Where were you on April 15, 2013 at 2:49 pm? Only one short year ago, I vividly remember sitting in Salmanson Dining Hall, with my eyes glued to the breaking news coverage playing on all the TVs. For the first time in my Bryant career, an eerie hush filled the dining hall as everyone around me also stared blankly at the breaking news coverage. The typical “Salmo” chatter was replaced with the frantic news reporters and coverage of the tragic scene happening live on Boylston Street in Boston, Massachusetts. The 2013 Marathon Monday that we all know as a renowned New England tradition, turned into a horrific sight, playing out right before our eyes, terrorists had set off two bombs.

This past fall semester I participated in the Management-200 Service Learning Project. Through this semester long project, I had the opportunity to work with one inspiring individual and survivor of the Boston Marathon bombing, Jarrod Clowery. On April 15th, standing only three feet in front of the second bomb, Jarrod was blown into Boylston Street, puncturing the back of his legs with shrapnel and debris emitted...
April 16, 2014

Campus Calendar

April

Wednesday 16

Thursday 17

Friday 18

Saturday 19

Sunday 20

Monday 21

Tuesday 22

Happy Easter!

Bulldog Bulletin

Want to see more people at your meetings or events? Advertise for FREE through the news feed or calendar. Email your club/org’s information to archway@bryant.edu

You’ve come this far. Now, take your next big step.

Learn how to meet the demands of global business with the Bryant Graduate School of Business. Bryant offers full-time master’s degree programs specifically designed for recent graduates who want to prepare for success in the competitive job market.

MBA ONE-YEAR PROGRAM

Full-time day program for all majors

• Gain credentials and experience that distinguish you in the job market
• Benefit from real-world practicum and consulting opportunities
• Fast track your career, with no professional work experience required
• Specializations in:
  • Global Supply Chain
  • Global Finance

MASTER OF SCIENCE IN PROFESSIONAL ACCOUNTING (MPAc)

Full-time day program for accounting majors

• Meet the 150-hour requirement for CPA licensure
• Complete your program in two terms: summer/fall, summer/summer, fall/spring or spring/summer
• Pursue a tax concentration with summer/fall or summer/summer schedule

Application Deadlines:

PRIORITY: April 15
REGULAR: July 15

To learn more, visit www.bryant.edu/BeInDemand
President Machtley says "Businessweek’s recognition of the excellence of our programs highlights Bryant’s leadership role in delivering an innovative education that stands out among those of the elite business schools in the country."

"Bryant continues to set itself apart as one of the most innovative schools in its peer group," said Richard Joseph, interim provost and chief academic officer. "I am honored to be joining Bryant at such an exciting time in its 150-year history:"

"I am thrilled that our small university community is recognized for its accomplishments and prestige. One of the reasons I chose Bryant, aside from the exemplary academics and program for my major, is that everyone here is always willing to help one another and contribute to peers’ success. Not only do we shine in our academics, we shine as a community."

"We determine the success of our business program based in part on the careers that our students have pursued, the jobs that they have accepted, and the paths that they have chosen to take," said Madan Annavarjula, Ph.D., associate dean of the College of Business. "In 2013, Bryant University was acclaimed by the Princeton Review as the top-ranked university for up-and-coming universities and sixteenth nationally for its International Business program. In 2013, Bryant University was acclaimed by the Princeton Review as one of the "Best 378 Colleges" in the United States. Here is what Bryant community members have to say about the recent accreditation:

Jarrod constructed his speech into a more concise and impactful direct meaning. One of the reasons I chose Bryant, aside from the exemplary academics and program for my major, is that everyone here is always willing to help one another and contribute to peers’ success. Not only do we shine in our academics, we shine as a community."

"We determine the success of our business program based in part on the careers that our students have pursued, the jobs that they have accepted, and the paths that they have chosen to take," said Madan Annavarjula, Ph.D., associate dean of the College of Business. "In 2013, Bryant University was acclaimed by the Princeton Review as the top-ranked university for up-and-coming universities and sixteenth nationally for its International Business program. In 2013, Bryant University was acclaimed by the Princeton Review as one of the "Best 378 Colleges" in the United States. Here is what Bryant community members have to say about the recent accreditation:

Kelsie’s Korner
Spritz Cookies

By Kelsie Hollenbeck
Staff Writer

Spring has sprung! What better way to celebrate the warm weather than with some tasty baked goods? These cookies may trick the mind into thinking they are flowers, but I assure you: they are edible and delectable. Some may even believe they are too beautiful to eat, but those doubts will fly after tasting these amazing treats. Spritz cookies can be made easily with a cookie press. With just one press, you’ll have flowers blooming right before your eyes. You aren’t limited to just flowers with the Spritz cookie press; either, you can make any shape ranging from a teddy bear to a Christmas tree!

These cookies can represent any season or occasion you’d like, extending from shape to color, and they are crowd-pleasers, too. One important tip when making Spritz cookies: don’t forget to accessorize! No jewelry for these cookies, decorate them freely with sprinkles, frosting, or even chocolate. The possibilities are endless! No matter what shape or decor you choose, a beautiful tray full of cookies will be the end result.

Ingredients
1 cup butter, softened
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 egg
1/4 teaspoon almond extract or vanilla
Food color, if desired
1/4 cup melted chocolate for topping, if desired

Directions
1) Preheat oven to 400°F. Beat butter and sugar in large bowl with electric mixer on medium speed, or mix with spoon. Stir in flour, salt, egg, almond extract and a few drops of food coloring.
2) Place dough in cookie press. For the flower shape shown in the photo, chose the flower disk. Form desired shapes on ungreased cookie sheet. Decorate with curlicues.
3) Bake 5 to 8 minutes or until set but not brown. Immediately remove from cookie sheet to wire rack.
4) To decorate cookies after baking, you may need to use a drop of corn syrup to attach decorations to cookies.

Hero’s Hearts Foundation

Continued from page 1
from the explosion. Out of his group of friends in the same vicinity, Jarrod was the only survivor to maintain all of his limbs. To this day, he is still undergoing surgeries to remove the nails and pellets embedded in his legs.

Although Jarrod experienced this tragic event, he does not see himself as a victim. Jarrod is a survivor; an individual who seeks to inspire others through his experiences. Through his darkest of days spent recovering in the hospital, he found hope. The support he received from hundreds of people around him sparked the idea to create a non-profit foundation called "Hero’s Hearts.”

I first encountered Jarrod at the Brooklyn Center of the Service Learning Project for all Management 200 students. Prior to his presentation, my professor asked me to write a press release on Jarrod’s speech for media coverage on campus. I drafted the release within a few days and sent the finished copy to multiple local TV and radio stations, hoping some reporters would be interested in his story. The day of the event, I received a phone call from ABC-6 News informing me they would send someone to cover the story.

From the moment I first heard Jarrod’s speech, I was inspired to help his cause. After establishing a relationship with him, we agreed to work together for the semester as part of the Service Learning Project. Every Monday Jarrod would come back to school, where my group would work on enhancing his public speaking skills. We taught him how to adapt his presentation style to a wider audience. The learning experience at Bryant is one of a kind, whether it be abroad or in a classroom. The university employs no teaching assistants and professors have real-world experience. Small class sizes allow students to become active participants in the classroom and work collaboratively with professors and within groups. This academic quality indicator is among the criteria of the schools ranked, along with student surveys, feedback from employers in the business community, and median salaries.

President Machtley says “Businessweek’s recognition of the excellence of our programs highlights Bryant’s leadership role in delivering an innovative education that stands out among those of the elite business schools in the country.”"
by Zachary R. Dowdy
MCF Campus

Seventeen-year-old Kwasi Enin of Shirley, N.Y., took a shot at and won what amounts to an academic royal flush. He applied to and was accepted at all eight Ivy League schools.

But the William Floyd High School senior said he never thought he’d land slots in the class of 2018 at Brown, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton, the University of Pennsylvania and Yale. He hasn’t decided where he’ll attend, but would cross Long Island Sound to attend Yale in New Haven, Conn., depending on the financial aid package offered.

Kwasi said he thought he’d just give it the old college try and “maybe two or three of them” would bite, he said. The eight Ivy League colleges are among the nation’s most selective institutions of higher education. As an example of what Kwasi accomplished, Harvard has one of the lowest acceptance rates in the country at just 5.9 percent for the fall of 2014 (2,023 students out of 34,295 applicants).

For Kwasi, applying to a competitive college wasn’t exactly a gamble. He has an SAT score of 2,250 out of 2,400, which places him in the 99th percentile for all students taking the exam. He has taken and scored high on many Advanced Placement exams. He is an athlete, a shot putter, in fact, and his baritone voice can belt out a tune when he’s not playing viola for the school orchestra.

