candace, Rista, Kenna, Nicole, Kelly, Jerry Lee, Sue, Elena, Kristy, and Gia. Best of luck. Congrats also to all new big sisters.

The Seniors have been busy; congratulations to all those who have gotten interviews, and a big congrats to Melissa who is the first Senator to get a great job. Thanks to Webster for all the hard work that went into making our Parents' Weekend a success. I hope all sisters' midterm went well, keep up the good work. Congratulations to Kesa for being selected to be on the Career Services Student Advisory Board. Thanks to Cassie and all the other seniors for an awesome Fall N Bail last week.

And to Disney, we are all so proud that you aced your auditing exam congratulations.

The sisters would like to thank Delta for Friday night. The table dancers were back once again, and we had an awesome time. Sig Eps thanks for the "open" party on Saturday night; we had a blast.

Sunny's brothers rocked the free world this weekend. Screech is back in full effect, and would like to say to Webster: Do a little Dance. Thanks to Mork and Simmehers for the fashion show on Monday night, it was quite entertaining.

Tricia's Pooh Bear is half way to first and may be on the way to second this weekend; good luck on the journey. Hey Webster, I didn't order a pepperoni and sausage pizza on Friday. All the sisters are anxiously waiting for our annual Fall Harvest Dance on Friday, although some of us still need to find dates. By the way Rhonda, I am very proud of you. And the quote of the week goes to Sahara and Sunny, "Hey Baby..." Till next week.

MSU
Louis Camacho-Rosado

Hello Everyone! The MSU has two events planned for this week.

This Tuesday, the "What's on Everyone's Mind?" Speaker Series will be held in the Bryant Center. Also the Unity Day celebration focusing on Asian and Middle Eastern Cultures will be held on Wednesday in the Rotunda.

The MSU is currently planning some activities for the upcoming months. If you'd like to offer some ideas on events that you'd like to see on campus, email us at: MSU@acad.bryant.edu.

I'd like to send a thank you to the Follet's Bookstore manager, Mrs. Julie Clark Coleman. The bookstore has made a contribution of books on a variety of topics to our MSU display in front of the bookstore. Thank you, Mrs. Clark Coleman.

The United Nations Festival was held this past Sunday in the MAC, where several of our members ran our table. I'd like to thank our very dedicated members who ran our table at the UN Festival. Good job, folks!! Also, congratulations to the International Student Organization for coordinating such a fantastic event on Sunday.

Our meeting will be held next week in Bryant Center room 2A. Everyone is welcome to attend! Ciao!

Are You A Student Who Lives in Woonsocket?

All Woonsocket residents aged 2-29 are encouraged by the Rhode Island Department of Health to be immunized against meningococcal meningitis at free clinics that will be held in Woonsocket during the next few days.

Please read the local newspapers and watch local television for the locations of these clinics.

Student Alumni Association
by Darrell Cook

Thanks to all those Bryant students who helped support the Student Alumni Association by donating a dollar at last Thursday’s Junction Night. Also, a special thank you to Wherehouse, who performed at the junction on behalf of the SAA. Hope that everyone had a good time and is looking forward to the possibility of another in the future.

Candy and Carnations is off to a good start. If anyone is interested in sending another student a bag of candy along with a carnation please contact the Lisa Knight for further details. Hope that all charities who attended the supper at the Junction on Sunday found it enjoyable.

What about that “fill-in” President? Hope that I was able to clue everyone in on the events that will be taking place in the near future. I wish you all the best of luck. I know that these committees will be even more of a success than they were in the past.

Hello everyone! First I’d like to say our consultant is finally gone! Yippee!

You can finally have your room back, Cindy, and all our lives can go back to normal! I’d like to congratulate and welcome our new associate class: Christe, Ann, Heidi, Kristina, Erika, Stephanie, Kristin, Christine, Kloster, Jamie, Nikki, Jill, Jen, Julie, and Liz. Yes, you guys are the best! I’d also like to say congratulations to all the other new Greek associate classes. You all made the right choice! This past weekend was fantastic! Maureen had a super 21st birthday celebration; good job Bob. Stand up and look out, your limo awaits! Kevin and his logic were a good time! Stree, couldn’t you have waited till you were outside the limo? Sorry about what happened Vicki. Andrea, get in the picture.Oops sorry, you’re busy. Thanks, Jeffa.

