BROWN TO PURCHASE CAMPUS

A conditional agreement by Brown University to purchase the land and buildings of Bryant College on the east side of Providence was announced last Thursday by the presidents of both institutions.

A joint statement by President Ray L. Heffner of Brown University and President Schuyler Hoslett of Bryant College said the agreement is conditional on Bryant's ability to obtain favorable financing by next July 31 to begin construction of its new campus in Smithfield.

They said the price of $5,000,000 was agreed on for the 26 buildings and 10.9 acres of land owned outright by Bryant. Not included are buildings used by Bryant under leases (i.e. maintenance, Barber, Comery, Parks and Scott.)

Bryant College will continue to use its east side facilities under a lease arrangement with Brown until construction is completed of the new campus in Smithfield.

Dr. Hoslett said the decision to sell Bryant's east side properties followed the outright gift of 220 acres of land in Smithfield by Dr. Earl S. Tupper, former president of the Tupper Corporation, plastics manufacturers.

Land which would be acquired by Brown in the purchase includes the athletic field (about 122,000 square feet) tennis courts measuring 14,000 square feet, and a parking area for 182 cars. The tennis courts are at the corner of Hope and Benevolent Streets and on Young Orchard Avenue.

The buildings which would be involved in the transaction are on Young Orchard Avenue and on Benevolent, Charles Field, East George, Hope, Cooke and Power Streets.

Bryant College was founded in Providence in 1863 and has been granting degrees since 1916 under authorization granted by the State Legislature. The college became a non-profit institution operating under a board of trustees by a special act of the Legislature in 1949.

Our current enrollment is 1,900 students, including 1,300 men and 600 women, and 1,400 evening division students. Twenty-six states and seven foreign countries are represented in Bryant's enrollment.

Brown University, the seventh oldest college in America, was founded in 1764 in Warren, R. I., as Rhode Island College. It was moved to its present site in Providence in 1770 and became Brown University in 1804 in recognition of the generosity of Nicholas Brown, a son of one of the founders of the college, a member of the Class of 1786 and then treasurer of the college.

Brown University has approximately 2,700 men undergraduates in The College, 1,050 women undergraduates in Pembroke—the women's coordinate college in Brown and some 1,500 graduate students.

Its main campus on College Hill is 40 acres in size. In addition, Brown has 52 acres used for recreation and athletics and 475 acres in its Mount Hope Grant in Bristol, R. I.

Big sisters Maileen Lokich and Kathy Zawasky along with their charges look on attentively as a printing operation at the Providence Journal is explained to them. Youth Guidance members with their kids made two separate trips to the plant to view the operations of the newspaper.

Dr. Hoslett to Address Students

Bryant College Paradox

Since the Spring of 1967, Bryant has joined the ranks of business schools that can rightfully be called hypocritical. Wearing a name as a cloak of respectability, the Faculty Federation has become firmly entrenched on the campus, and despite the presence of an alleged ideal, by any other name, it is still a Union.

In years past, Unions had their function during an era when management was tight-fisted and tyrannical. However, times have changed, and with only a few exceptions, unions have outworn their usefulness. They serve, but one purpose only, and that is to perpetuate the current price, wage spiral that is eating away at our economy, and our dollar.

At Bryant, my point is yet to be proved inasmuch as contract talks have yet to begin between the teachers and the administration, and I believe, quite frankly, that a lot of high ideals will be traded for a picket sign.

So far, there has been nowhere near enough change to be considered notable, and yet it seems that those changes which have occurred have been initiated by the Student Senate, with the Federation serving as a veto bloc between approval and disapproval. From the point of view of the students, what the Federation has provided is a protection device for those teachers who just haven't got it.

It would be totally unfair to merely condemn, and put men out of a job, but unfortunately with so much of other people's money invested in this college situation, proper procedures should be taken to improve our academic community.

To expect the best for Bryant might be difficult under present circumstances; however, we can take hope in the future by realizing that some day discussion, communication, and progress can take place without a policeman around to insure that it happens.

How Many More?

Last week another life was lost. Just another life. Just another man. Up to our necks in the mire, we are quickly losing our vision that once made us great. We are a forgotten people, and yet, we number two hundred million strong, able, free people.

Too many times now we have asked for peace and love, and too many times now, we have been denied. There exists a detachment here that can weaken the very strength of that one ideal that we hold dear.

So many have died in vain, not fully knowing why or understanding why, or believing why. We pretend indifference as long as we can, or at least until the day finally comes when we are affected with a tragic and senseless loss.

Last week, a good friend of Bryant College became just another soldier who met his fate. But, must this tragedy be multiplied by our indifference to war? We ask ourselves why, and we sit, and we talk, and we discuss, and we ponder, and yet we remain immobile to the truth that some things that we do are so very wrong.

We turn instead to the academic issue and say we must continue, and yet this adds to the wrong. Must we remain in the clutches of the "status quo"?

We should look to reconcile our hate and learn of love. We should turn away from war and embrace peace. We should search for truth where none has been. And with these thoughts, we send a hope that he might find the truth, the peace, and the love of mankind that he did not find in life.

Student of the Week

Ed Shapanka

By Bill Mitchell

This week's student is a senior in the accounting program — his name — Ed Shapanka. Besides being able to maintain a good average, Ed finds time to participate in "almost everything" here at Bryant. He is currently the treasurer of the Student Senate, listed in Who's Who, a member of the ARCHWAY staff, a member of Masquer's (remember the great lover of last semester), Chorus, Orchestra (baritone horn), Hillel, American Marketing Association, a member of the Tennis Team and Letterman's Club. Added to this list Ed has also participated as a member of the Board of Directors of Delta Omega and was also the Chairman for the United Fund Drive on campus.

When Ed manages to find some free time, he likes to spend it reading, participating in sports, listening to music or traveling.

Being an active member of the Senate, I asked Ed just what he thought has happened to the Senate since he has been at Bryant; his answer, "It is doing something, especially in relation to what it has done in the past." Ed feels that the Senate is now ready to give responsibility to the student — perhaps even more than he is willing to accept as evidenced Rebuttal: PR Works For You!

To the Editor:
Dear Dusty:

"YES, YOU HAVE A PUBLIC RELATIONS DIRECTOR REPRESENTING THE STUDENTS OF BRYANT!"

And if you wish to see the many, many items appearing in the local newspapers publicizing the constructive things done by Bryant College students come to the Public Relations Office on the Second Floor of the Administration Building, where they are proudly displayed on the office bulletin board.

Especially the fine work done by the Youth Guidance Group ... to wit: a half page feature in the Evening Bulletin and many other pictures and stories all through the current semester; also pictures of the Heart Fund Drive complete with enthusiastic Bryant students. We could add scores of such items that have seen the light of day in the local press and in the newspapers of the 26 states and 7 foreign countries that our news office services daily on behalf of Bryant College students.

Dusty, please come up and see us sometime. We are delighted to serve the Bryant Students who are by far among the most responsible and most enthusiastic contributors to good works and community life not only in this community but wherever they live.

Of all the campus publics we serve, none is served with greater devotion and with more successful results than our splendid student body. Come and see!

Most cordially,
(Mrs.) Gertrude Meth Hochberg
Director of Public Relations