Still, he said, “I’ve never heard of someone getting all eight.”

He has now surpassed the accomplishments of some of his uncles and cousins, who were accepted to several Ivies. “I always thought they were far better than me academically,” Kwasi said.

He began hearing from each of the schools on March 27, the date when tens of thousands of anxious students log onto the schools’ websites to see if they have been accepted. Kwasi had already been accepted to Princeton in December, but he hoped to make the cut at a few more.

Brown: Yes. Columbia: Yes. Cornell: Yes. And the yesses kept coming. “I was like this can’t be happening.”

By session’s end, about 5 p.m., he had checked six Ivy League schools and then received an email at about 5:30 p.m. from Harvard a school he thought would never accept him.

“It has to be the one to reject me,” he said as he sat in his high school library Monday, still incredulous. “They’re Harvard.”

And if that was not enough, he also gained acceptance to Duke University, Stony Brook University, SUNY Geneseo and Binghamton University.

Administrators at William Floyd were proud but not surprised by Kwasi’s perfect Ivy League acceptance rate, saying he is an academic standout.

“You could see the potential that Kwasi had back then and to see it all come together is truly spectacular,” said Barbara Butler, principal of the school who also taught Kwasi for six years. “He has it all together he’s extremely intelligent, hardworking, well-rounded and humble.”

Ebenezer Enin, Kwasi’s father, a nurse, said Kwasi who wants to study medicine was raised, along with his sister, to strive for excellence.

“We are very proud of him,” he said. “He’s an amazing kid. He’s very humble. He’s been trained to be a high achiever right from when he was a kid. We have been encouraging him to be an all-around student. So far, he has proved himself.”

Sigma Chi holds successful Derby Days philanthropy

By Richard Garceau
Contributing Writer

Bryant University’s Sigma Chi Fraternity chapter held its fourth annual Derby Days philanthropy event this past week. Derby Days involve teams of girls competing against one another in various events. Derby Days raised money for the Huntsman Cancer Institute, a cancer research facility and hospital.

This year has been Derby Days’ most successful year to date. The fraternity and the teams raised over $6,000 for the Huntsman Cancer Institute. This year’s winning team, we will donate our 10% (of total proceeds) to a veteran’s fund because we are Team America, and we are very supportive of our troops. Most importantly, this experience allowed us to support some of our best friends on campus in their biggest philanthropy event of the year.

The winning team is allotted a percentage of the total money raised for the charity of their choice to reward their success. The field was extremely competitive in each of the events for the nautical-themed Derby Days. New this year was, Sink Your Ship, based on the year’s theme. Teams earned points for launching water balloons at Sigma Chi fraternity brothers. Teams were given a set amount of water balloons, but were allowed to purchase more balloons to earn more points. The event raised over $250 in addition to over $1000 in online donations that day.

“I really enjoyed Sink Your Ship. It was a fun way to raise money for a good cause and the boys couldn’t retaliate,” said Shayla Keenan, a member of Team America.

Tyler Holden, this year’s Derby Daddy (the event coordinator) said, “I’m very proud of all the teams and their efforts. Our hard work has paid off with another successful year for Derby Days.”

Holden and Bryant’s Sigma Chi encourage everyone to donate to the Huntsman Cancer Institute if you would like to support the cause, or put together a team for next year’s Derby Days.

Want to get involved in The Archway?
Come to Fisher Center in meeting room 3 on Mondays at 5:30!
The Special Olympics will return to Bryant for the 34th consecutive year

By Anna Mignon
Contributing Writer

Mark your calendars because the Special Olympics Northern Rhode Island Area Day of Games is just around the corner! For the 34th year, Bryant University will be hosting the Northern Rhode Island Olympic Games on campus. The Special Olympics event at Bryant University is an annual all day event where athletes and their teams will be competing for a chance to play at the state games at the University of Rhode Island. This year’s convention was closed out with a momentous announcement that it was announced that the Pi Sigma Epsilon-Zeta Rho chapter was awarded with Top Chapters, the Pro-Am Sell-a-Thon competition team was awarded with the Pro-Am Sell-a-Thon, the Recruitment Challenge was closed out with a Top Chapter award, and most of our members had another busy day Thursday, starting off with the annual meeting. It was announced at this meeting that Pi Sigma Epsilon-Zeta Rho of Bryant University will be hosting the Northeast Regional Conference in November. Directly following the meeting, some of our members participated in Chapter Certified Officer training, including VP of PR and VP of Marketing sections specifically. At these training sessions, our members learned how to better and more effectively lead our chapter in their given position. They also learned techniques specifically needed in their positions as well as how to use COG, the Chapter Operations Guide used by Headquarters, more efficiently. From CCO training, our members went to the PSE Career Fair to set up for the Recruitment Challenge. The challenge is also a good way to show support for Special Olympics. There are many different tasks that volunteers can help out with including help set up for the day of games, grilling hamburgers, and hotdogs for the athletes and their guests, timing track and field events, or even just standing at the finish line to cheer on the athletes. Anyone can be a volunteer and support Special Olympics.

The day of games at Bryant University can be a lot of fun. Not only are you helping a good cause but you can learn a lot from the athletes, and their families. The Day of Games is just around the corner and it is an event you do not want to miss. We welcome everyone and we can never have too many volunteers or supporters. If you cannot volunteer, you can still come see the games. The event will be from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. by the track and football field. Come cheer on the athletes and all the teams competing at the Day of Games. If you are interested in volunteering, we have two shifts for our volunteers. The morning shift is from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and the afternoon shift will be from 12:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. You can even volunteer for both shifts.

There will be an opportunity to sign up to volunteer at our Kickoff Event in the rotunda on Monday, April 21st, 2014. The Special Olympics Committee will be in the Rotunda with music playing, sign-up sheets for volunteers, and cupcakes. Feel free to stop by to sign up to volunteer or learn more about the Day of Games. If you or someone you know is interested in volunteering for the Day of Games, you can contact Aubrey Mable at amable@bryant.edu for more information.

Additionally, you can support the Special Olympics-Bryant University Day of Games by following our Twitter Account: @BryantSOR12014 or our Facebook page “Special Olympics of Rhode Island – Bryant University” for more updates and information. Your support of the Special Olympics is greatly appreciated. Hope to see you at Kickoff in the rotunda on April 21st and at the Day of Games on May 3rd!

The Special Olympics at Bryant

By Jenna Kennan
Contributing Writer

This past week, Bryant’s chapter of Pi Sigma Epsilon sent six members to the Northeast Regional Conference in Miami, Florida. At the convention, chapters compete on various different topics such as Service, Marketing, CCO training, Father PRO projects, recruitment challenges, the Pro-Am Sell-a-Thon, and a Case Study Competition. They also attend different types of meetings and presentations such as Certified Chapter Officer training, Roundtables, and Keynote speakers.

The week started off on April 8th as the group left Bryant in the wee hours of the morning for Logan Airport. Tuesday was one of the more relaxed days of the busy week, so the group took the opportunity to see some sites and take in the local cuisine. Some time was also spent starting to prepare for the Pro-Am Sell-a-Thon, a sales competition, that would take place on Friday.

Wednesday through Friday were very event-filled days for the Zeta Rho chapter. A good portion of the day Wednesday was spent in a presentation given by President Dan Maitland of MultiView on Fearless Selling. Maitland gave the audience tips and tricks when making a sale, including what types of questions to ask the buyer and how to close a deal. The presentation was both informative and entertaining for our members as they prepared themselves for the sales competition that was right around the corner.

The day Wednesday was spent in a presentation given by President Dan Maitland of MultiView on Fearless Selling. Maitland gave the audience tips and tricks when making a sale, including what types of questions to ask the buyer and how to close a deal. The presentation was both informative and entertaining for our members as they prepared themselves for the sales competition that was right around the corner. Zeta Rho’s members had another busy day Thursday, starting off with the annual meeting. It was announced at this meeting that Pi Sigma Epsilon-Zeta Rho of Bryant University will be hosting the Northeast Regional Conference in November. Directly following the meeting, some of our members participated in Chapter Certified Officer training, including VP of PR and VP of Marketing sections specifically. At these training sessions, our members learned how to better and more effectively lead our chapter in their given position. They also learned techniques specifically needed in their positions as well as how to use COG, the Chapter Operations Guide used by Headquarters, more efficiently. From CCO training, our members went to the PSE Career Fair to set up for the Recruitment Challenge. The challenge was the day that really tested the abilities of our members with five participating in the Pro-Am Sell-a-Thon sales competition at different points throughout the day and three of our members presenting in the Case Study competition. The prompt for the sales competition was, as a MultiView employee, you had to sell targeted online advertising impressions to Covidien, an existing customer of the company. The competition was a learning experience for all, and two of our members were even able to close the deal in the allotted 12 minutes.