For Thursday, we had a good time. Sig Ep, we had an awesome time; we’ll have to do it again real soon, with the exception of the hole and the Kzmator. I’m sure I speak for all of us when I say that Saturday with our parents was a great time. We not only got the chance to meet our associate’s parents, but party with our own as well. I never thought they would be that good at car races, or get that addicted to them enough with the tippy cup! It was certainly hot in Wright’s, road trip to Assassumption? Aren’t you glad you came, Shila. No Dad, I don’t think we need their picture; at least they thanked you generously for it. Larry treated all of us to a round on the house, what a guy. Jamie, I wish our parents had a sleep over. Mel and Gina, how about our Dads and the best out of 5. Was Tony the champ?

Delta, Saturday was great; we can always count on a good time with you guys. Do all those people go here; funny we’ve never seen them before. Hey Flowhee, next week, top ten reasons why Tri Sig thinks they own the dance table in your suite. Hey Sarah, this weekend never should’ve happened. Dana, get ready for the big day; you’re dead! Sorry Fokkoro was so awful on Sunday. I feel bad for all of you that had to go.

One last thing, Russell, Lark, Dave, Jamie, Danielle, and Spalding: that gravity can get to you sometimes, huh! Spalding did not attempt the 5 finger Jiffy! Jamie attempted the 5 finger but failed. Russell entertained us for a while with his singing and dancing. That’s all folks; same time, same place next week. Have a good one! Check ya later -Ivy May!

If you are interested in joining SAM, it’s not too late. Attend our next meeting on Wednesday, October 30, in room 2B in the Bryant Center. We will be hosting a Toastmaster’s meeting, where you will be able to hear fellow students make lectures, speeches, etc.

There is also a Career Services meeting on Tuesday, October 29, at 3:30 p.m. in the MRC Lecture hall. We hope to see you there.

Invitamos a todos los estudiantes a venir a ver el club de espanol les puede ofrecer. Si no sabe el club de espanol, pues esta es su oportunidad para experimentar el mismo. Welcome to the first article printed on behalf of the Spanish club. So far this year we have had one meeting and one great ‘fiesta’. Do you remember the first time, don’t worry there will be many more opportunities to ‘divertirse’ with our club activities. Our next meeting will be Monday, October 28 at 7:00 p.m. in room 2A of the Bryant Center, pizza and soda will be served. I would like to emphasize that the club is for both native, and non-native Spanish speakers and that the level of proficiency is not important, so don’t feel intimi-
Although it was dark that night, I think I saw something growing out of Soto’s head. I’m sure all is well now.

Happy 21st goes to Duke. And what a better way to celebrate than to be shut off from the scorpion with Weasel. The ride back was good when Horton decided to decorate the back of Dukes car a little bit... — “Yay that was the soup” — Rico popped up from San Diego and treated the townhouses all weekend. The Rico-day weekend that was thought to be lost was once again regained. Black Angus!

The first ever MLS championship was played at Foxboro recently and the lucky seven would like to give a great big thanks to Nyce. At least they had all those great fans to help them out all day. A rumble nearby occurred, but Nyce was not home. Speaking of battles, there has not been much on the floor lately. The latest was a quick knock-out as Viera sent Weasel unconscious.

In sports, the B football team has not played in a while but is still 3-1. The A team lost a couple of tough games but is still ready for a playoff run.

Well, that’s about all for this week. The newest edition will insure dunk in the glass for many 420’s to come. Here’s one last quote from the great Horton: “Ooh, are they the misty ones?” — Later.

Hey Theta! Midterms are pretty much over! We will all get a break soon. What The Heck?! Thanks to all the parents who were here this past weekend! It was nice to see everyone.

