Bryant Grad Aids in Evaluating Qualifications Of Schools Seeking Accreditation

By Douglas Fisher

Bryant College accredited by the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in 1954 is currently aiding that organization by assigning staff members to take part in the evaluation of other institutions of higher learning which are seeking either accreditation or a reaffirmation of accreditation.

Dr. Charles H. Russell, Vice-President for Academic Affairs at Bryant, recently joined Dr. Nils Sahlin, President of Quinipiac College and Richard Bond, Dean of Westbrook Junior College in an accreditation visit to Newton Junior College. Their assignment was to observe the operations of the college and report their findings to the Commission on Higher Learning of NEASC. Dr. Russell will soon serve as Chairman of the team that will visit Dean Jr. College in April for the purpose of reaffirming accreditation.

In response to the question concerning what the committees of men are looking for upon their inspection of the campuses, Dr. Russell remarked that it was their task to determine whether the college is performing satisfactorily.

Moreover, he stated that they will decide whether the "faculty is qualified, courses are well designed and taught, quality of administration, and the financial affairs of the institution." In other words, they are to "view the whole range of operation and its physical facilities."

The fact that NEASC has summoned the aid of the faculty and administration is perhaps a vote of confidence in Bryant and its increasing stature in the business world.

A fantasy of modern life with Christian allegory undertones, the play is described by Albee as "campy," a beat generation word that means many things. What it means in the play "Malcolm" is for each viewer to guess.

The story is relatively simple: Malcolm represents pure innocence, the innocence of youth. His adversary, the invisible ruler of the city, must manipulate, represents what a major critic described as "the influence in human relations."

Cox wants to disrupt Malcolm's innocence, to corrupt him by exposing him to life. Accordingly, he forces Malcolm out into the world, into the lives of various couples whom Cox has previously corrupted. But in each couple at least one member is infatuated with Malcolm. This infatuation is sometimes homosexual, sometimes heterosexual. Cox, however, observing all of this, will not let Malcolm stick anywhere. Through various manipulations he breaks up each relationship and moves Malcolm toward his ultimate destruction. For not only does Cox want to destroy Malcolm, he also wants to prevent any of his other subjects from achieving any meaningful relationship.

The Christian allegory is made apparent by Malcolm's golden bench, symbolizing a throne; by his continual reference to his father, who many believed ever existed; by his being called a prince, Malcolm, then, is Christ, an ineffectual Christ in a "God is Dead" world, a symbol of hope, but ultimately a failure.

Malcolm was played by Frank Kohanski; Professor Cox, Steve Crowly; Kirkpatrick, Bruce Broadbent; Laureen Raphaelson, Beth Whitmore; Madame Girard, Carla Jeanne Hyde; Girard Girard, Ken Cohen; Elvis Brace, Sandy Miller; Jerome Bruce, Bruce Broadbent; Gus, Bob Stone; Melba, Laurie Levine; and, Miles & Doctor, Herman Reynolds.

Thanks are to be extended to the Bryant Christian Association for the dinner they sponsored for the Masquers on February 1. During this dinner there was discussion about the play.

Thanks are also to be extended to the entire cast of Malcolm for the fine job that they did, to the loyal Masquers who worked behind the scenes, and to our director, Mr. John LaFontaine, for his loyal support.

Bryant Students Show Disrespect

R. Scott Hamilton

While recently attending a Bryant basketball game, I was given positive proof that "empty barrels make the most noise." During the entire course of the game, several students were more intent on insisting Coach Duffy than watching the players on the court. This type of behavior on the part of these students displayed their total lack of understanding, ethics, and, most of all, appreciation.

Coach Duffy produced one of the most successful teams in the history of Bryant sports during the 1965-66 season. Coach Duffy and his team have an unpretentious season so far this year. What more can anyone ask of a coach?
Oh, I'm sure that some of these unethical lip-flappers will say, "it's just the players and not the coach who win the games." Well, as an athlete, let me say that it's the players and not the coach who win the games.

The Brothers of A.O. are really excited over the pledge class we have received this year. The pledge class consists of fourteen new able bodied men who are willing to work for the fraternity (We're on the rise). The pledges are John Hachamnou, Paul Popalardo, Vincent Garzelli, Arthur Clark, Stephen Beker, Daniel Kojooian, Todd Meirose, Alan Potter, Robert St. Jean, Bruce Kline, John Kordell, Robert Walsh, John Strovis, and Dwight Higley.

This year A0 is planning to break its old basketball record of 0-4. We are anticipating a 1-7 record with a lot of heart and effort. We will also be entering the bowling league this year.

Congratulations to "Rabbit" on receiving the top fraternity average with a 2.5.

The brothers had a great time at the Blue Moon Hotel, 175 Sles St. (Reasonable Rates) over the recent vacation. Roy Roy had to leave the Blue Moon for a few days to interest his marks, but returned in time to set a new world's record for the nightly run between the Blue Moon and Haven Boys.

By the way, Roy Roy is no longer infatuated, he's now in love. O.K. (1967) found is impossible to yest the A.O. boys under the table. Stanley, go walking in the rain much? Wayne, congratulations on your recent placing to Carlene Nappellosi. Carlene has the only car on campus with crosseyed headlights.

The brothers of A. O. would like to welcome to Bryant College Con-eral Ronal Demuzo who is an honorary brother and legendary leader of the famous Satan's Breed.

Jack got engaged to Maureen. Stan, don't forget the $6.00 you will owe Roy on March 4th.