Next came the Case Study Competition. Our members were given a prompt to come up with a target market and marketing campaign for Geico Auto Insurance. Our team presented in the preliminary round in front of two judges, but then had to present two more times as they made it to the Top Three teams out of seventeen. The other two teams were from University of Missouri and Ohio State University.

On Saturday evening, the convention was closed out with a banquet and awards presentation. It was here that it was announced that the Pi Sigma Epsilon 2015 National Convention will be hosted in Houston, Texas. Awards were also given out for projects, Top Chapters, the Pro-Am Sell-a-Thon, the Recruitment Challenge and the Case Competition. At the Awards ceremony, Bryant’s Case Study Competition team was awarded with second place, receiving a trophy and $500 dollars towards our chapter.

We are so proud of our members that competed and participated this week. We would also like to say thank you to all those who have helped guide us and support us on our road to nationals!
A bigger screen:
There are a couple rumors centered on this topic. Some believe Apple will up its screen size to 4.7 inches. Others anticipate an iPhone-PiPad hybrid, a device with a 5.5 to 5.7 inch screen. It is probable that the new iPhone will have increased retina display, which Apple is known for by its viewing ability. The current iPhone has a viewing distance of 10 inches, whereas the current tablet has that of 15 inches. The iPhone 6 is reported to increase its retina display and thus viewing distance by a few inches.

Sapphire screens:
This is a theory that many brush off as simply too outrageous, however, it may carry some weight. GT Advanced has proven technology which utilizes sapphire to make smartphone screens indestructible. Coincidently enough, GT Advanced has signed a contract with Apple which has a facility in Arizona testing these durable screens. Now, Apple already uses sapphire technology to cover the camera lens and TouchID sensor on the iPhones, so it is not far fetched that they expand the technology to the screen.

Curved screens:
A Bloomberg report in November revealed Apple is working on a curved glass that would allow its designers to edge the phone with added sensors to detect different levels of pressure. This advancement would be able to detect light or heavy touch of the finger, thus allowing the phone to respond to direct intentional touches, versus light touches that may have been a mistake.

Thinner body:
If your current iPhone isn’t slender enough, the iPhone 6 is guaranteed to be even slimmer. Rumors have surfaced that the iPhone 6 may in fact be dubbed the iPhone Air due to its trim shape. Along with this, another rumor stems the idea that the iPhone 6 may remove the home button. Instead, the iPhone would have a larger screen with less unusable space. In this case, the screen would need to include a fingerprint sensor to replace the physical button, and a finger print reader built into the screen itself.

Better camera:
It is common belief that the iPhone 6 will naturally have a better camera. Reports indicate the existing 8 megapixel camera could see improvements up to 15 megapixels. Many believe the iPhone 6 will have better image stabilization than its current abilities. The new camera will allegedly use new sensors that will capture clearer images regardless of the lighting capacity to minimize the color shift. So when we will see this new iPhone? Traditionally Apple has kept new product announcements confined to the months of September or October. Many believe this tradition will continue while others expect the iPhone 6 to be announced as early as May or June this year.

Troubling data about talent management & succession
By Professor Michael Roberto
Faculty Writer

Stanford’s David Larcker, Stephen Miles, and Brian Tayan have written a new article titled “Seven Myths of CEO Succession.” They cite some rather startling statistics about succession. Each year, approximately 10 to 15 percent of companies change CEOs either because of retirement, recruitment to another firm, resignation following poor performance, or for health-related issues. For this reason, shareholders expect companies that have a chosen successor identified at all times to immediately assume the CEO position should the need arise. Unfortunately, research data indicates that this is often not the case. According to a 2010 study by Heidrick & Struggles and the Rock Center for Corporate Governance at Stanford University, only 54 percent of companies state that they are grooming a specific successor to the CEO position, and 39 percent claim to have no viable internal candidates to permanently replace the CEO if required to do so immediately. Wow... what an indictment of the leaders and the leadership development efforts at many companies! Nearly 4 of 10 firms report “no viable internal candidates.” The data raise some troubling questions. Are these firms not investing in leadership development efforts? Or, are they spending unwisely in their efforts to groom future leaders? Perhaps most importantly, are many firms not holding their senior executives, including the CEO, accountable for developing talented people who can assume top positions in the future? CEOs and other top leaders should be held responsible for these things, that meeting financial and non-financial performance targets. They also need to be held accountable for talent development and succession. That part of their job helps to ensure the long term viability and success of the institution.

The college student’s guide to working smarter, not harder
By John Zeiner
Business Editor

As college students, we tend to think that we know everything there is to know about technology. Unfortunately, often times this technology gets the better of us and we end up scrolling through Instagram or Twitter when we are supposed to be writing a paper. The abundance of available apps have made us less productive, if anything. The main purpose of smartphones, having a mobile device that allows one to work from anywhere, tends to be overlooked in its day-to-day use. In order to stay on top of things you need the right tools for the job. So whether you are killing time between class or on the road, here are a few tips that will help you stay productive, regardless of where you are.

1. Step up your note-taking game with Evernote.
Evernote is the Michael Jordan of all note-taking apps. It allows you to keep everything in sync by making all notes, web clips, files and images available on every device and computer you use. When you stumble upon something cool while you’re out and about, take a picture, record some audio and save it. It also makes research easier than ever by collecting information from anywhere into a single place. From text notes to web pages to files and even snapshots, everything is always at your fingertips. As students who go to a school notorious for group projects, it is important to be able to work with friends and other peers. With Evernote you can share your notes and collaborate on projects with colleagues and classmates. In a time where we are constantly bombarded with information, it is important to keep it organized. Evernote allows for organization by keywords, tags, location, or date in conjunction with superior connectivity. It is available on every major device so you will never be without your notes.

2. Use Quickoffice to access Microsoft Office documents on the go.
Quickoffice enables the user to read, create, or edit Office documents, no matter what device you are using. This will be very useful in making quick changes to papers right before they are due. Although it does not have the same capabilities of the full Office suite, Quickoffice is extremely useful when you need access to an Excel, PowerPoint, or Word document away from the computer. Google acquired the company in June 2012 and re-released it as a free app in September 2013. This allows all students to use their bryant.edu account and have access to all their Google Drive files as well.

3. Speaking of Google, never be late to another meeting or interview with the Google Now app.
Instead of checking a plethora of apps, Google Now reminds you of important things with a simple glance. They want you to get just the right information at just the right time. It provides you with the weather before you start your day, the best route to take to avoid traffic, or even your favorite team’s score while they are playing. Google Now operates in the background so you don’t have to. Your specific information is automatically organized into simple cards that appear just when they’re needed. To put it simply, Google Now delivers the information you care about, without having to search for it and exactly when you want it.

4. Use Keeper Password & DataVault to manage and secure your passwords.
Now more than ever it is imperative to stay on top of all your online account information. With the excessive number of different account usernames and passwords we have, it is important to keep everything secure. If you are not using a password manager, chances are your passwords aren’t secure and certain apps may not defend you from password theft. Keeper Password & DataVault will store all your passwords securely so you can access them from any device. This comes in handy considering the fact that creating new passwords and remembering them across all devices is immensely difficult to do.

5. Blur the lines between on-the-go file access and local desktop access with Google Drive
As a Bryant student, this is undoubtedly one of the most used apps by all students. All group projects begin synonymously with “Alright, I’ll make a Google doc.” Instead of having to keep track of the latest versions of files and collaborate with co-workers via email, use cloud-based Google Drive to make real time edits that everyone has access to, regardless of what device they are using. This app makes collaboration a breeze while simultaneously having the greatest accessibility and ease of use out of any app on the market.

Weekly Business Graph

Passing Muster

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Brokers who failed the exam on first or more times</th>
<th>Number of exam failures</th>
<th>Percentage of those brokers with failures</th>
<th>Number of brokers per 1,000 brokers</th>
<th>Red flags of all types were more likely for those who failed the exam three or more times, except for customer complaints</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>0.0 %</td>
<td>0.4%</td>
<td>248</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>13.4%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1.0 %</td>
<td>2.1%</td>
<td>280</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>15.2%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.0 %</td>
<td>3.9%</td>
<td>372</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>18.6%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.0 %</td>
<td>6.4%</td>
<td>441</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>18.8%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Weekly Business Graph

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Percentage of brokers who had a disclosure, by type</th>
<th>Number of exam failures</th>
<th>Percentage of those brokers with failures</th>
<th>Number of brokers per 1,000 brokers</th>
<th>Red flags of all types were more likely for those who failed the exam three or more times, except for customer complaints</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Terminated</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Regular activity</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Criminal Charges</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Customer complaint</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Financial</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0.0%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

By John Zeiner
Business Editor
Behind the camera of Bryant Sports

By Ryan Bizier
Contributing Writer

For the parent who cannot make the 3 hour drive to the Bryant campus, for the roommate who cannot make the 3 minute walk to the gym in the rain, the Bryant Sports Network is there to ensure that those who are unable to cheer on Bryant Athletics in person can still watch.