First of all, Kathy is okay! Thank you Delta and Sarah for all of your help! Ben— “I need help!” — Kathy

Thanks to Delta for Thursday night! The fruit was so good! Thanks Beta for dinner and hour of fun Friday night! Saturday on our floor was fun, to a point...

First day at Foxboro was so cold and so wet, with many crazed soccer fans in trash bags. “Otvic, could you please help these people on the side!” — It will all be worth it in the end girls!

If you have any new editions to the etiquette list let Magenta know. Hey Bertie, Congratulations on losing the bet. Kendall — this song makes me want to slit my rotos. Nikki, Jaime, Heidi, and Michelle had an interesting ride to Hiedi’s house! “Wo Vincent’s Potato Chips” Next time she will know the way without directions. Otvic gives a big thanks to Fitzy for the new basketball on the side of her face! Sandy scared Cosmiiix. Bump me and I’ll bump you back! Hiedi, Nikki, and Jolie all hung out. Lata Theta!

Thinking of you on your birthday, Spartan. We miss you — we will be in our hearts forever-love always, Theta.

Well, it’s nice to see that we finally have an article in The Archway. I’d like to thank Guido for his great articles this past few weeks. Now, instead of the HE news, here’s all the TKE news that’s fit to print.

First of all, there seems to be some kind of rotten stench coming from up on the floor. We have identified it, though. It seems to be some kind of pork product. Can you guess what or who it is? Anyway, the floor is still in one piece (sort of), so that should put an end to any of the rumors that have been flying around (K-Mart anyone?)

TKE would like to thank Delta Zeta for all of our invitations, and, as Luongo always says, if you whine enough, you’ll always get your way. Onto the weekend. Thanks to everyone who stopped by on Friday; we had a good time. Hey Ryan, I’d like you to meet my sister... well, maybe not. I’d also like to wish a Happy Birthday to Fonz, a Happy 21st to Cairo, and a Happy Birthday to Zeus. Hey Zeus, how does it feel to hit the big 30? Cojo, you just lucked out! (p/d). Cairo seems to have lost the bathroom — wait, you mean it’s not in Philly’s room anymore?

In TKE sports, we play volleyball, but I’m not sure. And that’s about it. If anyone wants to find us, we’re still in Dorm 2, Floor 2 (for right now). Have a good week.

SOLID INVESTMENT

Are U.S. Savings Bonds the rock solid investment that you are looking for? Savings bonds earn market-based interest rates, offer tax benefits such as exemptions from State and local income taxes and deferral of Federal income taxes on earnings. Bonds are safe, backed by the full faith and credit of the United States and, if lost, stolen, or destroyed, they can be replaced.

Games of the Week

Last Week (1-1)

- #14 Virginia vs #2 Florida St.
  - It's payback time for the Seminoles, who last year lost to the Cavs in the closing seconds when Warrick Dunn was stopped short of the end zone. Even with Virginia gaining confidence after their 62 point rout last Saturday, the Florida St. defense will be ready to stop TKI Barber and the rest of the Cavs. Florida St. wins it easily.

- FSU 38 Virginia 13

- #7 Alabama vs #6 Tennessee
  - A good showing here for the Volunteers. Tennessee needs a convincing win and a great performance by Peyton Manning if they want to get back into the national picture. 'Bama, on the other hands, knows how to play defense, thus making this a much closer game than many people think.

- Tennessee 24 Alabama 18

This week's games

- #3 Ohio St. vs #20 Iowa
  - This should be a great game in the SEC. Peyton Manning leads a Vol's team that has gotten itself back on track after the loss to Florida. What Tennessee needs is a convincing win and a great performance by Manning if they want to get back into the national picture. 'Bama, on the other hands, knows how to play defense, thus making this a much closer game than many people think.

- #3 Ohio St. 42 10 Iowa
  - What eyes in the four years, and the trend should continue.

- #14 Virginia vs #1 Florida St.
  - Payback time for the team that has gotten itself back on track after the loss to Florida. What Tennessee needs is a convincing win and a great performance by Manning if they want to get back into the national picture. 'Bama, on the other hands, knows how to play defense, thus making this a much closer game than many people think.

- Tennessee 24 Alabama 18