‘Needless to say, juggling all of this is no easy task. For Anderson, one mishap could mean that countless people could miss big moments such as a buzzer beating three pointer, or a walk-off homerun.’

With a simple laptop and internet connection, anyone can watch the Bulldogs compete from the comfort of their dorm room. Just how much preparation and hard work goes into webcasting these sporting events? Anyone who has ever played competitive collegiate sports knows that a substantial amount of practice and hard work goes into getting ready to compete. Not many people however, know just how much preparation and hard work goes into webcasting sporting events for the general public to see.

Anderson, who is in his first year of working for the Bryant Sports Network, is tasked with performing a variety of duties. These duties include performing post-game interviews, maintaining the Bryant Athletics YouTube page, shooting B-roll footage, editing highlights and occasionally providing color commentary.

Needless to say, juggling all of this is no easy task. For Anderson, one mishap could mean that countless people could miss big moments such as a buzzer beating three pointer, or a walk-off homerun. Despite the stress that comes with the job, Anderson notes that his passion for sports keeps his enjoyment within the work.

“If I was not doing this, I would not have the same enjoyment,” Anderson said. “I would not get as much enjoyment as I do from my work.”

Another important job of Anderson’s is seeing the Bryant Sports Network’s student workers. Employed are 12-15 part-time students who are taught first-hand how to operate camera equipment, direct, and provide graphics as well as color commentary to every heart stopping moment of Bryant Athletics.

Typically three to four students work each sporting event. Basketball games usually require two students on camera with another on instant replay duty along with a fourth as director duty. Some events however, like Lacrosse only require 2-3 workers.

Camera duty for student workers is straight forward and only requires following where the action is occurring on the court or field. Director duty is far more taxing as it involves updating graphics with scoring changes, switching between cameras, and deciding what commercials to cut to and when.

“The skills that the students pick up on the job help them stand out to future employers, some of which could even be NESN or ESPN.”

During long weekends and school vacations, the Bryant Sports Network occasionally finds itself short staffed. After many students migrate home for breaks Anderson is forced to perform multiple tasks at once, making the execution all the more important.

It is easy to overlook the little people when being entertained. When the crowd is cheering and the music is taking over the room, it is easy to forget that there are people working to make sure that everyone enjoys the ride. So the next time you find yourself tuning into a sporting event on television or through a webcast, just remember someone is standing there through the wind and rain holding a camera.

For Luke Anderson, Director of New Media, this work includes hours of setting up camera and computer equipment before games, followed by hours of editing of footage after games to be uploaded to the Bryant Athletics YouTube page.

Most spectators begin rolling into sporting events 20-30 minutes before the contests begin. Anderson on the other hand typically arrives anywhere from 1-3 hours before game time in order to set up the equipment needed to broadcast online to those who cannot be in attendance.

The Bulldogs pride themselves on their hitting, and they are one of the best offenses in the conference.

Junior outfielder Madeline Velasquez has been one of the leaders for the Bulldogs this year. As the leader at the plate, Velasquez has hit .339 and leads the team with 30 RBIs. Senior shortstop Aubrey Malse is one of the best hitters on the team, saving one of her best seasons for last with the Bulldogs. She is batting .374 on the year, leading the team. Sophomore pitcher Elle Madsen has gotten it done from the plate as well. She leads the team in homeruns with 11. The Bulldogs pride themselves on their hitting, and they are one of the best teams doing it.

One of the other reasons for their success this year has been their pitching. With her success at the plate, Madsen has been dominant from the mound this year for the Bulldogs. She has struck out 107 batters, and has an ERA of 2.87. Sophomore pitcher Haley Bottino has really had a stellar season from the mound this year. In just 30 innings, she has 10 strikeouts and even has a complete game. The success from the mound has not only helped the Bulldogs stay in games, but has also made fewer opportunities for the defense to make plays in the field.

Even if the Bulldogs were giving up hits from the mound, they are still one of the better defensive teams in the conference. Their fielding percentage is about .10 higher than their opponents. With stellar pitching and great defense behind it, there aren’t many scoring opportunities for opponents, which is why the Bulldogs have been so successful this year.

The combination of great pitching, hitting, and defense has led the Bulldogs to being one of the best teams in the conference. There will be plenty of chances for the team to improve even more, with plenty more conference opponents left to play. The team can still make sure the rest of the conference knows they are serious competitors.

The Bulldogs’ next test will be against URI Wednesday in Kingston. Following the one game, the Bulldogs will play conference rival Robert Morris in New York for two games.

By Justin Beaucage
Sports Editor

With so much attention on some of the other teams at Bryant, some of the Bulldogs sports teams go under the radar. The Bulldogs’ softball team has truly been the underdog story this season. However, with their play recently, under the radar is the last place this team should be in.

The Bulldogs’ softball team has not just been one of the best teams on campus, but they have shown they are one of the best teams in the conference. The team is 22-15 on the season, including an 8-2 record in the conference. The Bulldogs are also one of the best teams at home, with an 8-2 record at Bulldogs Stadium. The team enjoyed a seven game winning streak, and has won nine of the last twelve games. They have certainly shown they are one of the best teams in the conference, and will look to keep playing at this high level for the rest of the season heading into the tournament.

The team has really stepped up to the plate and been one of the best hitting teams in the NEC. In 37 games this year, they have scored 386 runs, including 30 homeruns. They are hitting a phenomenal .303 from the plate, and have an on base percentage of over .470. Clearly, getting on base is one of the strong points for the Bulldogs, and has led them to becoming one of the best offenses in the conference.
Thomas Tatar, who finished the season weeks. one in the past six games when the return, the 24-year-old has not potted 20th. However, after scoring 12 goals scoring 23 of his 28 goals since January been as hot as anyone since late January, their ailing stars. Gustav Nyquist has their young guns who have filled in for lowest since the 2010-11 season. Goaltender Jimmy Howard has missed some time and hasn't played his best. Goaltender Jimmy Howard has missed some time and hasn't played his best. His .910 save percentage and 2.66 GAA are both his lowest since the 2010-11 season. It appears that Zetterberg won't be ready for the series opener, but there's a chance he could return in the later games if this one goes the distance.

Bruins v. Red Wings
The teams will face off in the first round of the Stanley Cup

By Mark Gallant
Staff Writer

The Red Wings have clinched the 8th seed in the eastern conference and will be taking on the Bruins in the first round of the Stanley Cup Playoffs. A mix of young and old for Detroit has given the Bruins problems this year, but the Presidents' Trophy winning team won't go down easy.

After winning the first game of the series seasons 4-1, Boston dropped three straight to the Wings despite their injury problems. Captain Henrik Zetterberg has only played in 45 games due to a back injury and the highly skilled Pavel Datsyuk has only played 45 as well. It appears that Zetterberg won't be ready for the series opener, but there's a chance he could return in the later games if this one goes the distance.

Goalie Jimmy Howard has missed some time and hasn't played his best when he is in net either. His .910 save percentage and 2.66 GAA are both his lowest since the 2010-11 season. Goaltender Jimmy Howard has missed some time and hasn't played his best. His .910 save percentage and 2.66 GAA are both his lowest since the 2010-11 season. It appears that Zetterberg won't be ready for the series opener, but there's a chance he could return in the later games if this one goes the distance.

The real story for Detroit has been their young guns who have filled in for their ailing stars. Gustav Nyquist has been as hot as anyone since late January, scoring 23 of his 28 goals since January 20th. However, after scoring 12 goals in ten games before Pavel Datsyuk's return, the 24-year-old has not posted one in the past six games when the Magic Man has been in the lineup. Hopefully for the Bruins, Nyquist will stay cold for the next couple weeks.

Another strong youngster has been Thomas Tatar, who finished the season with 19 goals, but has also gone cold since Datsyuk's return. However, the Red Wings are plenty deep and have the ability to score on all four lines, similar to the Bruins. The addition of David Legwand at the trade deadline has proven to be a smart move, as the ex-lifelong Predator has put up 11 points in 21 games since joining the team.

For the Bruins, the key will be for the defense to keep up with Detroit's speed. The Detroit forwards are exceptionally quick and skilled and must be slowed down in transition in order to be stopped. The Bruins shouldn't have a terrible time scoring themselves, especially if their top three lines come out hot. The Carl Soderberg-Loui Eriksson Swedish connection could be the x-factor in the series, as they have looked pretty darn good the last few weeks. Definitely one of, if not the best, third line in the league, especially if Eriksson can play up to his potential.

This definitely won’t be an easy first series for Boston. Obviously, there has been some extremely entertaining first round series for the Bruins (see Bruins vs. Montreal 2011 and Bruins vs. Maple Leafs 2015) and this one is shaping up to be another barn-burner. On paper, this Red Wings team could easily be a three or four seed rather than an eight. The Red Wings have clinched the 8th seed in the eastern conference and will be taking on the Bruins in the first round of the Stanley Cup Playoffs. A mix of young and old for Detroit has given the Bruins problems this year, but the Presidents' Trophy winning team won't go down easy.

The Red Wings have clinched the 8th seed in the eastern conference and will be taking on the Bruins in the first round of the Stanley Cup Playoffs. A mix of young and old for Detroit has given the Bruins problems this year, but the Presidents' Trophy winning team won't go down easy.

Most talked about: Johnny Manziel

By Justin Beaucage
Sports Editor

He's one of the most exciting college prospects in recent drafts. He is the most captivating, polarizing, and highlight reel making quarterback in the NFL Draft. Johnny Manziel is certainly the most talked about NFL prospect in this year's draft. Always tending to make headlines on and off the field, Manziel is also one of the most scrutinized players to be scouted. To go with ankle breaking jukes and long throws down the field, he is best known for partying, drinking, and other antics. This has made him one of the more controversial players in recent drafts.

Yes, he is an enigma. He's exciting, breath-taking, and a super-ego, just to describe Manziel in a few words. However, as of late, he seems to have taken a turn, and one could add mature and humble to that description.

Has Johnny "Football" finally figured out how to be a professional athlete? The former Texas A&M quarterback, who could be seen getting in defender's faces, taunting opponents, or celebrating touchdowns, has gone from a flashy diva to a confident, mature quarterback. In this draft process, from the combine to his pro day, Manziel has take the leadership role, presenting himself as someone who can lead a franchise. He has answered interview questions up front, showed off all of his talents, and taken his work extremely seriously. He has made the headlines for more good news than bad.

It certainly has been quite the draft process for Manziel. Not only did he silence critics by running one of the fastest forty yard dashes among quarterbacks, but he also dressed in full pads for his pro day, something that is unheard of. With all of his gear on, he performed and threw better than most of the other quarterbacks. He has certainly gone out of his way to silence all the critics.

There have been plenty of teams that have been impressed by Manziel's efforts this offseason. The Oakland Raiders, Cleveland Browns, and Tampa Bay Buccaneers have all said they would have claimed him had they reached. It certainly seems like Manziel, on and off the field, is a great prospect.

There is still doubt that Manziel can keep up this leadership and persona. However, it’s great to see he has adjusted his antics away from the game to make himself into a better prospect. There was never a question of Manziel's talents on the field. There hasn’t been a player with his combination of arm strength, mobility, and finesse in college football for quite some time. There were always doubts about his actions between plays or after games, as it created much doubt for how legitimate of a player he really was. With the way he has treated this draft process, he is certainly proving he can be a leader of a franchise.

There is still a month to go until the draft, and there is still time for Manziel to either improve his stock, or to watch it fall by doing something off the field. Manziel is projected to be a top-ten pick, and could even go number one overall still. If Manziel can carry over his talents from college and still continue his leadership role, there is no reason he shouldn't be the first pick in the NFL Draft.

Johnny Manziel player to watch (MCT Campus)

Week's Best

Sports Tweets

Aaron Rodgers @AaronRodgers12

Nothing like Sunday at the masters with a tight leaderboard. Would love to see @RickyFowlerPGA or Spieth take it. Or MAJ and the ponytail.

John Calipari @UKCoachCalipari

It's a great opportunity for Rod, but it's also a great thing for @USFCoachT to have Rod, his experience and his knowledge at his side.

Nate Robinson @nate_robinson

Yeah I got on superman socks so #holdat & I got on #J's #HiH8ers
Watson wins Masters for second time

By Justin Beaucage
Sports Editor

When Bubba Watson won his first Masters two years ago, he completed what was one of the most improbable tournament wins in golfing history. At such a young age, Watson wasn’t supposed to stand a chance against the field. However, he completed what was one of the most remarkable tournament wins in history, winning the most important tournament in the golfing season. All Watson knew was he didn’t want to be his only champion, as he knew he wanted to earn one of the most prestigious prizes in golf.

Watson didn’t wait too long, as he earned his second Masters Tournament win in three years this past weekend.

In what was a competitive tournament the entire weekend, Watson really ran away with his second Masters victory. On the final day of competition, he shot a -69, the same score he had in 2012 when he won the tournament, despite some competition from Spieth, Watson won back-to-back birdies on eighth and ninth hole. On the back 9, Watson secured the victory on No. 13 when he fired the drive a whopping 366 yards, and tapped in the birdie. From there on, it was Watson’s title to lose, as he cruised to his second Masters championship in three years.

With his tournament win, Watson becomes just the eighteenth golfer to win multiple masters championships. Clearly, this is quite an honor for Watson, as he has secured his spot as one of the best golfers on the green today.

Watson admits he might have lost focus in pursuit of his second Masters championship. He said that, during the last couple of holes, he really lost track and didn’t remember how he managed to do so well. He said he got into a zone that he really couldn’t get out of, and that’s what helped him concentrate on winning his second masters title.

It is also said that the 49ers cut Aldon Smith loose now. The guy is a ticking time bomb, as are the lot of these young players who got too much money and too much fame too fast. Touching on a deeper issue, is inexcusable as his behavior is, Smith is only 24 years old. It seems very clear that the system is partly to blame for all of these off the field issues.

The system is flawed, but it does have procedures in place to prevent this kind of thing to happening. Every player submits to a Human Resource Tactics (HRT) report before being drafted in the NFL. Smith’s in 2011 warned potential teams about his susceptibility to trouble. When referring to Smith the report directly stated, “He has some past experience with getting into trouble and is a higher-than-average risk for this sort of behavior in the future”. I’m not sure how much brighter and bigger the red flag has to get. On top of that the HRT reported multiple times on how potentially lazy the linbacker would be.

Watson wins Masters for second time

By Matt Gillen
Marketing & Business Director

I made a crucial mistake in my NFL article last week. You really can’t talk about illegal behavior by players in the NFL without bringing up Aldon Smith’s name. The 49ers starting outside linebacker is always in the limelight. Half of the time for his exceptional play on the field, the other half for his exceptional ability to break the law and get caught.

Smith was just arrested for the fourth time in the past 18 months. In that short time, in between racking up sacks, the player racked up two DUIs, three felony accounts of possession of an illegal assault weapon and was arrested just this Sunday, April 13th for giving a false bomb threat after being selected to be searched by TSA officers at LAX airport.

According to LAX Police Sgt. Karla Ortiz, Smith was selected for a secondary screening and once they finished he asked if they needed to search him anymore. When the officer said that it wasn’t necessary he calmly replied, “Why not? I have a bomb”. It was all over from there; he was arrested on the spot. As funny as Smith and you or I might find that comment, as it seems quite obvious that a professional football player would not be bringing a bomb into an airport — or admit to it — the TSA has to take every threat seriously in order to keep people safe. Smith was already on thin ice after receiving his second DUI arrest in the middle of the 2013 season and then entered rehab for alcohol abuse, missing 5 games. Currently Smith is still facing charges for the drug driving, and illegal weapons arrests.

So, the big picture here is that Aldon Smith is a phenomenal player and huge staple of San Francisco’s widely feared defense, and also the biggest liability on the team at this point. With only one, optional year left on his contract with the team it will be interesting to see if they take a page from the Eagles book and cut him loose now. The guy is a ticking time bomb, as are a lot of these young players who got too much money and too much fame too fast. Touching on a deeper issue, is inexcusable as his behavior is, Smith is only 24 years old. It seems very clear that the system is partly to blame for all of these off the field issues.

More bad boys of the league: Should the 49ers cut Aldon Smith loose?

By Matt Gillen
Marketing & Business Director

I made a crucial mistake in my NFL article last week. You really can’t talk about illegal behavior by players in the NFL without bringing up Aldon Smith’s name. The 49ers starting outside linebacker is always in the limelight. Half of the time for his exceptional play on the field, the other half for his exceptional ability to break the law and get caught.

Smith was just arrested for the fourth time in the past 18 months. In that short time, in between racking up sacks, the player racked up two DUIs, three felony accounts of possession of an illegal assault weapon and was arrested just this Sunday, April 13th for giving a false bomb threat after being selected to be searched by TSA officers at LAX airport.

According to LAX Police Sgt. Karla Ortiz, Smith was selected for a secondary screening and once they finished he asked if they needed to search him anymore. When the officer said that it wasn’t necessary he calmly replied, “Why not? I have a bomb”. It was all over from there; he was arrested on the spot. As funny as Smith and you or I might find that comment, as it seems quite obvious that a professional football player would not be bringing a bomb into an airport — or admit to it — the TSA has to take every threat seriously in order to keep people safe. Smith was already on thin ice after receiving his second DUI arrest in the middle of the 2013 season and then entered rehab for alcohol abuse, missing 5 games. Currently Smith is still facing charges for the drug driving, and illegal weapons arrests.

So, the big picture here is that Aldon Smith is a phenomenal player and huge staple of San Francisco’s widely feared defense, and also the biggest liability on the team at this point. With only one, optional year left on his contract with the team it will be interesting to see if they take a page from the Eagles book and cut him loose now. The guy is a ticking time bomb, as are a lot of these young players who got too much money and too much fame too fast. Touching on a deeper issue, is inexcusable as his behavior is, Smith is only 24 years old. It seems very clear that the system is partly to blame for all of these off the field issues.

The system is flawed, but it does have procedures in place to prevent this kind of thing to happening. Every player submits to a Human Resource Tactics (HRT) report before being drafted in the NFL. Smith’s in 2011 warned potential teams about his susceptibility to trouble. When referring to Smith the report directly stated, “He has some past experience with getting into trouble and is a higher-than-average risk for this sort of behavior in the future”. I’m not sure how much brighter and bigger the red flag has to get. On top of that the HRT reported multiple times on how potentially lazy the linbacker would be.

The 49ers saw this report, read it, contemplated and talked about the implications and then disregarded it and signed the young head case. With that information we can accurately say that the 49ers organization is to blame for any backlash and negative image that rains down on them after this incident. San Francisco showed through their actions that they valued skill and winning games over dedication and integrity, and now here they are. Again, we hope that teams will take note of this example and send players like Aldon Smith somewhere terrible like the Raiders or the CFL.
Open positions available for The Archway!

Applications can be found online at bryantarchway.com and in the OCE Resource Center (3rd floor of FSC)

Due April 21st!
Lammily takes on Barbie as more realistic

By Kendra Hildebrand
Staff Writer

I'm a Barbie girl, in a Barbie world/'I believe in pink,' they say, when I'm a Barbie girl.'

Barbie is an icon of femininity that has been around since 1959. However, the design has not changed much since then. The doll is a skinny white woman, with blonde hair and a bright blue eyes. She comes with a range of clothing, including a wardrobe that can fit most women. However, the proportions are not realistic and do not reflect the average human body.

Barbie is not the only doll that has been criticized for not representing realistic body types. Other dolls, such as Lammily, have been created to provide a more realistic representation of women. Lammily is a doll that has been designed to look like an average nineteen year old woman. The doll has a realistic body type, with normal proportions and features. The doll has been praised for its body positivity and for promoting healthy body image.

There are many reasons why Barbie is not a realistic representation of women. First, the doll is an example of objectification and sexualization. Women are often portrayed as objects, rather than as individuals with their own thoughts and feelings. Additionally, Barbie is not a representation of the diversity of women's bodies. There are many women who do not fit the narrow standards of beauty that are often associated with Barbie.

However, there are also some positive aspects of Barbie. The doll is a symbol of childhood and imagination. Many children have played with Barbie dolls, and the dolls have been a source of inspiration for many girls. Additionally, the doll has been a source of empowerment for many women. Barbie has been used as a way to celebrate women's achievements and to promote confidence and self-esteem.

In conclusion, Barbie is not a realistic representation of women. The doll is an example of objectification and sexualization, and does not reflect the diversity of women's bodies. However, the doll has also been a source of inspiration and empowerment for many women. The debate over whether or not to replace Barbie with a more realistic doll is ongoing, and it is up to society to decide what is the best representation of women.
Parking problems persist and will get worse

By Sam Obar
Contributing Writer

Since 2000, in an effort to attract top students and faculty, Bryant University has undertaken several major construction projects, including the Bello Center, the Machleif Interfaith Center, and, most recently, the renovated Fisher Student Center. Bryant will also soon open a new facility next to the existing unistructure to house more classrooms and learning space.

But with all the additional people that are being brought to the institution because of those buildings, including visitors not part of the campus community, Bryant will eventually need to turn its attention to another serious concern: providing enough convenient parking.

Bryant currently has a parking problem that is only going to get worse as more new buildings go up. The problem affects everyone at Bryant - students, faculty, staff, and visitors.

Students are perhaps most affected by the shortage of parking space because they must compete for a limited number of parking spaces along the main street and walkways near the halls, and in a couple other small parking lots near the residence halls. Even though freshmen students must park in the general visitor parking lot near Bulldog Stadium, upperclassmen still often have difficulty finding parking spots near their residence halls.

The campus landscape, with walkways leading from each residence hall, was designed to prohibit most vehicular traffic within the suite village, and to only allow vehicles to drive and park on the perimeter of the campus. But this layout needs reconfiguration to allow expanded parking within the suite village.

For students who live in residence halls that are closer to the unistructure than to the parking lots, even the parking spaces along the strip are not convenient. In many cases, particularly on move-in and move-out days, students who need to bring heavy or large objects directly to or from their residence hall have no choice but to drive on the brick pedestrian walkways in the suite village in order to park close to the residence hall. During the school day, the school’s maintenance trucks also must drive on the pedestrian walkways because they have no other roadways to access certain residence halls.

These walkways are not wide enough for both vehicles and pedestrians, which presents safety concerns.

Keeping the pedestrian walkways in the center of campus is not as important as expanding parking. The university administration should consider redesigning the campus to include more centrally-located parking that allows access to all of the major buildings on campus and the suite village. These walkways can be replaced by modestly sized paved roads that allow drive-up access to residence halls, and some parking.

The new Fisher Center and Interfaith Center also do not have dedicated parking lots available for general use, which limits the ability for outside visitors to attend events at either of those facilities. The Hall 16 lot is generally full and is only available for students, and the lot directly adjacent to the Fisher Center is made up primarily of reserved spaces. The Fisher Center parking lot is so small that it creates safety concerns because of large trucks that need to use the building’s loading dock. Tractor trailers have to park in awkward and unsafe positions because the lot does not allow easy access to the loading dock.

Despite it being the hub of campus activity, the unistructure is also very inaccessible for students, staff, and faculty wishing to park close by. The rear parking lot between the athletic center and unistructure, used for deliveries to the MRC wing, is primarily made up of reserved parking spots. Delivery trucks must navigate a narrow lot and park in a fire lane in order to have access to a building.

There are no easily accessible parking lots available for general use near the unistructure. The only parking areas behind the unistructure are essentially gravel, with no easily identifiable spaces. These lots are routinely filled to capacity, and cars are not parked efficiently because of the lack of marked parking spaces.

The circular parking lot behind the unistructure’s rotunda is not big enough to handle the number of food staff, public safety, and maintenance employees who require access to the building from that location, along with the trucks that require access to the loading dock. As a result, maintenance and other vehicles are often parked in fire lanes and in front of other vehicles.

As it stands currently, most students, faculty, and outside visitors park in the general visitor lot that stretches from the Bello Center to the Bulldog Stadium. At night, this presents safety concerns, as some women have reported feeling unsafe walking so far to their vehicles.

In addition, at certain times of the year, these spots can fill up quickly if athletic events are held at the Bulldog Stadium, requiring students and staff to park even further from the center of campus. Football fans who want to tailgate are not given a dedicated parking area for their use, which takes up space for other campus visitors and members of the campus community.

Unlike new buildings, parking lots are relatively inexpensive and easy to create, and there is extensive open space behind the unistructure and between buildings on campus to put these lots. With the university’s rapid growth, now is the time to start expansion.

‘Mad Men,’ ‘Game of Thrones’ not so different after all

By Gina Barreca
MCT Campus

When wildly popular Sunday night television shows rely more heavily on fantasy: AMC’s Mad Men or HBO’s Game of Thrones? In one, a three-eyed raven is linked to prophetic powers called “greensight” that offer a supernatural ability to experience past, future or somehow otherwise inaccessible events through dreams to a young, albeit formidable woman appears, at one point or another, either half-naked, fully naked, in armor, in nightgowns, in slips, in chains, in bed, or with tears in their eyes in order to show they are vulnerable as well as fierce. So true, why are we such a girl’s gotta make a living. And powerfully patriarchal structures. True, all these formidable women appear, at one point or another, either half-naked, fully naked, in armor, in nightgowns, in slips, in chains, in bed, or with tears in their eyes in order to show they are vulnerable as well as fierce. So true, why are we such a girl’s gotta make a living.

And we cheer these characters as they cheat, lie and lead others into battle because, when compared to the depiction of female characters in other programs. True. Detectives, Homeland, and Teen Mom 3, for example these are the most dynamic and least cringe-inducing women on TV. Why? Because they are merely the decoratively dead victims of cult murders or going off their birth control or other meds when they are better. Alas they have much better lives.

Male characters have good lines, too. After all, isn’t their primary function to divert us from the anxieties and worries we’re actually facing when we start our real lives on Monday morning? What else is a fantasy for? Fantasize about the day I could murder him.”

Answers: 1. GoT, MM. 2. MM, GoT, MM, MM. Even if you did well, wasn’t it a little tricky? Both are Middle Ages based shows, perhaps, not so different: they were infused with the fear of, and real potential for, the destruction of civilization whether from plague or nuclear war. Considering recent and compelling world tensions, we haven’t got past those yet. We’ve dressed up the characters and added some heroism instead of addiction and deception, but I think we’d all rather be here.

Both Mad Men and Game of Thrones wrestle with timeless issues: the cutthroat nature of success, the incendiary results of certain forms of conflict and how to entertain ourselves on Sunday night.

Which wildly popular Sunday night television show relies more heavily on fantasy: AMC’s Mad Men or HBO’s Game of Thrones? In one, a three-eyed raven is linked to prophetic powers called “greensight” that offer a supernatural ability to experience past, future or somehow otherwise inaccessible events through dreams to a young, albeit unsegregated, noble child who is paralyzed by having been thrown from a crenelated balcony while witnessing the merely the decoratively dead victims of cult murders or going off their birth control or other meds when they are better. Alas they have much better lives. Male characters have good lines, too. After all, isn’t their primary function to divert us from the anxieties and worries we’re actually facing when we start our real lives on Monday morning? What else is a fantasy for?
By Zach DiFranza
Staff Writer

Sodexo is only half the problem

I am just as excited as the next Salmonson voyager to hear about the changes being made in the school's food provider. Sodexo certainly pleased with things like the turkey cutlet and chicken patties, but was inconsistent in quality. Many people even claimed most of the food was less than friendly on the digestive system. The change in provider is a start, but here are a few dining adjustments I would make.

1. Bacon:
Genuine bacon is hard to find at here at Bryant. Ronzios and Salmonson both seem to have a misunderstanding of what bacon is. No one wants little bits of dried pork that have been sitting on the shelf for who knows how long. People want hot, thick, and crispy slabs of flavorful bacon. I don’t think I’m alone in thinking some real bacon in my omelets and on my sandwiches would go a long way.

2. Subway:
I like Subway, but I wholeheartedly believe the space could be used in a better way. Salmonson and South both offer a wide selection of sandwich varieties, and Subway seems to be a little overkill. The space should be used to offer something unique rather than repetitiveness. If the university was interested in the highly profitable location and it would simply be a matter of Bryant’s opinion. Can you imagine having a Chipotle, Asa Grillé, or Panera on campus? It would hands down be worth the small sacrifice of one of our three sandwich options.

3. Bryant runs on Dunkin’
I think it’s safe to say that a significant portion of this campus consumes a Dunkin Donuts coffee on a regular basis, if not daily. Currently at about $2.50 for a medium iced coffee, it’s a hefty financial burden for the many people accustomed to daily coffee intake. So my radical theory involves a trade of swipes or other plan aspect for a Dunkin Donuts discount card. If the card made coffee around 99 cents, many students would likely be eager to trade away their swipes or dinning dollars. Depending on your meal plan it costs between 8 and 10 dollars per swipe, so one swipe would be equal to five $2.00 discounts. It’s quite logically plausible to implement such a program with little to no expense to the University.

4. Another Dining Hall
Look at any college review sight and you’ll see just how poorly Bryant’s dining is rating. Many comments suggested a lack of options and need for another dining hall. Bryant’s student population is growing, and the new physician assistant programs will draw in even more. With Salmonson crowded already, it’s a pretty legitimate argument. The question would be a matter of where this dining hall would be located. Perhaps, Bryant could renovate Golski and turn it into a later hour dinner option. Golski could still serve staff normally during the day, but open to the students at about 6 when few faculty are on campus anyways.

In conclusion, Bryant is making strides to improve their dining options, but going from a D+ to a C- won’t have much appeal to current and incoming students. If Bryant wants people to rave about their dining options, they are going to have to think revolutionarily.

Greek Life Corner
Greek Week more than just winning

By Grace-Ann Onishea
Contributing Writer

Greek Week is a week dedicated to friendly competition between the sororities and fraternities on campus. This year Greek Week kicked off on March 30th with the Lip Sync competition. Everybody brought their best dance moves and a popular theme this year was Frozen and the Backstreet Boys. The rest of the week consisted of a three-legged race, egg and spoon race, basketball, soccer, volleyball, etc. Each task tested each Greek’s athleticism, patience, and team work.

But, why do Greeks love Greek Week so much? Isn’t it a little childish and a lot like Field Day in Elementary school? The answer is that Greek Week brings the entire Greek community together. Ask any Greek on campus and they’ll tell you Greek Week promotes unity. Cheesy, right? Actually, no. Greeks make up only a small percentage of the population here at Bryant University. Usually this small population is scrutinized and held to the stereotype that movies like Zoolander and Animal House have created. However, Greeks have higher GPA’s than overall college GPA and the majority of the men and women on the Fortune 500 list were Greeks. These statistics often go unnoticed because negative conceptions are usually associated with Greek Life.

By celebrating Greek Week, Greeks are hoping to obtain visibility on campus. When you see an editor of the Archway or a student ambassador or an e-board member of an organization on campus wearing the Greek Week t-shirt did you think differently of them? Did you think, “Wow he/she must party a lot.” Or did it make you realize that Greek men and women despite being small have made a huge impact on our campus for the better? They are the ones in ACE helping you make appointments and tutoring you or the ones working together to improve our Bryant Community through acts of leadership.

Yes, during Greek Week I can assure you that every Greek is secretly wishing the other team trips or spells a word wrong. They might believe in a higher standard, but they’re still a competitive bunch. They train prior to every event and new members are expected to bring their A-game to their very first Greek Week. One freshman said, “My first Greek Week definitely lived up to expectation. It was crazy to see how competitive everybody got and how everyone had their game faces on. I definitely feel closer to the Greek Life community as a whole after Greek Week. It wasn’t just about winning, but getting to know everyone.”

So that’s the inside scoop. Greek Week isn’t about who wins it all—by the way, Delta Zeta and Delta Chi currently hold the first place trophy — but, it’s about unifying the Greek community. By coming together and wearing the Greek Week t-shirts around campus they were gaining visibility. People might have been buzzing about who was winning what event, but they were also acknowledging that Greeks are just typical college kids who believe in teamwork and love friendly competition.

Greek Life Corner

Profit and Loss

Bryant Said What?!

Compiled by Bryant Students

“IT’s only like when a dog pees on every tree...”

“I’m sorry the lamp I threw at you is broken.”

“Oh that’s why my boobs were itchy...there’s a bunch of Doritos down my shirt”

“I wanna snag a photo with a B- celebrity, maybe an American Idol. Like Ace Ventura?”

“I hope there are cool young people at this burrito place so we can be like - you get me.”

Happy Easter Weekend everyone! Enjoy your time with your family.

$ Sunshine and sandals have begun!

$ Spring Weekend tickets are selling quick! Make sure you get in line.

$ Will campus WiFi ever get better?

Greek Life Corner

Greek Week more than just winning

By Grace-Ann Onishea
Contributing Writer

Greek Week is a week dedicated to friendly competition between the sororities and fraternities on campus. This year Greek Week kicked off on March 30th with the Lip Sync competition. Everybody brought their best dance moves and a popular theme this year was Frozen and the Backstreet Boys. The rest of the week consisted of a three-legged race, egg and spoon race, basketball, soccer, volleyball, etc. Each task tested each Greek’s athleticism, patience, and team work.

But, why do Greeks love Greek Week so much? Isn’t it a little childish and a lot like Field Day in Elementary school? The answer is that Greek Week brings the entire Greek community together. Ask any Greek on campus and they’ll tell you Greek Week promotes unity. Cheesy, right? Actually, no. Greeks make up only a small percentage of the population here at Bryant University. Usually this small population is scrutinized and held to the stereotype that movies like Zoolander and Animal House have created. However, Greeks have higher GPA’s than overall college GPA and the majority of the men and women on the Fortune 500 list were Greeks. These statistics often go unnoticed because negative conceptions are usually associated with Greek Life.

By celebrating Greek Week, Greeks are hoping to obtain visibility on campus. When you see an editor of the Archway or a student ambassador or an e-board member of an organization on campus wearing the Greek Week t-shirt did you think differently of them? Did you think, “Wow he/she must party a lot.” Or did it make you realize that Greek men and women despite being small have made a huge impact on our campus for the better? They are the ones in ACE helping you make appointments and tutoring you or the ones working together to improve our Bryant Community through acts of leadership.

Yes, during Greek Week I can assure you that every Greek is secretly wishing the other team trips or spells a word wrong. They might believe in a higher standard, but they’re still a competitive bunch. They train prior to every event and new members are expected to bring their A-game to their very first Greek Week. One freshman said, “My first Greek Week definitely lived up to expectation. It was crazy to see how competitive everybody got and how everyone had their game faces on. I definitely feel closer to the Greek Life community as a whole after Greek Week. It wasn’t just about winning, but getting to know everyone.”

So that’s the inside scoop. Greek Week isn’t about who wins it all—by the way, Delta Zeta and Delta Chi currently hold the first place trophy — but, it’s about unifying the Greek community. By coming together and wearing the Greek Week t-shirts around campus they were gaining visibility. People might have been buzzing about who was winning what event, but they were also acknowledging that Greeks are just typical college kids who believe in teamwork and love friendly competition.
The Lost Wife: Love in the midst of war

By Sarah Rozenberg
Staff Writer

Lenka and Josef are both young students living in pre-war Prague. The two fall in love and get married, thinking that they can run away together and start a new life. The Nazi invasion comes too soon, however, and Lenka and Josef become separated from each other. Josef is able to escape with his family to America, and he becomes a successful doctor. Lenka is not so fortunate. She and her sister, mother, and father end up in the Nazi ghetto of Terezin. She struggles to stay alive, and just when she thinks it is the end, the war is over. Lenka has survived what most could not. Josef, meanwhile, believes that Lenka died in the war, and remarries. While he has a new family, he cannot forget about Lenka, and continues searching for her for many years. Lenka, who believes Josef died on the boat over to America, remarries as well, and moves to America with her husband. She too, feels empty without Josef in her life.

Years later, when Josef is at his grandson’s wedding in New York, he sees a woman who looks very familiar, like someone he knew from a lifetime ago. Upon closer inspection, he realizes that the woman is Lenka, the girl he married in Prague before the war. The girl he believed to be dead. But how is this possible? The two were separated decades ago, both coming to America at different times. Is this meeting of two past lovers a coincidence or fate? Could this be a second chance for them both?

The Lost Wife by Alyson Richman is a book about love, the holocaust, and believing in miracles even when there is almost no hope left. There is not as much historical information about the holocaust, rather there are more personal stories that cover the awful things that took place in the ghettos and camps. This perspective is more insightful and makes readers connect with the characters and their experiences. The way things are described will make readers sympathize with the characters and all that they have been through.

This is not an easy book to read, and having read many books about the holocaust, you may never know the more specific details because his personal doctor signed the death certificate so according to reports that means there would not be an autopsy. While there will not be an autopsy, his personal manager Larry Schapiro reportedly said John Pinette was clean and sober, despite past addiction problems. The Seinfeld finale was not what began John Pinette’s career. In fact, he toured the comedy club circuit for more than two decades before deciding to go into comedy. Pinette’s first performances were in the form of open mic nights at Boston Comedy Clubs, while he was reportedly going for an accounting degree in college.

After that, he was working in a bank, and during his time there he was offered $100 a night for more performances at comedy clubs. According to his personal manager, he effectively resigned from the bank the next day by reportedly going to lunch and not coming back. At the time of his death, John Pinette was working on a comedy set he had called “They Call Me Slim” about his weight loss.

For those who knew him personally, John Pinette was more than a comedian, he was a truly great, generous person. Reportedly, after his death, people who had worked with him would describe him as one of the most generous people they had ever worked with, while describing themselves as being very fortunate. His personal manager would give one last comment about how he always gave his money to the homeless people he saw.

Now, why was John Pinette one of my personal favorites of comedy? I believe that it was what made him different. In this society, it is easy for us to place a special importance on our physical image, which includes weight. For many professions, this is necessary to indicate that you are professional about the position. For comedy however, I feel like something about its nature needs people to let loose, which means a successful comedian needs to enjoy the time on the stage, and not worry so much about physical appearance. I feel like John Pinette understood this. More than that, he found a way to use his girth for a variety of his jokes (from misadventures in the water park, to him against the heat, to his battle against long buffet lines). In this way, I would say it was John Pinette’s courage on the stage that made him one of my personal favorites. To Mr. Pinette himself, you have provided very much laughter with your self aware brand of comedy. All I have left to say is, thank you. May you rest in peace.
The College Scoop

The price of two national titles is estimated at $55,000, at least in terms of damages to the University of Connecticut Storrs campus said Stephanie Reitz, the spokesperson for UConn. The men’s and women’s Final Four and championship victories resulted in broken light poles, smashed windows, a broken water fountain, a few rubbish fires, a missing stop sign, and a lot of trampled grass and shrubbery.

The Miscellany News

Vassar College

On Saturday, April 5, the Class of 2014, in collaboration with Vassar College Entertainment (ViCE), hosted the event “50 Nights at The Chance,” the annual event meant to commemorate the date that marks 50 nights until Commencement.

The event was held at The Chance Theater in Poughkeepsie. Though the event usually results in small damages and problems because of the number of people attending the event, this year’s 50 Nights event ended with multiple complaints of violence directed towards both students and Chance security officers and racked up several large damages to the venue and the buses.

The Heights

Boston College

Dean of Students Paul Chebator said in a phone interview that his office will ask students to respect runners and to remember the solemn nature of the Marathon, in which 35,000 runners—the course capacity—are expected to compete this year.

Student conduct policies regarding alcohol and behavior will be enforced, the majority of the RCPD force will be on campus, and about 20 staff from the office of the Vice President for Student Affairs will be on hand to remind students about conduct policies. Access to the Mods will be restricted to students over the age of 21—as it is during tailgating days in the fall.

“My biggest concerns [are] either alcohol use that becomes a safety issue where someone is jeopardizing their own safety or someone else’s safety. … Or alcohol use that results in inappropriate behavior,” Chebator said.

Open positions for The Archway!

Applications now available online at bryantarchway.com and in the OCE Resource Center (3rd floor FSC) Due April 21st!
Fading gigolo is more fading than funny

By Roger Moore
MCT Campus

Fading Gigolo is John Turturro’s idea of an old-school Woody Allen comedy, so he wrote Allen into it.

It’s a sentimental farce that presents Turturro as a Brooklyn Jack-of-all-trades whose pal (Allen) decides that another trade this Jack, named Fioravante, would be good at is pleasing women.

Allen is Murray, one of Fioravante’s several bosses, as the younger man has to juggle several service sector jobs to make ends meet in what we call “the gig economy.”

Murray runs a rare book shop, and he’s about to give up the ghost.

“Only rare people buy rare books.”

But those rare people figure the grandfatherly Murray can help them find something a little special like a third for a planned menage a trois.

Mild-mannered Murray has to talk milder-mannered Fioravante into it. It helps that Sharon Stone was the woman doing the soliciting.

“Is he clean?” the society trophy wife wants to know. “I’m a little crazed. I just came from an AIDS benefit.”

And we’re off, with Sofia Vergara as the “trois” in that menage. Fioravante tackles this new gig with sensitivity and compassion. That’s why Murray figures there’s no harm in offering him to this lonely Orthodox rabbi’s widow he’s just met.

Avigail (Vanessa Paradis) is lonely, depressed and, Murray figures, in desperate need of a man’s touch. But how do you “help” an Orthodox woman?

“I don’t shake hands,” she says. Her culture doesn’t allow her to touch a man. Her elders watch over her like a hawk. Her Bensonhurst community even has its own NYPD-sanctioned neighborhood watch, and one of those over-zealous watchers (Liev Schreiber) watches Avigail with love, and a lot of suspicion. Even passing off Fioravante as a masseuse with hands “that bring magic to the lonely” is going to be tricky.

The ancient Allen gamely makes Murray a doting, baseball-playing father in an interracial marriage full of kids he has to keep entertained. Thirty years ago, he’d have made Murray’s “new pimp throws around the cash” scenes very “Broadway Danny Rose” and funnier.

Bob Balaban is amusing as Murray’s trusted but irritable lawyer, Vergara and Stone set off comic sparks. But Turturro winds up playing the sad straight man in his own comedy. And he and Paradis play this too somber. Sex scenes are more explicit than silly. The movie gropes around for a lighter touch.

Moments like when the Orthodox religious police nab Murray for an inquisition are meant to play like farce, but the often-scary Schreiber lends that an alarming theocratic, fascist feel. Seriously, New York allows “religious police” to enforce dogma?

But by then “Fading Gigolo” has mimicked its title and faded, a failure in tone, a romantic comic juggling act where every dropped ball kills another potential laugh in a movie that desperately needs them.